

SPECIAL REPORT

OCTOBER / NOVEMBER / DECEMBER 2003 NO. 14

Petitions by
Verizon Florida Inc., Sprint-Florida Inc., and BellSouth Telecommunications, Inc.
to reduce intrastate network access fees in a revenue-neutral manner

During the 2003 Regular Session, the Florida Legislature enacted the Tele-Competition Innovation and Infrastructure Enhancement Act (the Act). The Act, which became effective May 23, 2003, allows incumbent local exchange companies (ILECs) to petition the Florida Public Service Commission (PSC) to reduce the fees charged to long distance companies (intrastate access charges). If the PSC approves a petition, the ILEC can offset the lost access fee revenue with an increase in local monthly phone rates. The revenues associated with an increase in local service may not exceed the revenues lost through a decrease in intrastate switched access revenues.

On August 27, 2003, Verizon Florida, Inc. (Verizon), Sprint-Florida, Inc. (Sprint), and BellSouth Telecommunications, Inc. (BellSouth) filed separate petitions with the PSC to reduce intrastate access fees and increase basic local phone rates. Subsequently, each company filed an amended petition after the PSC decided that the earlier petitions did not comply with time lines laid out by the Legislature. Each of the amended petitions filed by the carriers includes a plan to decrease intrastate access rates and increase basic local rates for residential and single-line business customers, without impacting each company's total revenues.

Although the proposed rate changes outlined in each petition vary among carriers, each company plans to implement its total proposed increase in three increments. BellSouth, however, proposes to increase its business monthly rates in two increments.

Verizon proposes an increase in monthly basic residential local services rates of $1.58 in the first year, $1.58 the second year, and $1.57 the third year to offset its proposed reduction in access fee revenue. Sprint proposes a $2.95 monthly increase in basic residential local service rates the first year and increases of $2.75 and $1.16 the second and third years, respectively.

BellSouth proposes to offset its proposed reduction in access revenue by increasing its monthly basic residential local rates by $1.39 the first year, $1.38 the second year, and $1.09 the third year. In addition, BellSouth alternatively proposes to increase its rates by $1.25 the first and second year with a final incremental increase of $1.00 in the third year.

The PSC is conducting a series of hearings throughout Florida to obtain public testimony on the proposals filed by the three telecommunications companies. One of the factors the law requires the Commission to consider is whether granting the petitions will help to create a more attractive competitive local telephone market for the benefit of residential consumers. As such, the PSC is particularly interested in consumer testimony on whether, and to what extent, there is competition in the area for basic local telephone service and what types of competition the consumer would like to see. In making remarks, it would be helpful if consumers would address the extent of competition already existing in his/her area; whether he/she believes that there are other options available for local telephone service; and whether he/she would like more options or services than are currently available to him/her and what those types of services might be.

The PSC will have 90 days to issue a final order on the petitions. During this 90-day period, an evidentiary hearing will be held, currently scheduled to begin December 10, 2003. If the petitions are approved, the companies will file tariffs to implement the first year's rate changes. The PSC will then have 45 days in which to approve the filed tariffs.

Residential and small business customers affected by the proposed changes are encouraged to attend the hearings.
