Dear Madame Chair:

You may recall my calling you a couple of months ago to discuss the new "telephone bill" legislation passed this year.

In our conversation you confirmed that this bill was different from last year's as it required a PSC hearing and determination. As you have now received the rate increase request, I wanted to remind you that the bill passed based on the assumption that there would be a complete and objective hearing. Whether the rate increase is approved or disapproved, the hearing must be fair and impartial.

I am sure you and your fellow commissioners are prepared to do just that.

Good luck!

Sincerely,

JS/cne

I wish to protest about the telephone rate hike passed by the state. This is a blatant rip-off for customers who won't benefit from lower long distance. I don't use long distance service and feel that I shouldn't subsidize people who do. The vote on this increase was paid for by lobbyists of the phone company.

BellSouth is also violating rules about implementing the increase.

Please stop this outright money grab by the phone company.

I object to the rate increase being considered by BellSouth. One of the advantages stated for this was a lower long distance rate. I don't use BellSouth for my long distance service neither do many others of my family members and acquaintances. How is this supposed to help us? My long distance rate now is only 5 cents per minute with GTC Telecom. I doubt it would go lower than this with BellSouth.

Comments:

I am very concern about the raise on basic residential phone rates that BellSouth has filed with the Florida Public Service Commission. Since our own Legislature laked the backbone to vote down the bill promoted and sold by the phone company lobbyists during the past seccion of the Legislature; I am conuting on the Florida Public Service Commission to protect our interests as consumers.

I also respectfully request that the FPSC conduct pubic hearings on this matter thruout the state; so that those of us with limited resources can voice our opinions without having to travel to Tallahassee.

From what I have read and understand of the bad anti-consumer bill that the phone companies and their lobbyists ramed thru our legislature; the phone companies claim that the base rate increases to us (the consumers) should be offset by a reductions on the long distances charges from these same phone companies. This does not make any sence. Most consumer on fixed or limited income already control their long distance expense by either not making long distance calls and/or keeping them to the absolute minimum. None of us can "control" the basic phone charge (if we want to have a phone). Many of us cannot afford the rumored 40% increased in basic phone service that is being considered. WE NEED THE FPSC TO PROTECT US!

Thanking you in advance for any attention you may give to this e-mail; and looking foward to a public hearing close to the Ormond Beach/Daytona Beach area, sincerey, Vicente A. Ramirez

Florida Public Service Commission
CHAIRMAN JABER

Dear Chair Jaber:

It was no great surprise to read in the news media this week that Verizon, Sprint, and Bellsouth would like to raise basic residential phone rates by huge percentages. The only surprising thing was the speed in which those phone companies filed rate increase requests with the Florida Public Service Commission. As a state senator I and a few of my colleagues voted against the bill that opened the door for these applications to be filed but it unfortunately passed any way. The dire warnings we and consumer groups issued about the bill have, sadly and all too quickly, come true.

I voted against this bill precisely because I expected the phone companies to raise rates, which they are now attempting to do. Contrary to what they promised during legislative committee meetings the phone service providers intend to do this over the next two years, not the three the legislature was led to believe. Additionally, instead of expanding the Life Line Program for low-income individuals as promised, the phone companies merely are "freezing" rates for them. It seems that the huge amount of money spent on lobbyists by the phone companies to get this bill passed will be returned many-fold in potential revenues if these increases are ultimately approved.

The only saving grace in this sad affair is that Commission must approve the rate applications. Because rates have the potential to increase 40% or more for basic service I am asking that the Commission hold public hearings in the local communities which will be impacted by these rate increases, not in Tallahassee where the expense of traveling may be too great for most individuals. Phone company executives have the deep pockets to pay for such travel, but not the average phone customer.

Further, I am asking that no limitations be placed on the public's ability to review documentation submitted by phone companies to justify their so-called "need" for rate increases. All the facts that pertain to this case should be open and available to the Office of Public Counsel and any

RECEIVED

SEP 08 2003

Florida Public Service Commission
CHAIRMAN JABER

Dear Chairman Jaber:

During the 2003 Regular Session, I voted against Senate Bill 654, the Tele-Competition Innovation and Infrastructure Act (Chapter No. 2003-32).

As a Senator who represents portions of five rural counties in Central Florida, I strongly argued that this legislation was unnecessary and unfair for Florida's rural counties, our aging citizens, and even our young families with limited incomes. The telephone companies promised that SB 654 creates competition. Furthermore, telephone companies offered a reduction in long distance charges as leverage for approval of this legislation. In reality, regardless of SB 654's passage, the telephone companies must reduce their long distance rates to compete with the growing cell phone market. Furthermore, this legislation actually allows the local exchange telecommunications carriers (ILEC) to maintain their monopoly on rural markets.

Accordingly, I am writing to request the Florida Public Service Commission (PSC) consider citizen input at public meetings and complete testimony from the Office of the Public Counsel in the matter of implementation of Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. The PSC should consider such testimony through public hearings around the state, and then weigh that testimony with evidence gathered through sufficient discovery, so that the Commission receives enough information to fully address the factors identified in Subsection 364.164 (1).

The Legislature clearly established guidelines which the Commission must consider when reviewing the ILEC's petitions. Per Subsection 364.164 (1), "the commission shall consider whether granting the petition will:

(a) Remove current support for basic local telecommunications services that prevents the creation of a more attractive competitive local exchange market for the benefit of residential consumers.

(b) Induce enhanced market entry.

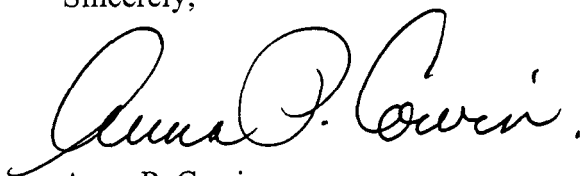

(c) Require intrastate switched network access rate reductions to parity over a period of not less than 2 years or more than 4 years.

(d) Be revenue neutral as defined in subsection (7) within the revenue category defined in subsection (2).

Unsubstantiated assumptions made during the discovery process are costly and unaffordable to our constituents. If the telephone companies prove that raising local phone rates is in the best interest of Floridians, then the companies should be required to provide sufficient information, and do so in a public forum. Legislators are publicly held accountable for their votes, whether they opposed or supported this measure. The Public Service Commission should do no less. When we consider the significant impact of your decisions on limited income Floridians, especially those who do not utilize long distance services, the telephone companies must be held to the same standard of public accountability.

Thank you for your consideration of this request.

Dear Ms. Moses:

Please find enclosed the Facility Use Form for your meeting to be held at Pensacola Junior College on October 13, 2003. After you have reviewed and approved, please sign in the appropriate place and return in the enclosed, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Also, it is a requirement of the college that we have proof of liability insurance coverage. Per our conversation you stated that you would provide a Certificate of Insurance. Please enclose this documentation when returning the Facility Use Form.

It is my understanding that you have requested the following:

- a. Podium with mic on floor level at front of stage
- b. (6) tables set on stage with side tables angled for better view from the audience
- c. Tables should be skirted

You also asked about a tape recorder being plugged into the mic. Our AV staff person is out of the office until next week. When he returns, I will check on this possibility and let you know.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to give me a call at 850/484-2020.

The hearings have been scheduled by the Commission in response to a recent request by the Office of Public Counsel to conduct public hearings throughout Florida based upon petitions filed by three telecommunications companies serving Florida – Verizon, Sprint and BellSouth – proposing to rebalance their local telephone rates and switched access rates as a result of the new Act, which was just enacted in May 2003.

Also, in today's vote, the Commission required Verizon, Sprint and BellSouth to place quarter page advertisements in the newspaper of general circulation in the following cities – Miami, Ft. Lauderdale, West Palm Beach, Jacksonville, Panama City, Pensacola, Orlando, Tallahassee, Ocala, Ft. Myers, Tampa, St. Petersburg, Punta Gorda and Sarasota – at least one week prior to the actual date of the hearings to inform customers of the hearing in their area.

The Commission encourages any member of the public who may be interested in this important issue to attend the hearings.

Dear Commissioner Seijas:

I am in receipt of your fax enclosing your statement issued yesterday asking the Public Service Commission (PSC) to conduct a public hearing in Miami-Dade County on the recent filings made by BellSouth, Verizon and Sprint seeking rate adjustments pursuant to the Tele-Competition Innovation and Infrastructure Act (the Act). Please be advised that the staff recommendation voted on by the PSC Commissioners at the September 16th agenda conference only included sites where dates of hearings had already been identified, notice had been given and locations found. There will be a public hearing in Miami to be held on October 30, 2003. Formal notice will be given shortly.

I appreciate your feedback on this issue. Please be assured that the PSC will conduct a thorough hearing on these petitions and will carefully analyze whether the requests will achieve the goals of the Act.

The attached statement contains some of the concerns that I have and that were shared with the rest of the Miami-Dade County community at a press conference held today.

I look forward to seeing the Public Service Commission in Miami-Dade County to hear first hand the residents' concerns regarding the telephone rate hikes.

Let me know if I can be of help.

September 17th, 2003
Statement Issued by County Commissioner Natacha Seijas

The Public Service Commission is responsible for regulating utilities in this State.

The (5) five-member Commission is appointed by the Governor.

One Goal of the Commission is to "ensure that the regulatory process results in fair and reasonable rates..."

Depending on which phone company they use, Miami-Dade County residents could see their telephone bills increase by as much as $6.86 per month.

All the companies have requested to eventually phase out the $13.50-a-month subsidy for low-income residents. Depending on the company, it could be in two years or four years.

The Office of Public Counsel has requested that the Public Service Commission conduct public hearings around the State before acting on the rate increase petitions filed by Bellsouth, Verizon and Sprint.

Considering the dramatic increases that are being requested, I want to thank the Office of Public Counsel for recognizing the need for public input before the PSC takes action on these petitions.

On September 16th the PSC issued a notice of the State Hearings: They are visiting Duval County, Charlotte County, Broward County, Hillsborough County, Orange County and Escambia County.

Last time I checked, Miami-Dade County with a population of over 2.3 million people, is home to roughly 14% of the population of Florida. I believe the Public Service Commission is denying the opportunity for public input to a major portion of the state by not having a meeting in Miami-Dade.

As for one meeting in Broward County to cover the South Florida region, it should be noted that it is almost impossible due to traffic congestion to get from anywhere in Miami-Dade to downtown Fort Lauderdale by 6:30 pm.

I am asking the Chairperson Lila Jaber of the PSC to immediately add another meeting in Miami-Dade to allow for our public to give input into this major decision.

The Honorable Juan Carlos Zapata
Florida House of Representatives

Dear Representative Zapata:

Thank you for your letter regarding the recent filings made by BellSouth, Verizon and Sprint seeking rate adjustments pursuant to the Tele-Competition Innovation and Infrastructure Act (the Act). With regard to your first concern that the PSC hold a service hearing in Miami-Dade County, the staff recommendation only included sites where dates were already identified, notice had already been given and locations found. There will be a public hearing in Miami to be held on October 30, 2003. Formal notice will be given shortly.

In your letter you also suggest that the PSC not consider the filings until a permanent Public Counsel is appointed. Pursuant to Section 364.164(1) of the Act, the PSC is required to issue its final order granting or denying the petitions within 90 days of the filings. Therefore, we must schedule our decision in this case to conform with this statutory deadline. However, even though Mr. Shreve has retired as Public Counsel, let me assure you that Charlie Beck, the Interim Public Counsel appointed by the Joint Legislative Auditing Committee, has been actively involved in these proceedings. In addition, AARP is represented in these cases by Michael Twomey, and we have been advised by Attorney General Charlie Crist that his office will be monitoring our proceedings. I am confident that our citizens will be ably represented by these counsel.

I appreciate your feedback on these important proceedings. Please be assured that the PSC will conduct a thorough hearing on these three petitions and will carefully analyze whether the requests will achieve the goals of the Act.

Florida Public Service Commission
CHAIRMAN JABER

Dear Chairwoman Jaber,

On November 25, 2003, the Public Service Commission (PSC) will be considering a telecommunication rate increase. I have two major concerns that pertain to this proposal, which I strongly believe need to be addressed.

On staff's recommendation, the PSC recently decided to reduce the number of public hearings from fourteen (14) to seven (7) statewide. In doing so, the public hearing in Miami-Dade County was eliminated. As the largest county in Florida, Miami-Dade County should be an obvious location for a public hearing. There are tens of thousands of individuals who will be directly affected and should have the opportunity to voice their concerns locally. I respectfully request that you and the commissioners reinstate the Miami-Dade public hearing.

In addition, I am concerned that the citizens will not have established counsel representing their views. In June, our previous Public Counsel, Mr. Jack Shreve retired. Pursuant to section 350.061, F.S., the Legislative Auditing Committee is responsible for the appointment of Florida's Public Counsel. Since the Public Counsel is charged with representing the citizens' rights on this proposed rate increase, I would feel more comfortable if the proposal were considered after we have appointed a permanent Public Counsel.

I hope that you will give these two requests great consideration. Thank you for your assistance in advance. I look forward to working with you in the future.

Honorable Lila Jaber
Public Service Commission
2540 Shumard Oak Boulevard
Tallahassee, Florida 32399

Dear Chairwoman Jaber:

I am writing to express my concern regarding the Public Service Commission's recent decision to exclude Miami-Dade County as a site for the upcoming public hearings concerning the statewide telephone rate hike proposal. As a representative of a large sector of constituents, I feel compelled to inform you that the decision to omit Miami-Dade County as a venue for the hearings is perplexing and troublesome given the potential lack of input afforded to Miami-Dade County citizens.

I respectfully submit that holding a public hearing within the largest and most populous county in the state is only logical and, furthermore, necessary to offer Miami-Dade residents the opportunity to attend and voice their concerns over the proposed rate increase. The exclusion of Miami-Dade County will result in a serious inconvenience to numerous residents of this county wishing to participate in the public dialogue.

As officials with statewide mandates and duties, it is our obligation to ensure that all Floridians are presented equal access to the democratic process and that their voices are duly represented. Thus, the omission of Miami-Dade County as a site for a public hearing violates this fundamental principle of democratic representation and essentially prevents a disproportionately large sector of our state's population from providing feedback.

Thank you in advance for your consideration in this matter. It is my hope we can find a resolution to this predicament in order to afford Miami-Dade citizens an equal opportunity to engage in the public discourse revolving this controversial issue.

Respectfully Submitted,

Re: Public Hearings and Motions to Dismiss in Dockets 030867, 030868 and 030869

Dear Chairman Jaber:

AARP requests that the Commission hold more public service hearings than now scheduled in connection with the delay that hopefully will result from the granting of Public Counsel's Motions to Dismiss the petitions in the above-cited dockets.

AARP appreciates the seven public hearings announced last Tuesday and the additional three scheduled the end of last week. While those ten are welcome, they are still not adequate to give substantially more telephone customers the opportunity of protesting the huge rate increases sought, as well as testifying to the lack of demonstrable benefits to flow to them by the Commission granting these increases. AARP still supports Public Counsel's requested total of 14 hearings and believes recent events should provide you with more time to schedule the remaining hearings.

AARP today filed a motion joining Public Counsel's motions to dismiss all three petitions because they fail to comply with the most fundamental requirement of the law, namely that parity be reached "over a period of not less than 2 years or more than 4 years." AARP fully agrees with Public Counsel that initial rate increases starting January 1, 2004, followed by the second and last increase just 12 months later on January 1, 2005 are less than 2 years and, thus, violate the law. AARP also fully agrees with your staff's September 18, 2003 recommendation that you should grant Public Counsel's motions to dismiss with leave to amend. AARP believes your staff has hit the legal nail on the head when they say at page 14 of the recommendation:

The companies engage in a tortured reading of the statute to arrive at the conclusion that the language "over a period of not less than 2 years" really means "over a period of two annual adjustments."

AARP is hopeful you will follow your staff recommendation and grant Public Counsel's motions to dismiss with leave to amend and restart the 90-day statutory clock.

While legally the correct action to take, granting the motions to dismiss and resetting the clock will also allow more time for a myriad of critical activities, not the least of which is the holding of the additional public hearings. The number and timing of the single hearing in the Tampa Bay area illustrates the larger problem.

The Tampa Bay area, as represented by the Tampa - St. Petersburg - Clearwater Metropolitan Statistical Area has in excess of 2.5 million residents. It draws people from the four-county area of Hernando, Hillsborough, Pasco and Pinellas Counties and is the 21st largest population center in the nation. For this area the Commission has scheduled a single hearing in Tampa on October 3 and at 1:00 p.m. While this area might look compact on a map, the distances from Clearwater and St. Petersburg to Tampa are substantial and commute times are very lengthy, especially at rush hour.

AARP would urge the Commission to reschedule the Tampa hearing until a reasonable time after the close of business (at 6 or 6:30 p.m. like at the other hearing locations) and to schedule an additional hearing in the St. Petersburg area, again at 6 or 6:30 in the evening.

Lastly, AARP would note that the Commission's own website includes a "press release" that gives the public hearing locations, dates and times, but that fails to inform consumers of the level of rate increases sought, which amounts are known to the penny. This release fails to inform consumers of the detriments they face and AARP would urge the Commission to modify its press releases and subsequent notices to include the level of monthly rate increases being sought. Commission staff, at the urging of AARP, recently required that the companies include the level of increases being sought in their quarter-page newspaper ads. The text of the newspaper ads, which AARP recommends be used in Commission notices and future press releases, including those now residing on your home page, is on the attached page.

AARP looks forward to addressing the Commission next Tuesday and will appreciate the scheduling of additional public hearings.

Sincerely,

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

The Florida Public Service Commission will conduct a public hearing to receive customer testimony regarding the petitions filed by Verizon, Sprint, and BellSouth pursuant to section 364.164, Florida Statutes, referred to as the Tele-Competition Innovation and Infrastructure Enhancement Act. All customers of these companies are invited to attend the hearing at the following time and location:

Date:

Time:

Location:

Each company proposes a revenue-neutral plan consisting of increases to connection charges, basic local residence and single-line business service monthly rates, with an equal amount of reductions in the rates charged long distance providers for access to the companies' networks. Consistent with State law, the reduction to long-distance providers will result in a reduction of in-state, long-distance charges to residence and business customers, including the elimination of up to $ 1.99 per month for "in-state connection charges" on most customers' bills by July 1, 2006. The companies propose to implement these changes in two installments on January 1, 2004 and January 1, 2005.

By law, the Public Service Commission is to consider, along with other factors, whether granting the petition will (1) remove current support for basic local service to create a more attractive competitive local exchange market for the benefit of the companies' residential customers in Florida; (2) induce enhanced market entry; (3) be revenue neutral; and (4) result in reductions of intrastate switched network access rates to parity over a period of not less than 2 years or more than 4 years. The Commission is currently scheduled to render its final Order on these petitions by November 25, 2003.

Among the specific proposals in the petitions are the following increases to basic local residential rates and single-line business rates:

COMPANY NAME	TOTAL PROPOSED 2-YEAR RESIDENTIAL BASIC LOCAL SERVICE INCREASE	TOTAL PROPOSED 2-YEAR SINGLE-LINE BUSINESS INCREASE
VERIZON	$4.61 per month	range from $1.65 to $7.53 per month
SPRINT	$6.86 per month (est.)	range from $4.04 to $10.55 per month
BELLSOUTH	$3.50 or $3.86 per month, depending upon approval of calculation	range from $.52 to $4.45 per month

BellSouth proposes to protect Lifeline participants from increases for four years, Sprint for three years, and Verizon for two years.

MARION COUNTY RISK MANAGEMENT PROCEDURE #B2

STANDARD INSURANCE REQUIREMENTS - USE OF COUNTY FACILITIES

APPROVED - COUNTY ADMINISTRATOR

1. PURPOSE

- 1.1. To protect the County against liabilities which can occur through activities of others permitted in or on government facilities. The County can expect to be included in almost any suit for damages occurring in or on its property - whether or not it has been negligent. The County is self-insured (for the first $100,000) and must pay claims and legal expenses with tax payer money. This procedure is directed toward minimizing this exposure.

2. POLICY

- 2.1. It is recognized that most uses of government facilities are indeed the business of government, with some risk attached. The risk of someone slipping and falling while in the County Courthouse, or being injured while walking through a park are risks which government must accept, and it would be ludicrous to require citizens to provide insurance on those occasions. Therefore the policy is to require that insurance be provided ONLY where there is an unusual or inordinate risk presented by the specific requested use of our facilities.

3. INSURANCE REQUIRED

- 3.1. As outlined above, the permitted user of a government facility will be required to provide proof of insurance as specified under Section 4. "Insurance Specifications" for any of the following type of events or any other event which is deemed to constitute a hazard of similar exposure
  - 3.1.1. Any event with more than 250 people - congregated unless the facility is specifically designed for the expected number of people and type of event being held. May be based on past attendance, event holder estimate, or County estimate

- 3.1.2 Any event involving explosives, e.g. fireworks, etc
- 3.1.3 Any event involving vehicles e.g. tractor pulls, etc
- 3.1.4 Any event involving street closure
- 3.1.5 Any event involving animals
- 3.1.6 Carnivals/Circuses/Fairs
- 3.1.7 Block Parties

4. INSURANCE SPECIFICATIONS

- 4.1. When insurance is required, it must be a general liability policy, written by an insurer authorized to do business in Florida, naming the County as an "Additional Insured" and including coverage for premises, operations, products and completed operations, contractual liability and broad form property damage, and personal injury, with per occurrence combined single limits of at least $200,000. A Certificate of Insurance attesting to this must be provided to and maintained in the responsible department.

5. CO-SPONSORED/SPONSORED EVENTS

- 5.1. Events co-sponsored by the County and/or where fees are waived, shall not be relieved of these insurance requirements.
- 5.2. The County's self-insurance and excess liability insurance will apply to department-approved events conducted by the department's own personnel.

6. AUTHORITY

- 6.1. The County shall designate the employee(s) who have the authority to grant use of the facility(s) under their control, and who are responsible for implementing this policy. Where there is a question on this policy or its specific application, the County Administrator shall have the final decision.

7. RISK MANAGEMENT

- 7.1. While not a part of the routine process under this procedure, Risk Management may be consulted regarding the need for insurance, or to review the Certificate provided by the user. Similarly, consultation may be obtained regarding appropriate precautions to be taken.

8. RELIEF OF LIABILITY

- 8.1. These requirements shall not relieve or limit the liability of the special event holder in any way, nor does the County in any way warrant that the insurance described herein is adequate to serve the special events organization's needs.
- 8.2. Insurance provided under these requirements shall be considered primary, and any insurance or self insurance carried by the County as excess.

Attn: Ms. Becky Liner

Re: PSC Inquiry No. 560218C

Dear Senator Graham:

The following information is being provided in response to your September 29, 2003, correspondence regarding Ms. Rose Weinstock's concerns with BellSouth increasing local telephone rates.

As contemplated in Section 364.164., Florida Statutes, titled "Competitive Market Enhancement," the three largest incumbent local exchange companies (ILECs), including BellSouth, filed petitions with the Florida Public Service Commission (FPSC). The petitions seek a reduction in the rates long distance companies pay for local connections (intrastate switched network access rate) with a collateral increase in local monthly telephone charges in what the petitions allege is a revenue-neutral manner. The FPSC is required to issue its final order granting or denying the petitions within 90 days of filing. In reaching its decision, the FPSC must consider specific criteria that are outlined in the Florida Statutes. The Commission, the Office of Public Counsel, as well as all other interested parties will be evaluating the petitions as they relate to all the criteria outlined in the Florida Statutes. In an effort to provide telephone consumers an opportunity to express their views, the Commission is conducting public hearings in 14 Florida cities in October, November and December. The attached Special Report, prepared by FPSC staff, provides a greater level of detail on the petitions filed and the public hearings. Under the current schedule, a final order on this matter should be issued in late December 2003.

Ms. Weinstock's comments are appreciated and will be placed in the docket files (Docket Nos. ~~030867-TL~~; 030868-TL; 030869-TL) as correspondence which will be available for review by all interested parties.

If you have any questions, please contact our Public Information Office at 413-6482.

Dear Ms. Ms. Mangus:

CHAIRMAN JABER

Dear Chairman Jaber:

AARP requests that the Commission hold more public service hearings than now scheduled in connection with the delay that hopefully will result from the granting of Public Counsel's Motions to Dismiss the petitions in the above-cited dockets.

AARP appreciates the seven public hearings announced last Tuesday and the additional three scheduled the end of last week. While those ten are welcome, they are still not adequate to give substantially more telephone customers the opportunity of protesting the huge rate increases sought, as well as testifying to the lack of demonstrable benefits to flow to them by the Commission granting these increases. AARP still supports Public Counsel's requested total of 14 hearings and believes recent events should provide you with more time to schedule the remaining hearings.

AARP today filed a motion joining Public Counsel's motions to dismiss all three petitions because they fail to comply with the most fundamental requirement of the law, namely that parity be reached "over a period of not less than 2 years or more than 4 years." AARP fully agrees with Public Counsel that initial rate increases starting January 1, 2004, followed by the second and last increase just 12 months later on January 1, 2005 are less than 2 years and, thus, violate the law. AARP also fully agrees with your staff's September 18, 2003 recommendation that you should grant Public Counsel's motions to dismiss with leave to amend. AARP believes your staff has hit the legal nail on the head when they say at page 14 of the recommendation:

The companies engage in a tortured reading of the statute to arrive at the conclusion that the language "over a period of not less than 2 years" really means "over a period of two annual adjustments."

AARP is hopeful you will follow your staff recommendation and grant Public Counsel's motions to dismiss with leave to amend and restart the 90-day statutory clock.

While legally the correct action to take, granting the motions to dismiss and resetting the clock will also allow more time for a myriad of critical activities, not the least of which is the holding of the additional public hearings. The number and timing of the single hearing in the Tampa Bay area illustrates the larger problem.

The Tampa Bay area, as represented by the Tampa - St. Petersburg - Clearwater Metropolitan Statistical Area has in excess of 2.5 million residents. It draws people from the four-county area of Hernando, Hillsborough, Pasco and Pinellas Counties and is the 21st largest population center in the nation. For this area the Commission has scheduled a single hearing in Tampa on October 3 and at 1:00 p.m. While this area might look compact on a map, the distances from Clearwater and St. Petersburg to Tampa are substantial and commute times are very lengthy, especially at rush hour.

AARP would urge the Commission to reschedule the Tampa hearing until a reasonable time after the close of business (at 6 or 6:30 p.m. like at the other hearing locations) and to schedule an additional hearing in the St. Petersburg area, again at 6 or 6:30 in the evening.

Lastly, AARP would note that the Commission's own website includes a "press release" that gives the public hearing locations, dates and times, but that fails to inform consumers of the level of rate increases sought, which amounts are known to the penny. This release fails to inform consumers of the detriments they face and AARP would urge the Commission to modify its press releases and subsequent notices to include the level of monthly rate increases being sought. Commission staff, at the urging of AARP, recently required that the companies include the level of increases being sought in their quarter-page newspaper ads. The text of the newspaper ads, which AARP recommends be used in Commission notices and future press releases, including those now residing on your home page, is on the attached page.

AARP looks forward to addressing the Commission next Tuesday and will appreciate the scheduling of additional public hearings.

Sincerely,

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

The Florida Public Service Commission will conduct a public hearing to receive customer testimony regarding the petitions filed by Verizon, Sprint, and BellSouth pursuant to section 364.164, Florida Statutes, referred to as the Tele-Competition Innovation and Infrastructure Enhancement Act. All customers of these companies are invited to attend the hearing at the following time and location:

Date:

Time:

Location:

Each company proposes a revenue-neutral plan consisting of increases to connection charges, basic local residence and single-line business service monthly rates, with an equal amount of reductions in the rates charged long distance providers for access to the companies' networks. Consistent with State law, the reduction to long-distance providers will result in a reduction of in-state, long-distance charges to residence and business customers, including the elimination of up to $ 1.99 per month for "in-state connection charges" on most customers' bills by July 1, 2006. The companies propose to implement these changes in two installments on January 1, 2004 and January 1, 2005.

By law, the Public Service Commission is to consider, along with other factors, whether granting the petition will (1) remove current support for basic local service to create a more attractive competitive local exchange market for the benefit of the companies' residential customers in Florida; (2) induce enhanced market entry; (3) be revenue neutral; and (4) result in reductions of intrastate switched network access rates to parity over a period of not less than 2 years or more than 4 years. The Commission is currently scheduled to render its final Order on these petitions by November 25, 2003.

Among the specific proposals in the petitions are the following increases to basic local residential rates and single-line business rates:

COMPANY NAME	TOTAL PROPOSED 2-YEAR RESIDENTIAL BASIC LOCAL SERVICE INCREASE	TOTAL PROPOSED 2-YEAR SINGLE-LINE BUSINESS INCREASE
VERIZON	$4.61 per month	range from $1.65 to $7.53 per month
SPRINT	$6.86 per month (est.)	range from $4.04 to $10.55 per month
BELLSOUTH	$3.50 or $3.86 per month, depending upon approval of calculation	range from $.52 to $4.45 per month

BellSouth proposes to protect Lifeline participants from increases for four years, Sprint for three years, and Verizon for two years.

Miami, FL 33130

Dear Representative Prieguez:

I am in receipt of your letter dated September 19, 2003 expressing your view that the PSC should hold a public hearing in Miami on the recent filings by the three largest local exchange companies pursuant to the Tele-Competition Innovation and Infrastructure Act (the Act). Please be advised that Miami has not been excluded as a venue for public hearings on these filings. The staff recommendation voted on by the PSC on September 16th only included sites where dates of hearings had already been identified, notice had been given and locations found. We do plan to conduct a hearing in Miami on October 30, 2003 at the Crowne Plaza Hotel - Miami International Airport. Formal notice will be given shortly.

I appreciate your feedback on this issue and apologize for any confusion in the scheduling of these hearings. Please be assured that the PSC will conduct a thorough hearing on these petitions and will carefully analyze whether the requests will achieve the goals of the Act.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairwoman Jaber:

Through this letter, I would like to express my dismay for having excluded Miami-Dade County as a site for the upcoming public hearings that the PSC has arranged, regarding the statewide telephone rate hike proposal.

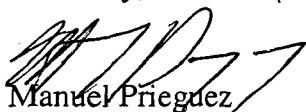

Because Miami-Dade County is the most populated in the State of Florida and my district encompasses sectors from this county, especially, the City of Miami, which is recognized as the 5th poorest city in the U.S, these resident's opinions are crucial to this issue. For that reason, I will strongly encourage your office to hold one of these meetings in the Miami-Dade area, as it was originally scheduled.

As it is mentioned in the press release, the PSC requires for the telecommunication companies to place ads in the local newspapers one week prior to the date of the hearing. Although, there will be no inconvenience for those residents that live on the north side of the state, for residents in the southern areas, mainly the ones that I represent, will not have the resources to cover for the required expenses to travel to the sites of these meetings.

Chairwoman, I feel confident that you will grant the Miami-Dade residents with the opportunity to express their opinions on this complex issue.

I would like to thank you for taking the time into this matter and I look forward for your response.

Cordially,

Public Service Commission

September 30, 2003

The Honorable Rene Garcia
111 NW First Street
Suite 655

Dear Representative Garcia:

I am in receipt of your letter dated September 26, 2003 regarding the public hearing scheduled in Miami on the recent filings by the three largest local exchange companies pursuant to the Tele-Competition Innovation and Infrastructure Act (the Act). Let me clarify that the PSC had not excluded Miami as a site for one of the public hearings on these important petitions. The staff recommendation voted on by the PSC on September 16 only included seven sites where dates of hearings had already been identified, notice had been given and locations found. You are correct that the Miami public hearing has been scheduled for October 30. For your convenience, I have enclosed a chart that indicates the date, time and location of each public hearing that has been scheduled thus far.

As far as attendance at these public hearings, unfortunately, because of the current calendar, all five commissioners are unable to attend each public hearing. For administrative efficiency and to accommodate as many hearings as possible, we have divided up the hearings among the five commissioners so that at least two commissioners will be present at each hearing. On the enclosed chart, I have indicated which commissioners will be present at each hearing. Let me also add that there will be a written transcript of each hearing available for all of the commissioners to read. We believe this process will allow us to maximize the input from consumers around the state.

I appreciate your feedback on this issue. Please be assured that the PSC will conduct a thorough hearing on these petitions and will carefully analyze whether the requests will achieve the goals of the Act.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairperson Jaber:

On behalf of the 25 members of the Miami-Dade County Legislative Delegation, we thank you for reinstating the public hearing in Miami to your Public Service Commission schedule. It is our understanding that plans are to limit the Miami hearing to one (1) PSC member which will hear public comment on proposals by BellSouth, Sprint and Verizon to reduce intra-state switched access charges and increase monthly local service charges scheduled on October 30, 2003.

As the state's largest delegation, we feel strongly that our constituents have the opportunity to voice their support or opposition to these proposals. The fact that our county, the largest in the State, was eliminated after staff recommended reducing the public hearing schedule from fourteen to seven was utterly amazing in light our population. Our constituents represent a significant percentage of those affected by the proposed changes being considered by the PSC and deserve an opportunity not only to be heard but also have the majority of the Commission members present at the hearing.

We urge your consideration in this very sensitive matter and would be pleased to meet with you to further discuss.

Dear Representative Anderson:

Thank you for your letter dated October 1, 2003 requesting that the Commission hold an evening public hearing in the Tampa Bay area on the petitions filed by BellSouth, Verizon and Sprint pursuant to the Tele-Competition Innovation and Infrastructure Act (the Act). As you know, we have scheduled a hearing in Tampa for 1:00 p.m. this Friday, October 3. The Commission normally conducts Friday public hearings in the morning or afternoon for the convenience of consumers. However, I hope you will be pleased to know that we are scheduling a hearing in St. Petersburg on the evening of October 23. Formal notice will be given shortly.

Please be assured that the PSC will conduct a thorough hearing on these three petitions and will carefully analyze whether the requests will achieve the goals of the Act.

Sincerely,

Dear Commissioner Jaber:

I am writing about the public hearings being held by the Public Service Commission regarding the local telephone service rate increases.

There is a real need in the Tampa Bay area for a second public hearing to be scheduled for 6 or 6:30 p.m., to allow the working customers to attend. The downtown Tampa meeting which is scheduled for 1 p.m. on Friday, October 3rd, is inconvenient for many of my constituents.

Please reconsider the locations and times of the future public hearings. The 2.5 million telephone users in the Tampa Bay area deserve the opportunity to be heard at a conveniently scheduled time.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Re: Propose rate increase in basic phone service- Opposition

Dear Chmn. Jaber,

I hope you and the other PSC Commissioner will see fit to reject the proposed rate increase for basic telephone service which appears exorbitant and disadvantageous to local phone users. The increase is supposed to make up for revenue loss for provision of service lines for long distance companies. The companies who request and need the service should bear the cost of purchasing the service, not the local phone service users. It is hoped that competition will eventually reduce costs, however this seems to rarely occur.

Please share this request with your fellow Commissioners and see if you cannot find reasons to bring the interests of the local phone users to the fore.

Respectfully,

This is the estimate that the Chief of Security, Ron Whitaker gave me. The estimate of four hours is for the time that chambers will be in use, and then the time for the two security officers to secure the premises, and shout the building down. I would also like to inform you that the amount of 263.20 is due before the Public Hearing takes place. You may make the check out to The City Of St. St. Petersburg. OCT 2 2003

CHAIRMAN JARPER
Sept. 30th, 2003

Gentlemen:

This is in regards to the request of the telephone companies raising (or wanting to raise) their rates.

I am a 75 plus senior citizen with an income of only social security and modest savings from which I have to pay my taxes and insurances and deductibles. Am sure, that there are thousands of people in my position.

I have enjoyed my phone service for many years, while living in Dade County and now in Palm Beach County. Here now it is more of a life line with friends in Dade and outside the state of Fl. As to my cell phone, I felt the need to get one, as I was stranded on I-95 3 years ago at night with no one stopping to try to help and no FHP in sight. Fortunately I was able to start my car and get home unscathed. I only use the cell phone, when I go more than 20-20 miles away from home and therefore do not even use the 100 minutes (free), that I contracted for. My monthly combined telephone bills should be $52.- without taxes. I understand the need for 911 charge and am for it. However my monthly bill is never under $70 plus Dollars due to the various taxes and dreamed up charges the phone companies can think of. The requested increase in telephone charges adding of 10% or more to my and others bill, also means, that the taxes will also rise.

I guess, I will have to assess my priorities and give u s something, Unfortunately I signed another 2 year contract on my cell phone.

Ever since AT&T was broken up, the telephone service has increased it's rates and getting greedier. So how about breaking up the Baby Bells and let the cell phone fight it out.

Not enough with all that, we may have to face the same thing with FP&I. Just remember what happened in California. It can and will happen here. I sure hope, I won't live to see it.

PLEASE do vote the rate increase down and keep politics out of these issues, it only brings our country down.

Respectfully

Dear Senator Graham:

RECEIVED FPSC
03 OCT -9 AM 10:45
COMMISSION
CLERK

The following information is being provided in response to your September 29, 2003, correspondence regarding Ms. Rose Weinstock's concerns with BellSouth increasing local telephone rates.

As contemplated in Section 364.164., Florida Statutes, titled "Competitive Market Enhancement," the three largest incumbent local exchange companies (ILECs), including BellSouth, filed petitions with the Florida Public Service Commission (FPSC). The petitions seek a reduction in the rates long distance companies pay for local connections (intrastate switched network access rate) with a collateral increase in local monthly telephone charges in what the petitions allege is a revenue-neutral manner. The FPSC is required to issue its final order granting or denying the petitions within 90 days of filing. In reaching its decision, the FPSC must consider specific criteria that are outlined in the Florida Statutes. The Commission, the Office of Public Counsel, as well as all other interested parties will be evaluating the petitions as they relate to all the criteria outlined in the Florida Statutes. In an effort to provide telephone consumers an opportunity to express their views, the Commission is conducting public hearings in 14 Florida cities in October, November and December. The attached Special Report, prepared by FPSC staff, provides a greater level of detail on the petitions filed and the public hearings. Under the current schedule, a final order on this matter should be issued in late December 2003.

Ms. Weinstock's comments are appreciated and will be placed in the docket files (Docket Nos. 030867-TL; 030868-TL; ~~030869-TL~~) as correspondence which will be available for review by all interested parties.

If you have any questions, please contact our Public Information Office at 413-6482.

AARP MOTION TO DISMISS PETITIONS OF BELLSOUTH, VERIZON AND SPRINT FOR FAILURE TO JOIN INDISPENSABLE PARTIES

"BENEFIT OF RESIDENTIAL CONSUMERS" TEST DEMANDS INTRASTATE TOLL RATES RESULTING FROM ACCESS REDUCTIONS BE KNOWN

Section 364.164(1) about as clear as mud. except on point that residential consumers must benefit.

(2) Remove current support for basic local telecommunications services that prevents the creation of a more attractive competitive local exchange market for the benefit of residential consumers.

Unclear language compels examination of legislative intent. Consistent and recurring theme in legislature and company cases that residential customers would have to be shown to "benefit" and might have the opportunity of "breaking even" or even "coming out ahead" on their total monthly phone bills from savings on intrastate toll calls at the lower rates flowed through as a result of the access fee reductions.

Legislative Floor Debate and Comments

In his introduction of the House bill to the full House on April 30, 2003, Representative Mayfield said the following:

Now, members, let me tell you what the bill does not do, does not do. It does not raise rates. It does not contain any mandatory language that requires rate increases. It does not require the PSC to grant any petition from any company unless the Commission is completely satisfied that two conditions are met: Competition has to be created, and residential customers have to benefit. The PSC is going to be responsible for sitting in judgment and making sure that those two things take place before it will grant any petition.

Representative Ritter, co-sponsor of the House bill, said the following the same day:

This bill is better than last year's bill. And I was fortunate to work on that one as well, but this is a better piece of legislation, more consumer friendly, more competitive, will bring competition in, will lower our rates.

And Representative Mayfield did a fabulous job of explaining it, so I just want to say this. My parents live on a fixed income. They are basic single-service residential customers. They are also my most vocal constituents. I am fortunate to have my mother and father living in my district. They know where and when to reach me any day, any hour, any time. If I thought that this bill would raise my parents' local rates, I wouldn't be supporting it here today. This bill does not do that, which is why I'm able to give it my full support today.

Importantly, Rep. Ritter, although she confused the interstate for intrastate rates, stated an argument made constantly by the legislation's proponents:

And as for those of us who live in South Florida and have elderly constituents, first of all, might I suggest that many of our constituents have computers, and they are e-mailing us on many things, including prepaid tuition. And might I also suggest that many of our elderly constituents have families who live out of state, and our constituents make numerous long distance phone calls to those people who live in the Northeast predominantly, and those constituents will see a direct reduction in their phone bills as a result of this piece of legislation.

On the next day when the House voted out the Senate bill, Representative Mayfield said the following in response to a question from Representative Clarke:

Representative Clarke, that's exactly what it does. It moves the political process one step away from rate changes or possible rate changes. It sets forth provisions which will require the Public Service Commission to sit in judgment and to determine two factors: One, will the petition to change rates create competition in the local marketplace; and two, will it be beneficial to residential customers. Before any changes can take place, that has to be determined by the PSC.

Senator Haridopolos, the legislation's Senate sponsor said the following seeking to reassure Senator Campbell that "the Public Service Commission [would] have the authority to deny or condition a rate rebalancing requested by the companies" saying:

Yes, Senator from the 32nd. They have this very strict language in Section 15 of the bill which says that the -- the language as outlined making sure that it must be in the best interests of residential customers and bring local competition to the market before they would look at the rates.

SENATOR CAMPBELL: Are there any other criteria for the petition?

SENATOR KING: Senator Haridopolos to respond.

SENATOR HARIDOPOLOS: Throughout Section 15 they outline, specifically in Sections 1 through 9, each of the criteria. But the main criterion I thought we were looking at most closely would be again for the PSC to decide is there increased competition and will this benefit local customers.

Later, with Senator Siplin:

SENATOR SIPLIN: Thank you. Senator from the 26th, will your bill impose an automatic increase on our customers, on our citizens in the State of Florida?

SENATOR HARIDOPOLOS: That's a very good question. Absolutely not. As I think -- I know you worked on the bill with me. This is very clear that the Public Service Commission has absolute control over costs and prices. And again, to make it clear to the members, the only way that a rate increase could take place is only if the mandates or conditions are met, and that is that it must be in the best interests of residential customers and must bring local competition before they can look at rates.

Later, Senator Haridopolos attempts to reassure Senator Cowin, who is concerned about how granting these petitions will affect her rural constituents, who, she says of: "It's obvious, it seems to me, that their local rates will go up. And I don't know where that competition will come from. Senator Haridopolos responds, saying:

SENATOR HARIDOPOLOS: Senator Cowin, I think you bring up a very legitimate issue and an issue of concern to a lot of persons. I think what gives me comfort as I read through the bill, especially in Section 15, it clearly delineates, it clearly mandates that -- it says to the areas we're hoping to open up to competition that there must be a benefit to residential customers and there must be competition in the market before they can adjust these rates. That's the comfort level that I have in the bill. If there is no competition, if it's not in the best interests of the customer, their rates cannot be increased. And again, we're giving that discretion to the Public Service Commission, and we're going to have persons from the background of Jack Shreve and others defend before the Public Service Commission saying that this is not the right thing to do, raise rates in this area. Also, you have a provision which was not in the previous bill of having the carrier of last resort. That's expanded all the way now to 2009, and I think that will also benefit the rural areas which have legitimate concerns about this bill.

But I think those two key points, saying there must be competition and it must benefit the local customer, is really the key provision. And I think you might see -- it might take longer for competition, but that also means that the rates will not go up in these noncompetitive areas.

Seeking to tie Senator Haridopolos to the specifics of the bill regarding the necessity of finding both actual competition and residential benefits, Senator Cowin puts this question to him:

SENATOR COWIN: A follow-up and then another question. So I guess I'm hearing you say that in a rural community, that if the telephone rates don't have competition or the rates don't go -- and the rates won't go up if there isn't competition for those people that don't have any long distance, or are you looking at it as a total picture and saying overall, there will be parity, because overall the long distance rates -- where is the geographic region for competition for rural communities? Is that a separate entity?

SENATOR HARIDOPOLOS: I believe, Senator Cowin, as the bill clearly states, that what you're going to have here is simply, as the PSC looks at each -- as the company asks in a particular jurisdiction to raise rates, they're going to look at the parameters of the area they're looking at specifically, and they're going to ask those two basic questions, will it benefit customers, and is there true competition. And I think that's what we want to hand to the professionals at the PSC, this very type of question.

Later in the debate, Senator Haridopolos addresses Senator Sebesta's concerns about the extent of the Commission's authority and discretion to approve or reject requested local rate increases, as well as the fate of families earning above the Lifeline eligibility level that might "suffer" as a result of the large rate increases. Senator Sebesta asked:

SENATOR SEBESTA: Thank you, Mr. President. Senator, I voted no on this bill last year and was, as you know, leaning no this year. I've been listening very intently to what you and our fellow Senators have been saying. I guess I have two questions for you.

One, can you tell me beyond a shadow of a doubt that whether these rates will go up or down is subject to the Public Service Commission and how they decide?

SENATOR KING: Senator Haridopolos to respond.

SENATOR HARIDOPOLOS: I can say without a doubt it will be the complete job of the Public Service Commission to decide the rates one way or the other, without question.

SENATOR SEBESTA: One last follow-up, Mr. President?

SENATOR KING: You're recognized.

SENATOR SEBESTA: Thank you, sir. So as you said a minute ago, rates will not be allowed to go up unless there is new competition in the area?

SENATOR KING: Senator Haridopolos to respond.

SENATOR HARIDOPOLOS: That is correct. There must be competition, and it must be in the benefit of residential customers.

SENATOR SEBESTA: I think you just sold me.

SENATOR HARIDOPOLOS: Thank you, sir.

Companies' Petitions and Testimony

19. Making the residential local market more attractive to competitors is not the only benefit the Sprint's residential local service users will experience from granting Sprint's Petition. Sprint's residential local service customers who subscribe to a major interexchange carrier (IXC) for their toll services will see a significant benefit from granting Sprint's Petition. Felz Direct Testimony at 24-25; Staihr Direct Testimony at 14. As required by the 2003 Act, each IXC that experiences expense savings from the reduction of intrastate switched network access rates must pass all of those savings on to their customers in the form of: a.) eliminating any "instate connection fee" by January [sic] 1, 2006; and b.) reducing intrastate toll rates. Section 364.164(2), Florida Statutes.

20. The "instate connection fee," which amounts to about $1.90 per month, is collected by several, major IXCs from many of their toll customers, regardless of the customers' level of toll usage. Thus, every residential toll customer paying the "instate connection fee" will see a reduction and eventual elimination of that $1.90 fee, regardless of how many or how few toll calls the residential consumer makes each month. Felz Direct Testimony at 24-25; Staihr Direct Testimony at 14. Thereafter, the IXCs' per minute toll rates must be reduced to flow-through any residual intrastate switched network access rate reduction amounts.

As indicated in its petition, Sprint witness Brian Staihr, at page 14, line 9 of his prefiled direct testimony said the following:

Q. But doesn't that mean that residential local service rates would possibly increase more in Sprint's territory than in other regions?

A. Yes, but there are counter-balancing factors that must be considered. First, it is important to keep in mind that inter-exchange carriers (IXCs) are required to flow through the access charge reductions that accompany the rate rebalancing. This includes elimination of the "in state connection fee." As a result, toll customers currently paying such a fee to an IXC - regardless of their level of usage - will benefit as this charge is eliminated. Also, because per-minute access charges will be reduced, many customers' total bills (for all telecom services) will, on average, decline as well. So although basic rates will rise, toll rates will fall and in many cases the effects will offset each other.

Similarly, Sprint witness John Felz, at page 24-25, beginning at line 24 of his prefiled direct testimony said the following:

Q. Are there other consumer benefits provided by legislation?

A. Yes. The interexchange carriers ("IXCs") are required to return to their residential and business customers the benefits of access reductions they realize from the ILEC rate reductions. The reductions that customers experience in the rates for long distance calling will serve to offset the increases they will experience for basic local services. This offset will consist of eliminating, by January 1, 2006, any "instate connection fee" which for the "big three" IXCs is currently approximately $1.90 per month, and flowing-through any residual switched network access charge reduction amount in the form of lower toll rates. Thus IXC's residential customers currently being charged an instate connection fee will see a direct reduction in their monthly toll bill of about $1.90, regardless of the amount of their toll calling volume. Thereafter, long distance users will receive the benefits of additional IXC flow-through toll price reductions.

Verizon's witness Carl Danner promoted the same vision of residential customers being able to offset the large local rate increases through utilizing reduced instate toll rates. At page 10, line 5 of his prefiled direct testimony he said the following:

Q. Will Verizon's Pricing Reform Plan encourage increases in toll and long distance usage, and therefore, make residential customers more attractive to competition?

A. Yes. because the newly enacted legislation requires long distance providers to flow through access reductions, toll and long distance prices will fall, which in turn would stimulate toll and long distance usage.

This reaction will increase the size of the market opportunity for competitors, and therefore also promote competition for residential customers.

Verizon's witness Danner, also at page 10, said the following:

Q. Are there any other benefits associated with Verizon's pricing reform plan?

A. Yes. Competitive pressures will likely force Verizon to reduce its toll process. Such reductions will not be offset with increases under § 364.164 and will therefore serve as an additional customer benefit.

Q. Is there a particular class of residential customer that benefits the most from Verizon's plan?

A. Yes. Verizon's plan will benefit existing Lifeline customers and additional customers who will qualify for Lifeline under the expanded provisions of F.S.364.164. Lifeline subscribers will see the price they pay for basic local service preserved at its current level. while at the same time enjoying the benefits of reduced prices for long distance calling created by the pass through of access charge reductions.

BellSouth's witness John Ruscilli's testimony similarly touted the ability of residential customers to save or "benefit" through reductions in in-state toll rates. At page 10, beginning at line 1 of his prefiled testimony, he said the following:

Q. Although BellSouth proposes increasing certain local exchange rates, should customers benefit in the way of reduced long distance rates?

A. Yes. Although BellSouth's proposal includes increases in certain local exchange services rates, Section 364.163(2) provides that these same customers can be recipients of lower long distance rates. Section 364.163(2) requires that telecommunication companies whose rates are reduced due to adjustments in intrastate switched access must decrease their long distance revenues by passing along such reductions to both residential and business customers. Therefore, to the extent that customers are using long distance service provided by telecommunications companies that pay BellSouth switched access charges, BellSouth's proposal will result in lower long distance rates for these customers.

The "cleanup" witness sponsored jointly by BellSouth, Verizon and Sprint, Kenneth Gordon, said the following at page 16 of his prefiled direct testimony:

Q. Please explain why you believe that the companies' plans will not result in rate shock.

A. The companies' plans will result in relatively minor increases in a customer's basic local price. In addition, as I stated earlier, these price increases will not even apply to current Lifeline consumers and new Lifeline consumers who have become eligible as a result of the Tele-Competition Act raising the income threshold to 125% of the poverty level.

In addition, with the reduction and elimination of the in-state connection fees, many customers might not even experience a significant change in their total bill. If there is an increase in the customer's bill, it will likely result in large part from increased stimulation from lower long distance charges that represent real gains to consumers because they are now able to make more calls at the new lower prices.

PSC Announces Two Decisions Regarding Phone Rate Petitions

TALLAHASSEE -- Earlier today, the Florida Public Service Commission voted that additional information from interexchange companies (IXCs) should be filed and considered with the BellSouth, Sprint, and Verizon petitions associated with the Tele-Competition Innovation and Infrastructure Enhancement Act (the Act).

This Commission decision expands the scope of the proceedings currently underway and will require the parties in these proceedings to submit additional testimony later this month. Also, the dates set aside for the Tallahassee evidentiary hearing (December 10-12, 2003) will remain unchanged.

In addition, the American Association of Retired Persons' (AARP) request to dismiss the petitions based on a lack of information from the IXCs was denied by the Commission in a separate action.

The Commission decision on these petitions is required by the Act and is expected to take place later this year.

Tallahassee, Florida.

Dear Commissioners,

~~I am here~~ <sup>A</sup> ~~We are writing~~ <sup>business man</sup> ~~today as local business people who have~~ <sup>has</sup> fought and suffered for the principal of freedom of choice. We have experienced the tyranny of those who would restrict our freedom to think, to speak, to act and as the American constitution ~~says~~, to pursue happiness. <sup>states</sup>

<sup>it</sup> That is why ~~is~~ surprising that, in a country that holds these principles so dear, you have rules that inhibit a free marketplace and hinder companies from setting their own prices and pursuing success.

Allow the telephone companies to freely establish their own prices. You will see that customers in the market will soon make their wishes heard. And the market will have to respond. The entrepreneurial spirit in this country will give rise to more competition and more choices for everyone.

We know firsthand that there is only freedom where there is choice.

The Association of Former Cuban Political Prisoners supports this petition to foster more choices and competition in telephone services for consumers.

Sincerely,

Dr. Osvaldo Freixa

I. INTRODUCTION AND HISTORY

The telecommunications industry is in transition from an industry characterized by regional monopolies to one characterized by national competition. For most of its history, telephone service was furnished on a monopoly basis by a single provider. In exchange for a statutory monopoly, the telephone company was subject to economic regulation that gave it the opportunity to earn a fair rate of return on its investment. In this monopoly regime, prices for long distance and other premium services were set substantially above cost based on value of service principles. At the same time, local telephone service was priced residually to advance the social policy goal of providing universal service.

Effective January 1, 1984, this monopoly regime was radically changed nationwide by the entry of the "modified final judgment"<sup>1</sup> which reorganized AT&T and divested it of its local telephone companies, restricted the operating areas of the local telephone companies, and provided for competitive interstate long distance service. See, Microtel, Inc. v. Florida Public Service Commission, 483 So.2d 415, 416 (Fla. 1986) (Microtel II). In apparent anticipation of the forthcoming consent judgment in the AT&T case, and motivated by a desire to promote competitive long distance telephone service within Florida, the Legislature in 1982 amended Florida law to allow the Commission to issue certificates for competitive intrastate long distance service. Id. at 417-418. As the Florida Supreme Court recognized in Microtel Inc. v. Florida Public Service Commission, 464 So.2d 1189, 1191 (Fla. 1985) (Microtel I), the 1982 Legislature made the "'fundamental and primary policy decision' that there be competition in long distance telephone services" in Florida.

As long distance competitors entered the market, state and federal regulators instituted a system of intercarrier compensation under which long distance companies paid "access charges" to the local exchange telephone companies for the use of the local networks to originate and terminate long distance calls. As the record reflects, these access charges were initially set to take the place of the revenue that had been provided by long distance service under the monopoly regime.

for competition in the provision of local service. The Legislature found that "the competitive provision of telecommunications services, including local exchange service, is in the public interest and will provide customers with freedom of choice, encourage the introduction of new telecommunications service, encourage technological innovation, and encourage investment in telecommunications infrastructure." Section 364.01(3), Florida Statutes. In conjunction with the opening of the local exchange market to competition, the incumbent local exchange companies (ILECs) were permitted to elect to substitute price regulation for the former rate base, rate of return regulation. Section 364.051, Florida Statutes.

The opening of the Florida local market to competition was followed the next year by the enactment of the federal Telecommunications Act of 1996 (1996 Act). Pub. L. No. 104-104, 104th Congress 1996, 110 Stat. 56, 47 U.S.C. §§ et. seq. This act established a national framework to enable competitive local exchange carriers (CLECs) to enter the local telecommunications market and to allow the former Bell Operating Companies to reenter the interLATA long distance market. The purpose of the 1996 Act was to bring the benefits of competition to all telecommunications markets by creating a pro-competitive, de-regulatory national policy framework. Senate Rpt. 104-023, entitled "Telecommunications Competition" (March 30, 1995).

Over the 19 years since the introduction of long distance competition, both interstate access charges and intrastate access charges have been reduced. Despite these reductions, the record shows that intrastate access charge rates in Florida are among the highest in the nation and are substantially above interstate access charge rates. The record also shows, as further analyzed in Section VI(B) of this Order, that intrastate long distance rates in Florida (through which an IXC must recover, among other things, its intrastate access charge costs) are likewise among the highest in the nation, and are substantially above interstate long distance rates. Local service rates in Florida, however, are the lowest in the Southeast.

are facing increased competition from providers using alternative technologies such as wireless, cable, and voice over internet protocol (VoIP). See FPSC Annual Report on Competition (June 30, 2003).

Against this backdrop, the Florida Legislature, during the 2003 Regular Session, enacted the Tele-Competition Innovation and Infrastructure Enhancement Act (2003 Act), which became effective on May 23, 2003. In broad terms, the 2003 Act allows the Commission to consider whether allowing the ILECs to reduce their intrastate access charges to interstate levels, and to make offsetting increases in local service rates, will further the Legislature's goal of increasing competition in the local telephone market. By returning some regulation of intrastate access charges to the Commission, the Legislature has given us the tools to address the question of whether access charges in fact support artificially low local service rates that may be impairing the implementation of competition in the local telephone market.

A key provision in the 2003 Act, Section 364.164, Florida Statutes, provides a process by which ILECs may petition this Commission to reduce their intrastate switched network access rates in a revenue-neutral manner. We are required by law to issue our final order granting or denying any such petition within 90 days of the filing. In reaching our decision, Section 364.164(1), Florida Statutes, sets forth four mandatory criteria we must consider. Those criteria are:

[W]hether granting the petition will:

- (a) Remove current support for basic local telecommunications services that prevents the creation of a more attractive competitive local exchange market for the benefit of residential consumers.
  - (b) Induce enhanced market entry.
  - (c) Require intrastate switched network access rate reductions to parity over a period of not less than 2 years or more than 4 years.

- (d) Be revenue neutral as defined in subsection (7), within the revenue category defined in subsection (2).

In laymen's terms, subsection (1)(d) means that any ILEC that is permitted to reduce its intrastate switched network access rates may offset those reductions through simultaneous increases in the local rates charged to its flat-rate residential and single-line business customers.

In addition, Section 364.163(2), Florida Statutes, provides a mechanism to ensure that any IXC that receives the benefits of access charge rate reductions will flow those benefits through to both residential and business customers in the form of lower intrastate long distance rates:

Any intrastate interexchange telecommunications company whose intrastate switched access rate is reduced as a result of the rate adjustments made by a local exchange telecommunications company in accordance with s. 364.164 shall decrease its intrastate long distance revenues by the amount necessary to return the benefits of such reduction to both its residential and business customers. The intrastate interexchange telecommunications company may determine the specific intrastate rates to be decreased, provided that residential and business customers benefit from the rate decreases. Any in-state connection fee or similarly named fee shall be eliminated by July 1, 2006, provided that the timetable determined pursuant to s. 364.164(1) reduces intrastate switched network access rates in an amount that results in the elimination of such fee in a revenue-neutral manner. The tariff changes, if any, made by the intrastate interexchange telecommunications company to carry out the requirements of this subsection shall be presumed valid and shall become effective on 1 day's notice.

Section 364.163(3) gives this Commission continuing regulatory oversight regarding the access charge reduction flow-throughs described in subsection (2).

Finally, the 2003 Act amended Section 364.10 to provide increased protection to economically disadvantaged customers. This section requires any ILEC that reduces its access charges (and increases its local rates) pursuant to Section 364.164 to make its Lifeline Assistance Plan available to customers with incomes at or below 125% of the federal poverty level, up from 100% or less under the prior law.

Our jurisdiction in this matter arises from the above statutory provisions.

II. CASE BACKGROUND

On August 27, 2003, Verizon Florida Inc. (Verizon), Sprint-Florida, Incorporated (Sprint), and BellSouth Telecommunications, Inc. (BellSouth), each filed petitions pursuant to Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. Dockets Nos. 030867-TL (Verizon), 030868-TL (Sprint), and 030869-TL (BellSouth) were opened to address these petitions in the time frame provided by Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. On September 4, 2003, the Order Establishing Procedure and Consolidating Dockets for Hearing, Order No. PSC-03-0994-PCO-TL, was issued. At the September 15, 2003, Agenda Conference, the Commission decided to hold public hearings in the above referenced dockets.

On September 3, 2003, the Office of Public Counsel (OPC) filed Motions to Dismiss the Petitions in each of these dockets on the grounds that the Petitions proposed to make rate changes over one year, rather than the two year minimum required by Section 364.164(1)(c). On September 10, 2003, Verizon filed its Response to OPC's Motion to Dismiss. Also on September 10, 2003, Sprint and BellSouth filed their Joint Response to OPC's Motion to Dismiss. At the September 30, 2003, Agenda Conference, we voted to dismiss Verizon, Sprint, and BellSouth's Petitions with leave to amend within 48 hours to address the Commission's determination regarding the application of the two-year time frame in Section 364.164(1)(c), Florida Statutes. On September 30, October 1, and October 2, 2003, respectively, BellSouth, Sprint, and Verizon filed their amended petitions.

By Order No. PSC-03-1240-PCO-TL, we consolidated Docket No. 030961-TI, which was opened to address questions regarding the

IXCs' flow-through to customers of any access charge reductions, into this proceeding for hearing. By Order No. PSC-03-1269-PCO-TL, the procedure in these consolidated Dockets was amended to include additional testimony filing dates and issues to reflect the consolidation of Docket No. 030961-TI. A hearing on this matter was held on December 10-12, 2003.

In this matter, we received the testimony of 26 witnesses on behalf of the ILECs, intervenors, the consumer advocates, and our own Commission staff. We also received testimony from customers at 14 customer service hearings conducted throughout the state, as well as written comments from customers submitted to the docket files associated with this case. In addition, we received into evidence 86 exhibits. We have carefully considered the evidence received in its entirety, as well as the arguments of counsel. Based thereon, we hereby render our decision on the issues presented.

III. MOTIONS

Three motions remained outstanding at the start of our hearing in this matter -- two motions for reconsideration of prior orders and one motion for entry of a summary final order. As a preliminary matter, we addressed the motions as follows:

A. Joint Petitioners Motion for Reconsideration of Order No. PSC-03-1269-PCO-TL, issued Nov. 10, 2003 - Second Order Modifying Procedure for Consolidated Dockets to Reflect Additional Docket, Associated Issues, and Filing Dates

This motion asked that the Commission reconsider the inclusion of Issues 6-10 in the Second Order Modifying Procedure. The motion argued that the inclusion of those issues, which relate to the IXCs' flow-through of any access charge reductions they receive, inappropriately imposed additional criteria on the Joint Petitioners' Petitions for switched network access rate reductions that go beyond the four mandatory criteria enumerated in Section 364.164(1). The Office of Public Counsel filed a response to this Motion on behalf of the Citizens. Upon consideration, we granted the Petitioners' request for oral argument on this Motion at the outset of the hearing.

The standard of review for a motion for reconsideration is whether the motion identifies a point of fact or law which was overlooked or which the Commission failed to consider in rendering its Order. See, Stewart Bonded Warehouse, Inc. v. Bevis, 294 So. 2d 315 (Fla. 1974); Diamond Cab Co. v. King, 146 So. 2d 889 (Fla. 1962); and Pingree v. Ouaintance, 394 So. 2d 162 (Fla. 1st DCA 1981). In a motion for reconsideration, it is not appropriate to reargue matters that have already been considered. Sherwood v. State, 111 So. 2d 96 (Fla. 3rd DCA 1959); citing State ex. rel. Jaytex Realty Co. v. Green, 105 So. 2d 817 (Fla. 1st DCA 1958). Furthermore, a motion for reconsideration should not be granted "based upon an arbitrary feeling that a mistake may have been made, but should be based upon specific factual matters set forth in the record and susceptible to review." Stewart Bonded Warehouse, Inc. v. Bevis, 294 So. 2d 315, 317 (Fla. 1974). This standard is equally applicable to reconsideration by the Commission of a Prehearing Officer's order. See, Order No. PSC-96-0133-FOF-EI, issued January 29, 1996, in Docket No. 950110-EI.

Throughout this proceeding, one hotly contested issue has been whether, in making its determination to grant or deny the Petitions, the Commission can consider only the four mandatory criteria enumerated in Section 364.164(1) or whether it is also required or permitted to consider the extent to which residential customers whose local rates would be increased if the Petitions are granted are likely to benefit from offsetting long distance rate decreases. This is ultimately an issue of statutory construction which we indicated on several occasions would be considered at the conclusion of the evidentiary hearing.

The thrust of the Petitioners' motion for reconsideration is that the inclusion of Issues 6 through 10 in the Second Order Modifying Procedure improperly introduced consideration of this long distance rate impact into the proceedings on their Petitions. OPC, on the other hand, argues that these Issues were properly included, since the Commission must consider the combined impact on residential customers of any local rate increases and any long distance rate decreases.

Upon consideration, we conclude that the Motion for Reconsideration does not identify a mistake of fact or law made by the Prehearing Officer in rendering his decision. The determination about which the Joint Petitioners express concern is not one made by the Prehearing Officer in his Order. The Prehearing Officer did not impose additional requirements on the ILECs' Petitions to reduce access charges; instead, he included additional issues for consideration in this proceeding based upon our decision to consolidate Docket No. 030961-TI with Dockets Nos. 030867-TL, 030868-TL, and 030869-TL for hearing. His Order clearly set forth that this is the basis upon which he modified the schedule and the issues list for the proceeding. As such, his decision is not only correct, but needs no clarification. The decision to consolidate Docket No. 030961-TI was made by this Commission in Order No. PSC-03-1240-PCO-TP, issued November 4, 2003. Reconsideration of that decision was not requested. The Prehearing Officer's Order merely implements that decision by amending the schedule and including issues to reflect the consolidation. As for the legal issue raised by the Joint Petitioners, that being whether we should consider impacts on the toll market in making our decision on the ILECs' Petitions, that issue was not addressed by the Prehearing Officer and remains for decision by this Commission at the conclusion of the hearing. For these reasons, the Joint Motion For Reconsideration is denied.

B. OPC's Motion for Reconsideration of Order No. PSC-03-1331-FOF-TL (filed Dec. 5, 2003) / AARP's Motion for Reconsideration of Same Order (filed Dec. 8, 2003) (The Attorney General Joined in the Motions on December 9)

These motions asked that we reconsider certain language in our Order denying AARP's Motion to Dismiss these cases for failure to join the IXC's as indispensable parties. OPC and AARP argue that the language contained in the order did not accurately capture the rationale for the Commission's decision as expressed during the Commission's deliberations on that motion. A response in opposition was filed by the Joint Petitioners on December 9, 2003. We received additional argument on this Motion at the outset of the hearing.

While we do not believe that reconsideration is appropriate in this instance, upon consideration of the arguments and review of the Order itself, we do believe that some clarification is in order. It is clear that certain language included in the Order could be misconstrued. Therefore, Order No. PSC-03-1331-FOF-TL, at pages 11 and 12, is amended and clarified as reflected in the following type and strike version:

In reaching this conclusion, we refer to the language of Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. Contrary to AARP's assertions, none of the four mandatory criteria set forth for our consideration in addressing the petitions ~~mandates necessitates~~ participation by the IXCs. ~~As plainly stated by the Legislature,~~ ~~the~~ The first factor set forth in Section 364.164(1), Florida Statutes, for our consideration does not mandate that direct the Commission to consider how the ILECs' proposals will affect the toll market "for the benefit of residential consumers." Instead, the plain language states that consideration should be given to whether granting the petitions will:

~~As such, the relevant market for use in making the final determination on the Petitions is the local exchange market.~~ Thus, we find that, for purposes of Section 364.164, Florida Statutes, consideration of the impact on the toll market (and resulting impact on toll customers) is not required for the Commission's ~~full and complete~~ determination of the Petitions.<sup>3</sup> In reaching this conclusion, we do not find that we are precluded from such consideration, rather we conclude only that we are not required to do so.

<sup>3</sup>~~In reaching this conclusion, we do not find that we are precluded from such consideration, rather we conclude only that we are not required to do so.~~

~~The language of Section 364.164, Florida Statutes, appears clear, thus, under principles of statutory interpretation, this Commission need not look further to divine the Legislature's intent. Southeastern Utilities Service Co. v. Redding, 131 So.2d 1 (Fla. 1950).~~ That said, we nevertheless acknowledge AARP's contention that the Legislature considered the impacts on customers' toll bills in passing the new legislation.<sup>4</sup> We emphasize, though, that the Legislature did address the impact on the toll market if the Petitions are granted, but it did so through a separate section of the statutes, Section 364.163, wherein intrastate toll providers are required to pass the benefits of the access charge reductions on to their residential and business customers. This Commission is charged under that section with ensuring that reductions are, in fact, flowed through.

C. Attorney General's Motion for Summary Final Order, filed Nov. 17 (AARP and OPC Joined in the Motion)

The Attorney General moved for a summary final order on the grounds that the record raises no genuine issue of fact regarding whether granting the Petitions will benefit residential consumers. Verizon, AT&T/MCI, BellSouth, and Sprint timely filed responses to the Motion. We received argument on this Motion at the hearing.

As became clear from the oral argument on this motion, the underlying contention by the Attorney General, OPC, and AARP is that Section 364.164 requires the Petitioners to demonstrate that residential consumers will benefit from long distance rate reductions, and that the prefiled testimony and exhibits showed that such benefits are not sufficient to offset the impact of the proposed local rate increases. The opponents of the motion contended that no such showing is required, and that the prefiled testimony establishes that residential customers will benefit from increased competition if the Petitions are granted.

Rule 28-106.204(4), Florida Administrative Code, provides:

Any party may move for summary final order whenever there is no genuine issue as to any material fact. The motion may be accompanied by supporting affidavits. All other parties may, within seven days of service, file a response in opposition, with or without supporting affidavits. A party moving for summary final order later than twelve days before the final hearing waives any objection to the continuance of the final hearing.

The standard for granting a summary final order is very high. The purpose of summary judgment, or in this instance summary final order, is to avoid the expense and delay of trial when no dispute exists concerning the material facts. The record is reviewed in the light most favorable to the party against whom the summary judgment is to be entered. When the movant presents a showing that no material fact on any issue is disputed, the burden shifts to his opponent to demonstrate the falsity of the showing. If the opponent does not do so, summary judgment is proper and should be affirmed. The question for determination on a motion for summary judgment is the existence or nonexistence of a material factual issue. There are two requisites for granting summary judgment: first, there must be no genuine issue of material fact, and second, one of the parties must be entitled to judgment as a matter of law on the undisputed facts. See, Trawick's Florida Practice and Procedure, §25-5, Summary Judgment Generally, Henry P. Trawick, Jr. (1999).

is sought." Green v. CSX Transportation, Inc., 626 So. 2d 974 (Fla. 1st DCA 1993) (citing Wills v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 351 So. 2d 29 (Fla. 1977)). Furthermore, "A summary judgment should not be granted unless the facts are so crystallized that nothing remains but questions of law." Moore v. Morris, 475 So. 2d 666 (Fla. 1985); City of Clermont, Florida v. Lake City Utility Services, Inc., 760 So. 1123 (5th DCA 2000).

The parties disagree on the proper interpretation of Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. We find, based on the pleadings, the arguments, and the prefiled testimony, there are genuine issues of material fact in dispute, regardless of whose statutory interpretation is ultimately determined to be correct. Since the motion must be viewed in the light most favorable to the parties against whom the motion is sought, the Motion must be denied in this case. In reaching this conclusion, we make no determination on the legal or factual issues to be addressed through the hearing. Rather, we conclude only that the high standard for granting a summary final order has not been met.

IV. STATUTORY INTERPRETATION

The question of the proper interpretation of Section 364.164 is one that has been raised time and again in this case in various motions, testimony, and in this Commission's own comments. We carefully withheld ruling on the question of whether Section 364.164, Florida Statutes, is ambiguous until after conclusion of the evidentiary hearing and the closing arguments of counsel. It is important to address this question before reaching the other issues in the case, because our decision will determine whether we can consider arguments and evidence presented in the case regarding the Legislative history and intent of the statute.

The law on this aspect of statutory interpretation is clear. When interpreting statutory provisions, one first should look to the provision at issue to determine whether the "language is clear and unambiguous and conveys a clear and definite meaning. . . ." Holly v. Auld, 450 So. 2d 217 (Fla. 1984), citing A.R. Douglass Inc. v. McRaney, 102 Fla. 1141 (1931). If the meaning is clear, there is no need to resort to statutory interpretation. Furthermore, an unambiguous statutory provision cannot be construed to extend, modify, or limit its express terms or its reasonable and obvious implications. Holly, at 219. However, a statute should not be given its literal reading if such reading would lead to an unreasonable conclusion. Id.

Section 364.164 sets forth the criteria we must consider in determining whether to grant the ILECs' petitions. Those criteria are as follows:

[W]hether granting the petition will:

- (a) Remove current support for basic local telecommunications services that prevents the creation of a more attractive competitive local exchange market for the benefit of residential consumers.
- (b) Induce enhanced market entry.
- (c) Require intrastate switched network access rate reductions to parity over a period of not less than 2 years or more than 4 years.
- (d) Be revenue neutral as defined in subsection (7) within the revenue category defined in subsection (2).

The ILECs argue that this language clearly expresses the Legislature's intent and, thus, is not subject to interpretation. The OPC, the Attorney General, and AARP present a vastly differing interpretation of the statute, and have offered into evidence and in their arguments the Legislative history of the bill. Each side offers tenable arguments regarding how the statute could be interpreted. We note that the lack of clarifying language or punctuation in the provisions at issue contributes to the differing interpretations. As such, having considered the arguments and the language of the statute itself, we find that the language of Section 364.164, Florida Statutes, is not clear on its face and, thus, is subject to statutory interpretation. Having reached this conclusion, our decisions as set forth below reflect our interpretation of the Legislature's intent as gleaned from the Legislative history, including consideration of the potential impacts of granting the Petitions on the toll rates paid by residential customers.

V. SUMMARY OF DECISION

As discussed in more detail later in this order, we find and conclude, based on the record, that:

1. Intrastate access rates currently provide support for basic local telecommunications services that would be reduced by bringing such rates to parity with interstate access rates.
2. The existence of such support prevents the creation of a more attractive competitive local exchange market by keeping local rates at artificially low levels, thereby raising an artificial barrier to entry into the market by efficient competitors.
3. The elimination of such support will induce enhanced market entry into the local exchange market.
4. Enhanced market entry will result in the creation of a more competitive local exchange market that will benefit residential consumers through:
  - a. increased choice of service providers;
  - b. new and innovative service offerings, including bundles of local and long distance service, and bundles that may include cable TV service and high speed internet access service;
  - c. technological advances;
  - d. increased quality of service; and
  - e. over the long run, reductions in prices for local service.
5. The ILECs' proposals will reduce intrastate switched network access rates to parity over a period of not less than two years or more than four years.
6. The ILECs' proposals will be revenue neutral within the meaning of the statute, which permits access charge reductions to be offset, dollar for dollar, by increases in basic local service rates for flat-rate residential and single-line business customers.

7. Because of the mandatory flow-through provisions of Section 364.163, approval of the plans will be financially neutral to the IXC's, who are required to reduce their intrastate toll rates and charges to consumers to offset the benefit of any access charge reductions the IXC's receive.

8. Contrary to the position taken by the Attorney General in these proceedings, the statute does not require that implementation of the proposals be "bill neutral" to any particular customer or class of customers.

9. We are not mandated by Section 364.164 to consider the impact of the proposals on toll rates paid by residential consumers. However, consistent with the legislative history of the 2003 Act, we conclude that we are permitted to do so. In this regard, we find that many residential customers will benefit directly from the elimination of in-state connection fees and reductions in per-minute intrastate toll rates. We also find that residential customers as a whole will enjoy prices for toll services that are closer to economic costs and, therefore, will have less of a repressive effect on long distance usage. We also find that under the long distance rate reduction plans offered by the IXC's, residential customers as a whole will get a proportionate share of any toll rate reductions based on their share of total access minutes of use.

10. Experience from other states that have rebalanced local and toll rates shows that approval of the ILEC's proposals will have little, if any, negative impact on the availability of universal service. While no customer likes to see a rate increase, the record shows that basic local service will continue to remain affordable for the vast majority of residential customers.

11. Although we find that it is not a benefit that we should weigh in the balance in considering whether or not to grant the Petitions, the amended Lifeline provisions in Section 364.10 will help to protect economically disadvantaged consumers from the effect of local rate increases. This protection is enhanced by the ILECs' agreement to further increase the eligibility criteria for Lifeline assistance from 125% to 135% of the federal poverty level, increasing the number of customers eligible for the program by approximately 119,000, and to protect Lifeline recipients against basic local service rate increases for four years. Although we cannot predict the future with certainty, economic theory suggests, and we are encouraged to believe, that the establishment of a more competitive local market will put downward pressure on local exchange prices that will eventually reduce the need for targeted assistance programs such as Lifeline.

VI. REMOVAL OF CURRENT SUPPORT

In this section, we address whether the ILECs' proposals meet the requirements of Section 364.164(1)(a), Florida Statutes. For clarity of analysis, we have considered these requirements in three parts: (A) what is a reasonable estimate of the level of support for basic service provided by access charges; (B) does that support prevent the creation of a more attractive local exchange market; and (C) would the creation of a more attractive local exchange market benefit residential consumers.

A. REASONABLE ESTIMATE OF SUPPORT

1. Arguments

Verizon contends that its basic local services receive support from its network access charges, and that its plan removes this support by bringing the prices of those services more in line with costs. Verizon asserts that removing support for basic local services will promote local exchange competition for the benefit of residential customers. Verizon contends that it will make residential customers more attractive to competitors and thus induce enhanced market entry, encourage innovation, and promote increased freedom of choice. Verizon asserts that the plan will also reduce intrastate access rates, thereby allowing residential customers to make more long distance calls at lower prices. Verizon, along with BellSouth and Sprint, sponsored the testimony of Dr. Kenneth Gordon addressing this issue. Verizon's witnesses Fulp and Danner also offered testimony in this regard.

Verizon states that for purposes of this proceeding, it seeks to remove $76.2 million of support from basic local telecommunication services. Verizon contends that this amount is necessary to bring its intrastate switched network access rate to parity with its interstate switched network access rate.

Likewise, Sprint argues that the level of support provided for basic local services by intrastate switched network access rates in excess of parity in Sprint's service areas is $142,073,492 per year, based upon current access minutes of use. Sprint offered the testimony of witnesses Dickerson, Felz, and Staihr on this issue.

BellSouth emphasizes that this Commission has already found that BellSouth's residential rates receive support from access charges, which is further buttressed by the detailed testimony of BellSouth's witness Bernard Shell, particularly the information in witness Shell's exhibit WBS-1 (Hearing Exhibit 53). This support from above-parity intrastate access charges ranges from $125.2 million to $136.4 million per year, depending on the method used to perform the calculation. BellSouth maintains that its proposal will remove current support for basic local telecommunications services, and will bring the rates for basic local exchange service to a level that encourages competitive entry in the local exchange market. BellSouth argues that this is evidenced, in part, by the testimony of AT&T and Knology in this proceeding. BellSouth adds that residential customers will benefit from having new choices of providers and services that additional competition will bring and will also benefit from the pass-through of access charge reductions in the form of reduced toll rates. To address this aspect of its petition, BellSouth submitted the testimony of its witnesses Shell and Banerjee.

Knology asserts that granting these petitions will materially diminish the current support for basic local telecommunications services. Knology contends that this support prevents creation of a more competitive market. Knology asserts that diminution of the support will spur additional competition. Knology states that its experience in its existing markets provides examples of how the entry of a facilities-based competitor for telephone service expands the products available to consumers, increases the customer service levels, and promotes product and pricing competition.

AT&T and MCI agree that the ILEC proposals will remove current support for basic local telecommunications services by simultaneously reducing intrastate switched access rates that have been established at economically inefficient levels through the residential rate setting process and adjusting local exchange rates upward on a revenue neutral basis. They assert that through the process of residual ratemaking, intrastate switched access charges have been historically elevated well above their relevant economic cost and the surplus has served as residual support for basic local telecommunications services. Dr. John Mayo testified on AT&T and MCI's behalf on this point.

OPC asserts that residential basic local telephone service is not subsidized by access service or any other service. OPC contends that the ILECs' petitions, therefore, do not remove current support, because there is none. OPC further asserts that Basic Local Telecommunication Services (BLTS) are not supported by the rates for intrastate access, because the existing BLTS rates exceed their incremental costs. AARP, Common Cause, and Sugarmill Woods agree to a large extent, although they further argue that there is no support, because the loop itself is a common cost that should be fully allocated among all services that use the loop. Dr. David Gabel provided testimony on behalf of OPC addressing this issue, while Dr. Mark Cooper testified on behalf of AARP.

2. Findings and Decision

We find that the ILECs' access charge rates provide support to local exchange service. In making this determination, we accept the economic testimony of the ILECs' and IXC's witnesses, which treat the cost of the local loop as a cost of basic local service. In particular, the testimony shows there is no economic principle requiring that the cost of that loop be allocated across other ancillary services that are provided over the loop.

We are not persuaded by the testimony of AARP and OPC's witnesses that all or some of the cost of the local loop should be shared, such that any costs shared by more than one service would be excluded from the ILECs' Total Service Long Run Incremental Cost (TSLRIC) calculations. This would be inconsistent with our past decisions, perhaps most notably in our 1998 Report on Fair and Reasonable Rates to the Legislature, that the costs associated with the local loop should not be allocated. The arguments raised by OPC and AARP have been considered and rejected in the past, and we find no new persuasive basis upon which to deviate from our consistent policy on this issue.

We note that the record raises some concern about the cost information provided in the proceeding by the ILECs. For instance, BellSouth's use of model inputs is inconsistent with past Commission decisions in the Docket No. 990649-TP, in which we established rates for unbundled network elements (UNEs). Also, we find that Verizon's use of interstate minutes to calculate switching and transport costs is problematic, and that Sprint and BellSouth's use of retail costs appears to be excessive, particularly since they do not differentiate between costs that apply to basic local service and costs that apply to all other services. Nevertheless, after weighing all the evidence, we find that the correction of these deficiencies would not alter our conclusion that local exchange rates are supported by intrastate access charge rates; that the ILECs have, in fact, provided a reasonable estimate of the level of support for basic local telecommunications service; and that their proposals appropriately remove that support as required by the statute. In reaching this decision, we do not in any way indicate agreement with the ILECs' costs, inputs, or methodologies considered herein for any purpose beyond this proceeding.

In addition, we note that AT&T/MCI witness Mayo emphasized that the statute does not require removal of a pure economic subsidy, but rather "support" for basic local service. Thus, he disputes witnesses Gabel and Cooper's arguments that there is no subsidy to be removed. We also find this argument persuasive in view of the plain language of the statute.

B. SUPPORT PREVENTS THE CREATION OF A MORE ATTRACTIVE
COMPETITIVE LOCAL EXCHANGE MARKET

1. Arguments

Verizon contends that its current residential basic monthly rates are well below incremental cost, and therefore impair competition for residential customers. Verizon asserts that the availability of local service at supported prices limits the prices that competitive local providers can charge. Verizon contends that to the extent that competitive providers' costs are similar to Verizon's, the existing supported prices make it economically infeasible for those providers to compete. Dr. Gordon spoke to this issue on behalf of the three ILECs. In addition, Verizon offered the testimony of witness Danner in this regard.

Sprint contends that the presence of heavily supported residential basic local service acts as an obstacle to the creation of widespread residential local competition. The removal of this obstacle, according to Sprint, is the goal of the 2003 Act. Sprint's witness Staihr spoke to this issue.

BellSouth again contends that we have already determined that its residential rates are supported. BellSouth emphasizes that the testimony of its witness Shell lends further support to the argument that removal of the support for basic local service will bring rates to a level that encourages competition, leading to new choices for consumers, as well as reduced toll rates. BellSouth's witnesses Ruscilli and Banerjee offered additional testimony on this point.

Knology maintains that granting these petitions will materially diminish the current support for basic local telecommunications services. Knology asserts that this support prevents creation of a more competitive market and that diminution of the support will spur additional competition.

AT&T and MCI assert that the currently excessive intrastate switched access charge rate levels make it difficult for a telecommunications company to enter the local exchange market and compete against incumbent providers whose local rates are supported by access charges; the support allows incumbent providers to subject their competitors to an anticompetitive price squeeze. AT&T and MCI contend that excessive access charges further depress competition by limiting competitors' ability to compete across the full range of service categories. Dr. Mayo addressed this aspect of the ILEC Petitions on behalf of AT&T and MCI.

Although their analysis differs somewhat, OPC, AARP, Common Cause Florida, and Sugarmill Woods each contend there is no support for basic local service; therefore, raising current prices will not create a more attractive competitive local exchange market for the benefit of residential consumers. They contend that the existing levels of basic local telecommunications service rates have minimal, if any, impact on making the local exchange market more attractive to competitors. Drs. Gabel and Cooper also provided testimony in this regard on behalf of OPC and AARP, respectively.

The Commission staff offered the testimony of witness Ollila for purposes of providing additional perspective on this issue by way of the Commission's 2002 Report on Competition in Telecommunications Markets in Florida. In addition, the 2003 Report was received into the record as a stipulated exhibit.

2. Findings and Decision

Upon consideration, we agree with witness Gordon that the current level of support has allowed residential rates to remain lower than they would be in an undistorted competitive market, and that they are, in fact, lower than in other states in our region. We can find no basis in economics for the underpricing of basic service which is demand-inelastic relative to usage. Except for a limited range of residential customers, it is not economically feasible for a CLEC to price complementary products and packages in a manner that would allow it to make up for lack of profitability in the provision of basic service. As a result, there is little opportunity or ability to bundle products and services for consumers, and a very limited range of customers can truly be served on a profitable basis.

As recognized by both witness Mayo and witness Gordon, the state law, as well as the federal Telecommunications Act of 1996, shifts the utility commission's role away from historically protecting monopolists from competitors' entry and protecting consumers from the monopolist, to a role of encouraging competition. Under the old regime, utility commissions set rates for non-basic services, such as long distance, carrier switched access, and vertical features, above cost in order to hold down the price for basic local exchange service. This was in furtherance of universal service.

As witness Mayo emphasized, even as we moved toward price cap regulation, the pricing structure did not really change; thus, the prices for non-basic services continued to support basic service. Specifically, access charges were created after divestiture of AT&T to provide a source of revenue that would enable the local exchange companies to continue to keep prices low. Witness Mayo added that at the federal level, access charges have been reduced dramatically over the past 19 years, and this process has taken place for intrastate access charges in other states as well. Nevertheless, the witness emphasized that intrastate access rate levels in Florida are still in excess of their incremental cost, serving as continued support for low local service rates. As such, according to witnesses Mayo and Gordon, approving the ILECs' petitions to reduce intrastate access charges in a revenue neutral manner will, in fact, remove some of the support for local service, which will in turn make local service market entry more attractive for prospective entrants. This testimony was very compelling.

Witness Gordon further testified that the effect of having rates that are below cost is to discourage entry, as well as investment, by both new entrants and incumbents. Thus, not only is there less likelihood of competition, but of innovation as well. He emphasized that there is empirical evidence on this point, as referenced in the Ros-McDermott study he mentions in his pre-filed testimony. He also testified that in states that have implemented rebalancing, namely California, Illinois, Ohio, Massachusetts, and Maine, there was little noticeable impact on subscribership levels in spite of residential local service rate increases comparable to the increases proposed in the ILECs' petitions. In addition, he noted that, in the states that have implemented rebalancing, toll rates were lowered.

Our 2003 Competition Report shows that CLEC residential market share is only 9% in Florida, while CLEC's serve 29% of the business market. Similarly, Verizon's competition study for its territory shows that there is a 100 to 1 ratio of business versus residential customers being served by facilities-based CLECs. This drops to 10 to 1 if UNE-P and resale are taken into account. Together, these studies persuade us that competition for residential customers is currently suffering as a result of barriers to entry.

In addition, Knology's witness Boccucci specifically stated that, ". . . under current rates for local services in Florida, Knology has not been able to generate rates of return sufficient to attract the capital necessary to expand in adjacent areas to Panama City or elsewhere in Florida. If rate rebalancing is implemented, Knology has every intention to expand and compete further in Florida." He emphasized that because of Florida's low local rates, that ". . . from our investors' perspective, in the competition for the valuable CAPX or the capital expenditures, it was tough to make a business case to expand into the panhandle when we could expand into Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama and North Carolina [where local rates are higher] and be more assured that we could meet the returns that our investors expected in the marketplace."

Based on the foregoing, we find that current support provided by access charges does, in fact, impede competition in the residential local exchange markets.

C. BENEFIT TO RESIDENTIAL CONSUMERS AS CONTEMPLATED BY SECTION 364.164, FLORIDA STATUTES

1. Arguments

Verizon asserts that by moving basic local residential rates toward cost, its rate rebalancing plan will promote competition for the benefit of residential customers, which is the benefit contemplated by Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. Verizon contends that implementation of its rebalancing proposal will make these residential customers more attractive to competitors and thus induce enhanced market entry, encourage innovation, and promote increased freedom of choice. Verizon asserts that, in addition, its rebalancing plan will lower intrastate access rates and, ultimately, allow residential customers to make more long distance calls at lower prices. Again, Dr. Gordon provided testimonial support for the three ILECs on this point. In addition, Verizon's witnesses Danner and Fulp addressed this issue.

Similarly, Sprint contends that the creation of a more attractive competitive local exchange market will benefit residential consumers by giving them choices in providers, services, technologies, and pricing options. Sprint maintains that this is what consumers are demanding, and that this range of choice will only be made available through a competitive market. Sprint offered the testimonies of witnesses Staihr and Felz on this point.

BellSouth again argues that its residential rates are supported. BellSouth emphasizes that the testimony of its witness Shell lends further support to the argument that removal of the support for basic local service will bring rates to a level that encourages competition, leading to new choices for consumers, which is the benefit contemplated by the 2003 Act, as well as reduced toll rates. BellSouth's witnesses Banerjee and Ruscilli provided testimony on this issue.

Knology states that its experience in its existing markets provides examples of how the entry of a facilities-based competitor for telephone service expands the products available to consumers, increases the customer service levels, and promotes product and pricing competition. Knology's witness Boccucci emphasizes that telecommunications services are converging, such that a wireless consumer does not really think of his or her service in terms of local versus long distance service. He envisions that with increased competition in the wireline market, the same will hold true for wireline customers. Likewise, he argues that the value for consumers in a competitive market is a converged bill with multiple telecommunications services, upgraded service quality, as well as price competition. He also added that a higher local rate will enable Knology to provide bundled packages at prices economical to seniors on fixed incomes, so that they can receive more economic and better quality service than they do today.

AT&T and MCI agree that the ILECs' proposals will benefit residential consumers as contemplated by Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. They contend that the ILECs' proposals will reduce current deterrents to local market entry and create a more level playing field, which will ultimately induce increased market entry. The result will be to provide consumers, residential and business alike, with a wider choice of providers' offerings and prices. They contend that residential consumers will further benefit from toll rate reductions and the elimination of any in-state connection fee. Dr. Mayo provided testimony addressing this point on behalf of AT&T and MCI, while witness Fonteix provided additional information on behalf of AT&T.

OPC, AARP, Common Cause Florida, and Sugarmill Woods contend that the ILECs' rebalancing petitions will not benefit residential consumers as contemplated by Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. They assert that the ILECs have not made a showing that the proposed rebalancing of basic local telecommunications service rates would create a more attractive competitive local exchange market for the benefit of residential customers, nor that market entry will be enhanced, because the ILECs' analyses are based on a model that no entrant would ever use. They argue that, moreover, any claims of benefits to consumers based on the removal or reduction of support for residential basic local telecommunications service are moot, since no such support exists. Again, Drs. Gabel and Cooper provided testimony on this point for OPC and AARP, respectively.

Commission staff's witness Shafer testified that the ILECs' proposals will likely result in benefits for residential customers, such as increased value and choice in products.

2. Findings and Decision

Upon consideration of the evidence presented, as well as the Legislature's clear policy to enhance competition in Florida's telecommunications market, we find that the ILECs' proposals will ultimately benefit residential consumers as contemplated by Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. As evidenced by the results in other states that have engaged in rate rebalancing, the ILECs' proposals will make the residential market more economically attractive for CLECs, which should lead to an increase in choice of providers. This will be accomplished by increasing in the short term the rate at which residential service can be offered by competitors, leading to increased profit margins for CLECs serving residential customers. Witness Fonteix specifically stated that AT&T's decision to enter BellSouth's territory was ". . . predicated upon an assumption after the passage of the Act that it would be implemented." Furthermore, the witness testified that in AT&T's experience in Michigan and Georgia, where rates have already been rebalanced, although basic local service rates initially went up, in the long run, competition drove the price back down.

Companies providing bundled offerings that include both local and long distance service will benefit not only from the increased rate at which residential service can be offered on a competitive basis, but also from the decreased terminating access rate. These changes will make providing bundled packages to residential customers more economically attractive, because companies will increase their profit margin.

Again, as argued by AT&T's witness Fonteix, because the Bell incumbents are now able to enter the long distance market, it is better to proceed with access charge reform, which has been underway at the federal level for some time now. The witness emphasized that waiting will only further harm the long distance market. This testimony was consistent with that of witness Gordon, who maintained that long distance service is overpriced, because of the support provided by access charges to local service. He asserted that as prices come down for long distance service, people will respond by making more long distance calls, which he contends is a benefit to society. He concluded that:

If the toll prices are overpriced, then there will be less calling and that constitutes a loss to society. And there's no reason to have it. It's a very expensive way to achieve the goal in Crandall's and Waverman's point. If you really want to have universal service and you think it's a problem, you know, a policy problem that should be addressed, better that the payments should be made directly in some fashion than by distorting the entire price structure, which is the mechanism we've used to date.

While it is uncontested that some customers will not receive a direct benefit as a result of the implementation of the ILECs' proposals, we find that Florida consumers as a whole will reap the benefits of increased competition and, ultimately, competition will serve to regulate the level of prices consumers will pay. Increased competition will lead not only to a wider choice of providers, but also to technological innovation, new service offerings, and increased quality of service to the customer. The evidence in this case shows that Knology will continue its plans to enter Florida markets if the Petitions are granted, and will consider broadening the number of Florida markets it enters, as demonstrated through the testimony of witness Boccucci. AT&T witness Fonteix has also indicated that AT&T's entry into BellSouth's territory has been largely influenced by the 2003 Legislation and the hope that with the granting of these Petitions, the raising of local rates will make Florida markets more profitable for competitors. Furthermore, witness Gordon explained that less regulation in the wireless market has not only produced lower prices, but also a beneficial impact on consumer welfare, because the use of the technology has become so prevalent.

While Section 364.164 does not mandate that we consider the degree of benefit to residential customers from long distance rate reductions, our review of the legislative history convinces us that it is within our discretion to do so. Thus, we have considered witness Ostrander's argument that the Petitioners have been unable to quantify the impact of competition, and therefore have been unable to show the benefit to customers. We reject that argument, and find that the preponderance of the evidence in the proceeding shows that the benefits to residential customers as a whole generated by the resulting decreases in long distance rates and elimination of the in-state connection fee will outweigh the increases in local rates. This benefit should be a continuing one, since the IXCs have indicated that they will flow through the reductions on a pro-rata basis according to minutes of access, and the record indicates that market forces should exert enough pressure to ensure that rates are kept low. Furthermore, as in the wireless industry, whose ability to offer bundled packages has been facilitated by the fact that they do not pay the high level of access fees that the wireline carriers do, we anticipate that the reduction in access fees will result in an increase in bundled offerings by wireline carriers and a decrease in the distinction between wireline local and long distance service.

We acknowledge, as OPC, the Attorney General and AARP have argued, that not every residential customer will get a long distance rate reduction, and those who do receive reductions will not necessarily receive reductions that totally offset the increase in their rate for local service. Such "bill neutrality" is not required by the statute and, in fact, would be inconsistent with its plain language. First, there could never be "bill neutrality" unless every residential customer made exactly the same number of long distance calls and could therefore share per capita in any long distance rate decreases. Second, Section 364.164 achieves revenue neutrality to the ILEC by permitting it to increase rates for flat-rate residential and single-line business service. Section 364.163, Florida Statutes, in contrast, gives the IXC's discretion in where to flow through their long distance rate decreases so long as some portion of the benefit goes to residential and business customers. As discussed in Section X(D), we find that the IXC's proposals to flow through these reductions between business and residential customers in proportion to their access minutes of use complies with both the language and spirit of the statute.

Also on this issue, we acknowledge that the testimony from the public hearings was mixed. Many customers did not believe that the ILEC proposals would benefit them, but others were hopeful that they would see competition in their area. Generally, the written comments we received tended to be unfavorable. However, when considered with the economic testimony received through our technical hearing, we find that customers as a whole will benefit as contemplated by the statute. As noted by witness Boccucci, customers will get better quality service for the products they choose, as well as a wider variety of products and providers. The evidence also shows that even those customers that use calling cards or dial-around service will receive benefits from increased competition, as will older citizens that use 1+ calling.

We also acknowledge the customer testimony critical of extended calling service (ECS) rates. In recognition of the concerns raised, we direct our staff to organize a Commission workshop to discuss the history of ECS, the current state of the law on ECS, and what role, if any, ECS has in today's market. The Petitioners have all agreed to participate fully in this workshop. In addition, it is notable that Sprint's petition includes a five-free-call allowance for ECS.

Petitions, we observe that the amended Lifeline provisions in Section 364.10 will help to protect economically disadvantaged consumers from the effect of local rate increases. The use of targeted assistance, rather than implicit rate subsidies, to address this social issue will result in more efficient pricing, which will benefit the competitive market, spur innovations and new product offerings. This is the benefit contemplated by the Legislature when it enacted this legislation and is further supported by the testimony of AT&T/MCI's witness Mayo. As noted by the witness, the ability to target assistance is far more effective at promoting universal service objectives. The witness also testified that targeted assistance is more economically efficient than continuation of implicit support from access charge prices. We agree, and expect that, over time, competition should take care of those protected by Lifeline, in spite of the current limited duration that these customers are protected from the local increases at issue here. The evidence shows that even with the proposed local rate increases, there will not be a significant number of customers that drop off the network. While the need for continued targeted assistance for some customers may foster its own social welfare concerns, those concerns must be balanced with the Legislature's clear intent to move Florida's telecommunications markets towards increased competition.

Furthermore, Dr. Cooper acknowledged that Exhibit 85 indicates that many seniors on fixed incomes take a number of additional services, such as cellular service, cable service, and Internet service. This indicates not only a likelihood that the increases proposed are within the zone of affordability for this segment of consumers, but also, as indicated by witness Boccucci, demonstrates that this segment in particular may see increased benefits as a result of bundled competitive offerings. Similarly, the evidence shows that 53% to 72% of Lifeline customers served by the Petitioners purchase one or more ancillary services.

As argued by witness Mayo, in approaching this task we must balance "hard-headed" economic principles with "soft-hearted" social welfare goals. It is the application of sound economic principles that will bring efficiencies, and as a result, competition to the telecommunications market, while the statute itself provides for targeted assistance that will assist those unable to afford the proposed increases.<sup>5</sup> At the end of the day, capitalism and the free market will maximize benefits to consumers in a way that regulation cannot. That is not, however, to say that the companies should not be encouraged to consider their social welfare obligations in targeting assistance to customers and coming up with new ideas to address the needs of the economically disadvantaged.

In the end, we find that the ILECs' proposals meet the statutory requirement set forth in Section 364.164(1)(a), Florida Statutes, providing required benefit of a more attractive competitive telecommunications market for Florida consumers.

VII. INDUCE ENHANCED MARKET ENTRY

In this section, we address whether the ILECs' proposals will induce enhanced market entry as required by Section 364.164(1)(b), Florida Statutes.

A. Arguments

BellSouth states that by removing implicit support from basic local exchange rates, competitors will have increased business opportunities to attract new customers and offer new products, services, and bundles. BellSouth contends that competitors base their entry decisions on whether or not they can at least match the rates charged by ILECs. BellSouth argues that if these rates are lowered artificially by subsidies, but the incremental costs do not change, then competitors are likely to be deterred from entering the market. BellSouth concludes that this situation limits competition. BellSouth witness Banerjee offered testimony in this regard.

BellSouth further explains that there will never be competitive alternatives for customers who are receiving service at a price below the relevant cost of providing that service. As the price of service is raised to, and above, its relevant costs, such customers become more attractive to competitors, according to BellSouth witness Ruscilli.

<sup>5</sup> It is noteworthy that the ILECs have also agreed to the increase the number of customers to whom Lifeline is available to those whose income is 135% or less of the federal poverty level. This increases the pool of Lifeline eligible customers by approximately 119,000 when compared to the 125% standard required by Section 364.10.

Witness Gordon contends that when the price of services increases, a cash flow analysis would show that the investment project becomes more profitable (or less of a loss) and, thus, more attractive for new market entrants. Dr. Gordon adds that technology is changing so rapidly that competitive markets will do a much better job than a monopoly would of discovering which technologies can or cannot succeed in the long run. Dr. Gordon further opines that in order for the lowest cost mix of technologies to remain in the market, price and the signals it sends must not be distorted and must reflect the underlying cost of providing service.

BellSouth emphasizes that lowering intrastate access rates to parity with interstate rates eliminates an artificial discrepancy between two nearly identical services. Lower intrastate access rates make long distance calling more attractive for customers and competitors who wish to bundle long distance service with local service. BellSouth witness Banerjee testifies that the unevenness of the business market versus the residential market entry is attributable in large part to the relationship between end-user rates for basic local telephone service and UNE/UNE-P rates. Dr. Banerjee explains that generally the margins are far more substantial for business service. Unconstrained by public policy or regulation, the CLECs have gravitated naturally to business markets. As indicated by Dr. Gordon, the problem of an unattractive residential market may be worse in Florida than in other states because these other states have higher residential rates, indicating a greater need to rebalance the rates in Florida.

Verizon states that its rate rebalancing plan will bring the prices of its basic local services more in line with costs. Verizon asserts that prices that more closely reflect underlying costs, such as those proposed in its rate rebalancing plan, will increase the likelihood that competitive providers can offer services at a price equal to or lower than that offered by Verizon, and still remain profitable. Verizon contends that as a result, the reformed prices proposed in Verizon's rate rebalancing plan will make the local exchange market more attractive to competitors and induce enhanced market entry.

Verizon further contends that by removing implicit support from basic local exchange rates, competitors will be enticed into the market. Verizon contends that Knology's testimony that it decided to enter the Florida market following the passage of the access reduction legislation demonstrates that Verizon's rebalancing proposal will encourage competitive entry. Also, Verizon cites to Dr. Gordon's testimony, which includes statistical studies demonstrating that rebalancing will have a positive effect on competitive entry.

Sprint concurs with BellSouth and Verizon, stating that CLECs will benefit from the higher residential basic prices, without being required to reduce their own intrastate access prices. Sprint contends that rebalancing reduces risk for CLECs, improving the cash flow equation for serving residential customers. Sprint witness Staihr testifies that rebalancing rates for basic local service will create a situation where competitors will find that, on average, a larger percentage of the residential market will be financially attractive to serve. Witness Staihr states further that the current artificially low prices are unsustainable in the face of competition, and they come at a cost: (1) fewer options among services; (2) less innovation; and (3) in large portions of Sprint's territory, no competitive choices. Sprint concludes that rebalancing will induce enhanced market entry, thereby providing customers with the benefits of more choices, enhanced service offerings and greater innovation.

Knology states that the ILEC petitions should be granted because that decision will help to implement the policy underlying Section 364.164, Florida Statutes, and it will enhance the competitive choice available to Florida citizens. Knology identifies itself as a prime example of how granting the ILECs' Petitions will induce enhanced competition. As stated previously, Knology is a facilities-based intermodal competitor offering voice, video and data services over hybrid fiber coax (HFC) and fiber to the curb (FTTC) network in Panama City, with plans to expand in Pinellas County, Florida. Knology has been providing telecommunications services in Florida since 1997 and is currently providing its services to over 275,000 residential and business customers in Florida. Knology's witness Boccucci testified, however, that Knology's decisions on whether to further expand service in other Florida markets will be greatly influenced by whether or not the ILECs' Petitions are granted.

Knology witness Boccucci testified that the 2003 Act creates the regulatory environment necessary to attract capital investment to expand telephone competition in Florida. Knology contends that granting the ILEC petitions will allow it to attract and deploy new capital investment in Florida, thereby offering consumers a choice in facilities-based providers for new and advanced high-tech services. Knology asserts, however, that if the petitions are not granted, it will be forced to deploy capital in states with more favorable market conditions as it has done in the past.

AT&T and MCI state that economic theory demonstrates that a decrease in overpriced access charges together with an increase in the retail price of residential service will encourage market entry. AT&T and MCI contend that prices are a key signal to prospective entrants regarding the desirability of a particular market. Higher prices relative to cost provide greater inducements for entry. AT&T and MCI contend further that bundled offerings are undermined by excessive access charges, because the lower bound to which competitors can drive prices is defined by the artificially high level of access charges. The presence of excessive access charges will limit the ability of competitors to enter the market. AT&T/MCI witness Mayo offered testimony in this regard. Dr. Mayo opines that the reduction of existing access support will also make the market more attractive for traditional long distance companies to enter the telecommunications market.

Witnesses Mayo and Fonteix testified that the reduction and eventual elimination of the access support is critical to sustainable competition as it will allow CLECs to compete on a more equal footing. Witness Mayo explains that the anemic CLEC market share for residential customers provides prima facie evidence that low residential prices are inhibiting competitive entry.

AT&T states further that reducing intrastate access charges to parity will significantly reduce the ILECs' advantage of receiving large access charge subsidies, thereby moving ILECs and competitors closer to an equal footing and enhancing competition.

OPC responds that competition will not be enhanced to the residential consumer's benefit, although the ILECs' revenue from inelastic basic local service will be enhanced and the respective ILEC's market share will increase using revenues as a basis of measurement, according to OPC witness Ostrander. Witness Ostrander further contends that there will be no new or unique service introductions and no uniquely associated benefits of capital investment. OPC witness Gabel states that entry decisions are made on the basis of the expected total revenues and costs of all services an entrant can offer, not just one service. If total revenues cover total costs, it is completely irrelevant to a firm's decision to enter a market if one of the components of the offering (e.g. basic local service) may produce a loss according to some measure. Therefore, OPC surmises that a rise in total revenue from current levels may not be sufficient to allow entrants to overcome existing competitive barriers.

AARP concurs with OPC in its basic position that granting the ILECs' petitions will not induce enhanced market entry or increase competition. AARP witness Cooper argues that the Legislature intended that the ILECs be required to demonstrate that competition would, in fact, occur, as opposed to simply being more likely to occur, if the Petitions are approved. Witness Cooper further argues that none of the companies have provided such proof for any of their geographic areas. AARP contends that competition for bundled service is where the focus is in telecommunications. Therefore, AARP concludes that the shifting of costs from intraLATA long distance to basic service will have little, if any, impact on this competition since both are in the bundle.

However, Commission Staff witness Shafer testified that the likelihood of increased market entry is improved by granting the rebalancing petitions, particularly in those markets where profitability is marginal. Witness Shafer states that there appears to be a relationship between the subsidy and market entry, indicating that the removal of the subsidy will also increase market entry. Witness Shafer concludes that one can reasonably expect the ILECs' petitions will create additional market entry, particularly in markets that, to date, have been only marginally profitable or slightly unprofitable.

B. Findings and Decision

Upon consideration, we are persuaded that granting the ILEC petitions will induce enhanced market entry.

There are two types of evidence that the parties have presented in this case: empirical, which is based on real-life scenarios, and economic theory. We believe that the ILECs have offered strong theoretical and empirical evidence that the proposed changes to intrastate access charges and basic local service rates will improve the level of competition in many markets. The ILECs' witness Gordon testified that when the price of services increases, a cash flow analysis would show that investment in the market becomes more profitable and, thus, more attractive for market entry. BellSouth explains that if these rates are lowered artificially by subsidies but the incremental costs do not change, then competitors ineligible to receive the subsidy are likely to be deterred from entering the market. In addition, AT&T and MCI indicate that the reduction and eventual elimination of the access support is critical to sustainable competition as it will allow CLECs to compete on equal footing with the ILECs. We find that these arguments compelling. We conclude from the evidence presented that entry into the local telephone market is deterred if the ILECs' local service prices are below cost and that rate rebalancing is critical to actually promoting competition.

While OPC and AARP have expressed doubt about the effect that a reduction in access charges will have on competition, they have failed to convince us that these rate reductions will not induce enhanced market entry. To the contrary, Knology presents a model case on the impact that these reductions have had and will have on market entry by CLECs. Witness Boccucci testified that the granting of the ILEC petitions will allow Knology to attract and deploy new capital in Florida, thereby offering consumers a choice in facilities-based providers for new and advanced high-tech services. In addition, AT&T indicated that it has entered the BellSouth territory as a result of the 2003 Act.

We are persuaded that companies like Knology and AT&T provide the empirical evidence of how the ILECs' proposals will increase competition. We note that poor profitability, or limited profitability, is the main deterrent to market entry. We conclude that the evidence presented by the ILECs demonstrates that granting the petitions will induce enhanced market entry, thereby promoting competition, as required by Section 364.164(1)(b), Florida Statutes.

For almost 20 years, the telecommunications industry has been in transition from a monopolistic regime to a competitive one. While changes to Florida law and enactment of the Telecommunications Act of 1996 have made great strides in promoting competition, there is still a lack of widespread competition in the residential local exchange market. Implementation of the access reductions and offsetting rate increases permitted by the 2003 Act should serve to enhance competition in this important market.

Based on the foregoing, we find that the existing rate structure impairs competition for residential customers. Granting the ILECs' petitions will result in more attractive pricing for basic local telephone service, providing market entry opportunities for competitors that have been constrained by inefficient pricing in the past. Thus, we find that the petitions filed by BellSouth, Verizon and Sprint to reduce intrastate switched network access charges will induce enhanced market entry.

VIII. PARITY

In this section, we address the requirement of Section 364.164(1)(c) that any plan provide for intrastate access rates to be reduced to parity with interstate rates over a period of not less than two years or more than four years.

A. Arguments

Verizon contends that its proposal will reduce intrastate switched network access rates to interstate parity over a period of not less than two years or more than four years. Specifically, Verizon proposes to reduce its composite intrastate access total average revenue per minute (ARPM) from $.0485441 to $.0117043 in three increments over two years. The total Verizon reduction would be $76.2 million.

There was conflicting testimony in the record regarding whether Verizon's inclusion of its non-traffic sensitive interstate presubscribed interexchange carrier charge (PICC) in the calculation of its switched access charge reduction was appropriate. Verizon's witness Fulp testified that the PICC was included because its interstate access rates include both traffic sensitive and non-traffic sensitive charges. Witness Fulp asserts that the 2003 Act permits the inclusion of the PICC, since the 2003 Act defines the term "intrastate switched access rate" to include the carrier common line charge and the PICC is a federal common line charge. He asserts that because the Act includes common line charges in Verizon's intrastate access rates, the analogous PICC federal common line charge must be included in Verizon's calculation of the interstate ARPM for a consistent comparison.

Verizon's witness Fulp asserts that if the PICC is excluded from its calculation, Verizon would have to reduce its composite intrastate access rate by a greater amount than originally proposed. As such, to preserve revenue neutrality, Verizon's basic local rates would have to increase more than its original proposal. Specifically, the witness explained that if Verizon were to exclude the PICC from the parity calculation, Verizon would have to reduce its access revenues by $12,679,052 more than originally proposed, and, consequently, Verizon would have to increase its basic local revenues by a corresponding amount. The result would be an increase to Verizon's basic local rates of $0.86 more than Verizon originally proposed.

AT&T and MCI assert that Verizon's proposal does not correctly reduce its intrastate switched access rates to interstate parity. AT&T witness Fonteix contends that Verizon's inclusion of the PICC is inappropriate for two reasons. He contends that the PICC is not part of the intrastate rate elements. Witness Fonteix asserts that even if the PICC was appropriate for inclusion in the calculation, Verizon should have used the interstate minutes of use in calculating the ARPM rather than the intrastate minutes of use. Finally, Witness Fonteix argues that the PICC should have been excluded because the PICC charge applies to multiline business customers and the access charge reductions allow Verizon to collect business line revenue from all Florida residents.

rebalancing means that Verizon has failed to comply with the provisions of the Act requiring parity and revenue neutrality. They assert that Verizon's petition should be denied on these grounds.

Sprint asserts that its proposal will reduce intrastate switched network access rates to interstate parity over a period of not less than two years or more than four. Sprint contends that its petition, testimony, and exhibits demonstrate that rebalancing prices over a two-year period (three annual increments) will provide the marketplace with the appropriate competitive signals and will not result in consumer rate shock. Sprint's initial proposal was to reduce its access rate by $62,319,890 the first year, $56,211,862 the second year, and $23,541,711 the third year. Sprint's total proposed reduction is $125.2 million. However, during closing arguments Sprint agreed to spread its reduction and corresponding increase in four steps over a period of three years, consistent with the position advocated by Commission staff witness Shafer. Under Sprint's revised proposal, the basic local telecommunications services increases will be $2.25 the first year, $2.25 the second year, $1.50 the third year, and $0.86 the fourth year.

BellSouth contends that its proposal will reduce intrastate switched network access rates to interstate parity over a period of not less than two years or more than four. BellSouth asserts that its proposed increases will occur over three installments, 1st quarter 2004, 1st quarter 2005, and 1st quarter 2006. BellSouth presents two alternative methodologies by which parity can be achieved: "mirroring" and the "typical network." Witness Ruscilli testified that BellSouth's proposed reductions under either methodology will be 40% in the 1st quarter of 2004, 35% in the 1st quarter of 2005, and 25% in the 1st quarter of 2006. Witness Ruscilli further testified that BellSouth's proposal reaches parity in 24 months, consistent with the requirement in Section 364.164(1)(c), Florida Statutes, that parity be reached in not less than 2 years and not more than 4 years.

"mirroring" methodology appropriately quantifies the revenue impact of the intrastate rate reductions necessary to achieve parity by multiplying the demand times the difference between its intrastate and interstate tariffed rates. However, witness Fonteix asserts that BellSouth's "typical network" methodology is inappropriate because it targets only a select set of rate elements to equal interstate rate levels, and thus fails to address all of the rate elements in the statutory definition of intrastate switched network access rate.

Witness Shafer contends that Sprint should extend its implementation of access reductions and increases to basic local service rates by 12 months in order to mitigate rate shock to consumers. Witness Shafer testified that while the statute did not directly address or define rate shock, the statute does provide for a transition period for the access charge and basic local service rate adjustments of not less than 2 years and not more than 4 years. He asserts that due to this range it is reasonable to infer that the Legislature recognized the concept of rate shock or rate reasonableness. Witness Shafer asserts that it would be appropriate for Sprint to implement an additional incremental rate adjustment 36 months after the initial adjustment in order to complete its transition to parity. He argues that this would put Sprint's residential customers more on par with those of BellSouth and Verizon in terms of the amount of the increase they receive at any one time.

B. Findings and Decision

Section 364.164(1)(c), Florida Statutes, requires that we consider whether the Petitions will require intrastate switched network access rate reductions to parity over a period of not less than 2 years or more than 4 years. We find that each of the three amended Petitions meets the requirement of 364.164(1)(c), Florida Statutes.

As noted above, there was testimony regarding whether it was appropriate for Verizon to include the PICC in its access charge reduction calculation. Section 364.164(6), Florida Statutes, defines the term "intrastate switched network access rate" as:

. . . the composite of the originating and terminating network access rate for carrier common line, local channel/entrance facility, switched common transport, access tandem switching, interconnection charge, signaling, information surcharge, and local switching.
(Emphasis added.)

Based on the definition in the statute, as well as the testimony of witness Fulp, we are persuaded that the PICC can be included in the calculation of the interstate rate target, since it was developed to recover nontraffic sensitive charges that were originally in the traffic sensitive carrier common line charge. In construing the statute in this manner, we are mindful that the interpretation advocated by other parties would result in a higher overall charge to the consumer. Thus, we conclude that Verizon's explanation for inclusion of the PICC is not inconsistent with the statute and find that Verizon's methodology for calculating its switched access charge reduction complies with Section 364.164(1)(c), Florida Statutes.

We note that witness Shafer testified that it would be appropriate for Sprint to implement an additional incremental rate adjustment 36 months after the initial adjustment in order to complete its transition to parity. However, we find that Sprint's original proposal met the criteria set forth in Section 364.164(1)(c), Florida Statutes. We also note that Sprint subsequently agreed to spread its reduction and corresponding increase over a period of three years and that this revised proposal also meets the statutory criteria.

Finally, we address which of BellSouth's methodologies, "mirroring" or "typical network," is the appropriate method to be applied in the next section. However, we find that either method meets the "parity" criteria set forth in Section 364.164(1)(c), Florida Statutes.

IX. REVENUE NEUTRALITY

In this section, we address whether the ILECs' proposals will achieve revenue neutrality as required by Section 364.164(1)(d), Florida Statutes.

A. Arguments

Verizon contends that its rate rebalancing plan is revenue neutral, as defined in the statute. Verizon asserts the plan will reduce Verizon's intrastate switched network access rates by $76.2 million and offset that reduction with a corresponding increase in basic local rates. Verizon proposes incremental residential local service rate increases of $1.58 in its first increment, $1.58 in its second increment, and $1.57 in its third increment.<sup>6</sup> Verizon asserts that single-line business recurring rates will be raised to $32.00 per month. Verizon proposes to raise its network establishment charge and central office connection charges by $5.00 over three increments. Verizon proposes to raise its non-recurring single line business network establishment charges by $0.10.

Sprint asserts that, as demonstrated by the testimony and exhibits it filed, rebalancing will be accomplished in a revenue neutral manner. Sprint testified that it will be reducing its switched network access charges by a total of $142.1 million. Sprint initially proposed basic residential rate increases of $2.95 for increment one, $2.75 for increment two, and $1.16 for increment three for a total of $6.86. However, as noted previously, Sprint agreed in its closing argument to four incremental increases of $2.25 in 2004, $2.25 in 2005, $1.36 in 2006, and $1.00 in 2007. Sprint also proposes to increase its single-line business rates by $2.70 in the first increment, $2.40 in the second increment, and $0.90 in the third increment.

BellSouth argues that its proposal, using either methodology, reflects a reduction in intrastate access that will be rebalanced through increases in basic local exchange rates. Witness Hendrix explains that the "mirroring" methodology actually mirrors the recurring rate elements listed in Section 364.164(6), namely the carrier common line, local channel/entrance facility, switched common transport, access tandem switching, interconnection charge, signaling, information surcharge, and local switching. He testified that the revenue impact of reducing these elements to interstate parity is $136.4 million. Under the "mirroring" methodology, BellSouth would raise residential recurring rates a $1.39 in the first increase, $1.38 in the second increase, and $1.09 in the third increase, for a total of $3.86 per month. BellSouth proposes to raise single line business to $25 (rate groups 1-3), $28 (rate groups 4-6), and $30.20 (rate groups 7-11, X2, X4) in two equal installments. BellSouth also proposes to raise its non-recurring charges in three installments.

Witness Hendrix also explained that BellSouth's "typical network" methodology achieves parity by comparison of the "typical network" composite rate for interstate switched access with the composite rate for intrastate switched network access utilizing the rate elements in BellSouth's annual filing with this Commission, the Florida Access and Toll Report, Tables 1 and 2. He further testified that the revenue reduction resulting from the achievement of parity using the "typical network" methodology is $125.2 million. Under the "typical network" methodology, BellSouth would raise residential recurring rates a total of $3.50; $1.25 for the first increase, $1.25 for the second increase; and $1.00 for the third increase.<sup>7</sup> BellSouth's proposal to raise single line business rates remains the same as set forth under the "mirroring" methodology, as does its proposed increase in non-recurring charges.

Witness Hendrix asserts that the difference in the revenue impact between these two methodologies stems from the number of rate elements utilized in each methodology. He contends that both methodologies use the most recent 12-months' demand to determine the intrastate switched network access revenue reduction. He asserts that the "mirroring" methodology uses all of the recurring switched network access rate elements, whereas the "typical network" methodology uses the limited, specific rate elements that are considered to be representative of averages for BellSouth's network. Witness Hendrix testified that use of composites from a typical network is consistent with the Commission's past practice for determination of switched access revenue reductions.

AT&T and MCI contend that the ILECs' rebalancing proposals appear to be revenue neutral notwithstanding any failures to correctly reach interstate parity. Under the parity section, AT&T and MCI argued that BellSouth's "mirroring" methodology, but not the "typical network" methodology, meets the criteria for parity. As noted previously, witness Fonteix claims that BellSouth's "typical network" methodology targets only a select set of rate elements to equal interstate rate levels, and thus fails to address all of the rate elements in the statutory definition of intrastate switched network access rate.

AARP, Common Cause Florida, and Sugarmill Woods assert that the ILECs have not substantiated that their respective intrastate long distance rate reductions for residential customers will equal their corresponding basic long distance telecommunications service increases. They further assert that Verizon's inclusion of the interstate PICC end-user charge in its calculation of intrastate access charges for the purpose of rebalancing results in Verizon's failure to comply with the provisions of the Act requiring both parity and revenue neutrality. They conclude that Verizon's petition should be denied on these grounds.

The Attorney General argues that the ILECs have not substantiated that their respective intrastate long distance rate reductions for residential customers will equal their corresponding basic local telecommunications services increase. He argues that the ILECs have failed to demonstrate that the increase is revenue neutral.

B. Findings and Decision

AARP, Common Cause Florida, and Sugarmill Woods, articulate their specific position that because the PICC should not have been included in Verizon's switched network access charge reduction, Verizon's petition is not revenue neutral. For the reasons noted in the previous section, we find that it is appropriate for Verizon to include the PICC in its switched network access charge reduction calculation. Given that the PICC is appropriately included, we find that Verizon's proposed revenue reduction and basic rate increases are revenue neutral. Thus, we find that Verizon's proposal meets the criteria set forth in Section 364.164(1)(d), Florida Statutes. We also find that Sprint's proposed revenue reduction and basic rate increases are revenue neutral.

BellSouth has proposed two methodologies, "mirroring" and "typical network," which could be used to achieve revenue neutrality. We find that both the "mirroring" and "typical network" methodologies meet the statutory requirements for revenue neutrality. We note that the "typical network" methodology provides for less of an increase in basic local residential rates. Thus, we find it appropriate to approve the "typical network" methodology as the methodology which has a lesser impact on the local rates. In addition, we find that BellSouth's proposal meets the criteria set forth in Section 364.164 (1)(d), Florida Statutes.

Section 364.164(1)(d), Florida Statutes, requires that we consider whether approving the ILECs' proposals will be revenue neutral as defined in subsection (7) within the revenue category defined in subsection (2). Subsection (7) states that "revenue neutrality" means that the total revenue within the revenue category established by the statute remains the same before and after the local exchange telecommunications company implements any rate adjustments under this section. Subsection (2) states that once the ILEC petitions are granted, the local exchange telecommunications company is authorized to immediately implement a revenue category mechanism consisting of basic local telecommunications service revenues and intrastate switched network access revenues to achieve revenue neutrality. We find that each of the three amended Petitions meet the revenue neutrality requirement of 364.164(1)(d), Florida Statutes.

Furthermore, contrary to the position taken by the Attorney General in these proceedings as further elucidated in Section VI(C) of this Order, we find the statute does not require that implementation of the proposals be "bill neutral" to any particular customer or class of customers.

X. FLOW-THROUGH CONSIDERATIONS

In this section, we consider the proper application of Section 364.163, Florida Statutes. We note that for each of the flow-through issues, Common Cause Florida and Sugarmill Woods adopted the position of AARP.

A. Applicability and Content of Flow-Through Tariffs.

This section addresses which IXC's should be required to file flow-through tariffs and what information should accompany those filings.

1. Argument

AT&T and MCI argue that all IXC's should be required to flow through the switched access reductions they receive in order to keep long distance carriers on a level playing field. For competitive neutrality, any flow-through conditions imposed must be applied to all IXC's. However, AT&T and MCI would not be opposed to a de minimus threshold established by this Commission for those IXC's for which the flow-through would have no meaningful impact. Such threshold, however, should be set sufficiently low to allow only those IXC's with very low volume of access use to qualify.

BellSouth Long Distance notes that Section 364.163, Florida Statutes, requires that all IXC's who benefit from the access reductions must flow through the benefits. Also, a company's tariff filings should specify the rates to be reduced and contain a statement of the particular company's corresponding anticipated revenue reduction.

Sprint Communications Company's conditional position is that any IXC paying more than $1 million in access charges should be required to demonstrate that the required flow-through has occurred. It is not clear that the demonstration of flow-through should occur in the tariff filings. The demonstration of compliance with the statutory requirements should be up to each company and should insure that confidentiality is maintained where needed. Tariffs should reflect rates and charges that flow through benefits of reduced access charge prices.

Verizon Long Distance argues that any IXC that receives the benefit of intrastate switched access rate reductions must file intrastate tariffs (if tariff filings are required) flowing through such reductions. An IXC reseller should not be required to reduce prices to its customers unless it receives a reduction in the prices it is charged by its facilities-based supplier. IXCs should have the discretion to determine how to flow through the access charge reductions by lowering the in-state per minute rates, or monthly recurring plan charges, or both. If this Commission should decide to deregulate long distance services and eliminate long distance tariffing obligations, Verizon contends the reductions should be passed through to end users under end user service agreements.

OPC and AARP urge that all IXCs in Florida should be required to file tariffs and flow through the impacts of access rate reductions, except for those IXCs whose intrastate access expense reduction is $100 or less, per month. Those IXCs which are not required to flow through the reductions should attest to such, via a letter filed with this Commission. These flow-through reductions should be directed to residential customers in the same proportion as the basic local telephone service revenue increases proposed by the ILECs. Included in these tariff filings should be the information delineated in the testimony of witness Ostrander.

The Attorney General argues that all IXCs in Florida should be required to file tariffs and flow through the impacts of access rate reductions, except for those IXCs whose intrastate access expense reduction is $100 or less, per month. Those IXCs which are not required to flow through the reductions should attest to such, via a letter filed with this Commission.

2. Findings and Decision

There appears to be little disagreement among the parties as to the fact that the savings must be flowed through. There is disagreement, however, as to the type of documentation that should be required to demonstrate that this requirement has been met.

Upon consideration, all IXCs that paid $1 million or more in intrastate switched access charges within the most recent 12 month period shall include in their tariff filings: (1) a calculation of the dollar benefit associated with the LEC's intrastate access rate reductions; (2) separate demonstrations that residential and business long distance rates have been reduced and the estimated annualized revenue effect, residential and business, including how those estimates were made; and (3) a demonstration that all rate reductions have been flowed through.

Further, IXC's that paid less than $1 million in intrastate switched access charges within the most recent 12-month period shall include in their tariff filings a letter certifying that they paid less than $1 million in intrastate switched access charges within the most recent 12 month period, and that they have complied with each of the flow-through requirements as specified in Section 364.163(2), Florida Statutes. Any IXC whose intrastate switched access expense reduction is $100 or less per month shall not be obligated to flow through its reduction, but must attest to such through a letter filed with this Commission.

Finally, we direct our staff to work with the parties on an appropriate reporting format with consideration given to the formats used to demonstrate the 1998 access charge reduction flow throughs. In addition, our staff shall be diligent in assuring compliance with the requirements of this Order.

B. Timing

This section of our Order addresses the appropriate timing for filing of the IXC flow-through tariffs required by this Order.

1. Argument

AT&T and MCI state that it is unnecessary to set the exact same filing dates for both the ILECs and IXC's. They maintain the statute clearly requires the IXC's revenues to be reduced by the amount of access reductions it receives, but does not specify a time frame for making the reduction. They believe IXC's need a sufficient amount of time to both calculate the savings they will receive and to prepare tariffs for filing. As such, they argue that IXC's should be allowed 60 days from the date the ILEC files its access tariff revisions to file any IXC tariff revisions for flow-through. If this Commission chooses to mandate the ILEC and IXC tariffs be effective simultaneously, the ILEC access tariff revisions should be filed 60 days in advance of the effective date so that IXC's have the time necessary to conduct their analysis and file their tariffs, according to AT&T and MCI.

BellSouth Long Distance notes that affected IXC's should file their tariffs to flow through the access reductions within 15 days of the effective date of the last of the three ILEC's filings. This would allow the carriers to avoid unnecessary multiple filings.

Sprint Communications Company's position is that IXC's should be allowed to have up to 60 days from the time that ILEC's access reductions are effective in order to implement the tariff, billing and other administrative changes necessary to flow through the price adjustments.

Verizon Long Distance argues that facilities-based IXC's that benefit from reductions in the price of access should be required to pass through rate reductions via their intrastate tariffs (if tariffs are required), as soon as possible after the approved ILEC access rate reductions. Non-facilities-based IXC's should be required to flow through access charge reductions when they are received from the underlying facilities-based carrier. Since the flow-through of the access charges will require facilities-based carriers as well as IXC resellers, to make modifications to, for example, billing systems, rate tables, marketing and fulfillment materials, carriers should be given a reasonable amount of time to implement necessary plan and system changes before they are required to pass through access rate reductions.

On cross-examination, most of the IXC witnesses conceded that tariffs could be filed within 44 days after an ILEC's access charge tariff filing.

OPC, AARP and the AG all simply state that IXC's should be required to flow through the benefits of any rate reductions, via the tariffs, simultaneously with the approved ILEC access rate reductions.

2. Findings and Decision

Based on past experience with the 1998 access charge reduction flow-through, IXC's have not had difficulty complying with filing requirements as short as 21 and 30 days. We have heard no compelling testimony as to why, for the present dockets, 44 days from the filing of the LEC tariffs is not a reasonable time frame for filing of the IXC tariffs. The ILECs are required by Section 364.164(2), Florida Statutes, to give 45 days notice before tariffs go into effect, but IXC's need give only one day's notice. The goal of this requirement would be to have the ILEC and IXC tariffs become effective simultaneously. Accordingly, the IXC tariffs shall be required within 44 days after the filing of the ILECs tariffs, and the ILEC and IXC tariffs shall become effective simultaneously.

C. Duration of Revenue Reductions

Here, we address the appropriate duration of the IXC revenue reductions necessary to fully flow through the benefits of the access charge reductions to customers.

1. Argument

AT&T and MCI state that the highly competitive long distance market should and will decide this issue. They urge that specific restrictions have been unnecessary in the past, and could have negative consequences. In a highly competitive market, imposing any restrictions on the length of time a revenue reduction is in place could place the IXC's at a disadvantage in that it could prevent an IXC from implementing a pricing strategy that maximizes its competitive position. AT&T and MCI state that, should this Commission mandate the time period over which the reductions should be maintained, it would be the first time such a mandate has been imposed. In the earlier flow-throughs identified in these proceedings, this Commission did not impose a period of time that the rate reductions must be in place.

BellSouth Long Distance argues that, given the completely and irrevocably competitive nature of the intrastate interexchange long distance market in Florida, market forces will ensure that any long distance revenue reductions resulting from the flow-through of access charges will remain in place. There is significant and considerable competition among traditional long distance carriers as well as competition from other providers, such as voice over internet protocol providers and wireless carriers. According to BellSouth Long Distance, this competition will cause carriers to move their prices toward cost and prevent them from raising rates. Intrastate interexchange carriers should have the flexibility to change rates to meet market conditions, as long as they reduce their revenues in an amount equal to their access charge reductions.

Sprint Communications Company's conditional position is that market forces will insure that the revenue benefits of access reductions will be effective in maintaining the revenue benefits of the access reductions. Nevertheless, each provider required to make a flow-through filing should reduce average prices by an amount at least equivalent to the access reduction on a per minute basis and should maintain those average price reductions for all three years of the access reductions plus at least one additional year.

Verizon Long Distance urges that the long distance market is highly competitive in that the traditional wireline long distance carriers compete against each other as well as with wireless carriers, cable companies and IP telephony providers. Competition will ensure that IXCs flow through access reductions without any need for Commission intervention. Nevertheless, to remove any doubt about whether customers will actually receive the benefit of the access reductions, Verizon Long Distance (and its affiliates) agree to flow through the reductions for three years. After that time, Verizon Long Distance argue IXCs should be free to change their long distance rates in accordance with the demands of the marketplace.

OPC, AARP and the AG argue that the IXCs should be required to cap and maintain their long distance rate reductions for a period of three years after parity is achieved, as required by Section 364.163, Florida Statutes, and as further described by witness Ostrander.

2. Findings and Decision

We find that, in order to implement the intent of the statutory requirements, there needs be a period of rate certainty after parity is achieved. We are not, however, persuaded by the arguments that we should mandate that the reductions remain in effect for a period of three years after parity is achieved. This is contrary to the fact that the long distance market is highly competitive, and as noted by witness Kapka, market forces will likely prove effective in keeping long distance rates low over the long term. Accordingly, we find that rate reductions shall remain in effect for no less than one year subsequent to parity being accomplished.

D. Allocation of the Flow-Through Benefits between Residential and Business Customers.

Here, we address the proper method for allocating the flow-through benefits between residential and business customers.

1. Argument

AT&T and MCI argue that the 2003 Act simply requires the IXC's to return the benefits of access reductions to both residential and business customers. However, it does not micro-manage the IXC market by mandating a methodology or specific allocation between the customer classes. In doing so, the Act recognizes the competitive market will determine the specifics of the access flow-through. They argue the 2003 Act specifically has given IXC's the maximum flexibility to determine how best to make reductions that meet the needs of the market place. As long as both residential and business customers benefit, each IXC should be left to accomplish its flow-through consistent with its market needs, according to the companies. In addition, each IXC must eliminate any in-state connection fee by July 1, 2006.

BellSouth Long Distance urges that both residential and business customers must receive benefits from the reduction in access charges, but emphasizes that Section 364.163, Florida Statutes, does not require any specific allocation. Nonetheless, under current market conditions, and so long as the other carriers agree to do so, BellSouth Long Distance will allocate the revenue reductions in an approximately pro rata manner between residential and business customers based upon access minutes of use.

Sprint Communications Company states that the methodology contained in witness Kapka's direct testimony should be a guide for flow-through. In his testimony, witness Kapka explained his methodology as follows:

For services which are substantially used by residential subscribed customers, Sprint would determine the average revenue per minute for these services in the aggregate. With each reduction in access charges, Sprint would adjust the average revenue per minute for this base of customers such that the average revenue per minute would be reduced by an amount at least equal to the reduction in access charges per minute. . . . This general approach will ensure that the residential subscriber base will experience a reduction in long distance prices at a level at least as much as the reduction in access costs associated with long distance minutes that customer segment consumes.

Verizon Long Distance (and the Verizon affiliates) plan to flow through the benefits realized from access reductions to both residential and business customers based on the relative proportion of access minutes associated with those classes of customers. The amount of intrastate switched access that Verizon Select Services uses is significantly less than the amount that Verizon Long Distance uses.

The position of OPC, AARP and the AG is that the IXC's should allocate rate reductions between residential and business customers in the same proportion as the respective percent revenue increases for those two classes of customers that have been proposed by the ILECs.

2. Findings and Decision

Each of the IXC's has agreed that the allocation of rate reductions between the residential and business customer classes should be in proportion to the respective access minutes of use. While we have considered the argument that the reductions should be allocated in accordance with the increases on the local exchange side, we are not persuaded that this is feasible, economically appropriate, or even contemplated by the statute. Accordingly, we acknowledge the reasonableness of the IXC proposals that the allocation of the rate reductions being flowed through to residential and business customers on a pro-rata basis according to access minutes of use is reasonable.

XI. CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing, we hereby grant the Petitions of Verizon, Sprint, and BellSouth as filed in Dockets Nos. 030867-TL, 030868-TL, and 030869-TL, as amended by commitments made on the record at the final hearing. In doing so, we find that these Petitions meet the statutory criteria set forth in Section 364.164, Florida Statutes, and that granting the Petitions furthers the Legislature's stated policy of furthering competition in the local exchange market and promoting new offerings and innovations in the telecommunications market for Florida consumers.

I. INTRODUCTION AND HISTORY

The telecommunications industry is in transition from an industry characterized by regional monopolies to one characterized by national competition. For most of its history, telephone service was furnished on a monopoly basis by a single provider. In exchange for a statutory monopoly, the telephone company was subject to economic regulation that gave it the opportunity to earn a fair rate of return on its investment. In this monopoly regime, prices for long distance and other premium services were set substantially above cost based on value of service principles. At the same time, local telephone service was priced residually to advance the social policy goal of providing universal service.

Effective January 1, 1984, this monopoly regime was radically changed nationwide by the entry of the "modified final judgment"<sup>1</sup> which reorganized AT&T and divested it of its local telephone companies, restricted the operating areas of the local telephone companies, and provided for competitive interstate long distance service. See, Microtel, Inc. v. Florida Public Service Commission, 483 So.2d 415, 416 (Fla. 1986) (Microtel II). In apparent anticipation of the forthcoming consent judgment in the AT&T case, and motivated by a desire to promote competitive long distance telephone service within Florida, the Legislature in 1982 amended Florida law to allow the Commission to issue certificates for competitive intrastate long distance service. Id. at 417-418. As the Florida Supreme Court recognized in Microtel Inc. v. Florida Public Service Commission, 464 So.2d 1189, 1191 (Fla. 1985) (Microtel I), the 1982 Legislature made the "'fundamental and primary policy decision' that there be competition in long distance telephone services" in Florida.

As long distance competitors entered the market, state and federal regulators instituted a system of intercarrier compensation under which long distance companies paid "access charges" to the local exchange telephone companies for the use of the local networks to originate and terminate long distance calls. As the record reflects, these access charges were initially set to take the place of the revenue that had been provided by long distance service under the monopoly regime.

United States, 460 U.S. 1001 (1983), as subsequently modified by United States v. Western Electric Co., 569 F. Supp. 990 (D.D.C. 1983) and United States v. Western Electric Co., 569 F. for competition in the provision of local service. The Legislature found that "the competitive provision of telecommunications services, including local exchange service, is in the public interest and will provide customers with freedom of choice, encourage the introduction of new telecommunications service, encourage technological innovation, and encourage investment in telecommunications infrastructure." Section 364.01(3), Florida Statutes. In conjunction with the opening of the local exchange market to competition, the incumbent local exchange companies (ILECs) were permitted to elect to substitute price regulation for the former rate base, rate of return regulation. Section 364.051, Florida Statutes.

The opening of the Florida local market to competition was followed the next year by the enactment of the federal Telecommunications Act of 1996 (1996 Act). Pub. L. No. 104-104, 104th Congress 1996, 110 Stat. 56, 47 U.S.C. §§ et. seq. This act established a national framework to enable competitive local exchange carriers (CLECs) to enter the local telecommunications market and to allow the former Bell Operating Companies to reenter the interLATA long distance market. The purpose of the 1996 Act was to bring the benefits of competition to all telecommunications markets by creating a pro-competitive, de-regulatory national policy framework. Senate Rpt. 104-023, entitled "Telecommunications Competition" (March 30, 1995).

Over the 19 years since the introduction of long distance competition, both interstate access charges and intrastate access charges have been reduced. Despite these reductions, the record shows that intrastate access charge rates in Florida are among the highest in the nation and are substantially above interstate access charge rates. The record also shows, as further analyzed in Section VI(B) of this Order, that intrastate long distance rates in Florida (through which an IXC must recover, among other things, its intrastate access charge costs) are likewise among the highest in the nation, and are substantially above interstate long distance rates. Local service rates in Florida, however, are the lowest in the Southeast.

are facing increased competition from providers using alternative technologies such as wireless, cable, and voice over internet protocol (VoIP). See FPSC Annual Report on Competition (June 30, 2003).

Against this backdrop, the Florida Legislature, during the 2003 Regular Session, enacted the Tele-Competition Innovation and Infrastructure Enhancement Act (2003 Act), which became effective on May 23, 2003. In broad terms, the 2003 Act allows the Commission to consider whether allowing the ILECs to reduce their intrastate access charges to interstate levels, and to make offsetting increases in local service rates, will further the Legislature's goal of increasing competition in the local telephone market. By returning some regulation of intrastate access charges to the Commission, the Legislature has given us the tools to address the question of whether access charges in fact support artificially low local service rates that may be impairing the implementation of competition in the local telephone market.

A key provision in the 2003 Act, Section 364.164, Florida Statutes, provides a process by which ILECs may petition this Commission to reduce their intrastate switched network access rates in a revenue-neutral manner. We are required by law to issue our final order granting or denying any such petition within 90 days of the filing. In reaching our decision, Section 364.164(1), Florida Statutes, sets forth four mandatory criteria we must consider. Those criteria are:

[W]hether granting the petition will:

- (a) Remove current support for basic local telecommunications services that prevents the creation of a more attractive competitive local exchange market for the benefit of residential consumers.
  - (b) Induce enhanced market entry.
  - (c) Require intrastate switched network access rate reductions to parity over a period of not less than 2 years or more than 4 years.

- (d) Be revenue neutral as defined in subsection (7), within the revenue category defined in subsection (2).

In laymen's terms, subsection (1)(d) means that any ILEC that is permitted to reduce its intrastate switched network access rates may offset those reductions through simultaneous increases in the local rates charged to its flat-rate residential and single-line business customers.

In addition, Section 364.163(2), Florida Statutes, provides a mechanism to ensure that any IXC that receives the benefits of access charge rate reductions will flow those benefits through to both residential and business customers in the form of lower intrastate long distance rates:

Any intrastate interexchange telecommunications company whose intrastate switched access rate is reduced as a result of the rate adjustments made by a local exchange telecommunications company in accordance with s. 364.164 shall decrease its intrastate long distance revenues by the amount necessary to return the benefits of such reduction to both its residential and business customers. The intrastate interexchange telecommunications company may determine the specific intrastate rates to be decreased, provided that residential and business customers benefit from the rate decreases. Any in-state connection fee or similarly named fee shall be eliminated by July 1, 2006, provided that the timetable determined pursuant to s. 364.164(1) reduces intrastate switched network access rates in an amount that results in the elimination of such fee in a revenue-neutral manner. The tariff changes, if any, made by the intrastate interexchange telecommunications company to carry out the requirements of this subsection shall be presumed valid and shall become effective on 1 day's notice.

Section 364.163(3) gives this Commission continuing regulatory oversight regarding the access charge reduction flow-throughs described in subsection (2).

Finally, the 2003 Act amended Section 364.10 to provide increased protection to economically disadvantaged customers. This section requires any ILEC that reduces its access charges (and increases its local rates) pursuant to Section 364.164 to make its Lifeline Assistance Plan available to customers with incomes at or below 125% of the federal poverty level, up from 100% or less under the prior law.

Our jurisdiction in this matter arises from the above statutory provisions.

II. CASE BACKGROUND

On August 27, 2003, Verizon Florida Inc. (Verizon), Sprint-Florida, Incorporated (Sprint), and BellSouth Telecommunications, Inc. (BellSouth), each filed petitions pursuant to Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. Dockets Nos. 030867-TL (Verizon), 030868-TL (Sprint), and 030869-TL (BellSouth) were opened to address these petitions in the time frame provided by Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. On September 4, 2003, the Order Establishing Procedure and Consolidating Dockets for Hearing, Order No. PSC-03-0994-PCO-TL, was issued. At the September 15, 2003, Agenda Conference, the Commission decided to hold public hearings in the above referenced dockets.

On September 3, 2003, the Office of Public Counsel (OPC) filed Motions to Dismiss the Petitions in each of these dockets on the grounds that the Petitions proposed to make rate changes over one year, rather than the two year minimum required by Section 364.164(1)(c). On September 10, 2003, Verizon filed its Response to OPC's Motion to Dismiss. Also on September 10, 2003, Sprint and BellSouth filed their Joint Response to OPC's Motion to Dismiss. At the September 30, 2003, Agenda Conference, we voted to dismiss Verizon, Sprint, and BellSouth's Petitions with leave to amend within 48 hours to address the Commission's determination regarding the application of the two-year time frame in Section 364.164(1)(c), Florida Statutes. On September 30, October 1, and October 2, 2003, respectively, BellSouth, Sprint, and Verizon filed their amended petitions.

IXCs' flow-through to customers of any access charge reductions, into this proceeding for hearing. By Order No. PSC-03-1269-PCO-TL, the procedure in these consolidated Dockets was amended to include additional testimony filing dates and issues to reflect the consolidation of Docket No. 030961-TI. A hearing on this matter was held on December 10-12, 2003.

In this matter, we received the testimony of 26 witnesses on behalf of the ILECs, intervenors, the consumer advocates, and our own Commission staff. We also received testimony from customers at 14 customer service hearings conducted throughout the state, as well as written comments from customers submitted to the docket files associated with this case. In addition, we received into evidence 86 exhibits. We have carefully considered the evidence received in its entirety, as well as the arguments of counsel. Based thereon, we hereby render our decision on the issues presented.

III. MOTIONS

Three motions remained outstanding at the start of our hearing in this matter -- two motions for reconsideration of prior orders and one motion for entry of a summary final order. As a preliminary matter, we addressed the motions as follows:

A. Joint Petitioners Motion for Reconsideration of Order No. PSC-03-1269-PCO-TL, issued Nov. 10, 2003 - Second Order Modifying Procedure for Consolidated Dockets to Reflect Additional Docket, Associated Issues, and Filing Dates

This motion asked that the Commission reconsider the inclusion of Issues 6-10 in the Second Order Modifying Procedure. The motion argued that the inclusion of those issues, which relate to the IXCs' flow-through of any access charge reductions they receive, inappropriately imposed additional criteria on the Joint Petitioners' Petitions for switched network access rate reductions that go beyond the four mandatory criteria enumerated in Section 364.164(1). The Office of Public Counsel filed a response to this Motion on behalf of the Citizens. Upon consideration, we granted the Petitioners' request for oral argument on this Motion at the outset of the hearing.

The standard of review for a motion for reconsideration is whether the motion identifies a point of fact or law which was overlooked or which the Commission failed to consider in rendering its Order. See, Stewart Bonded Warehouse, Inc. v. Bevis, 294 So. 2d 315 (Fla. 1974); Diamond Cab Co. v. King, 146 So. 2d 889 (Fla. 1962); and Pingree v. Quaintance, 394 So. 2d 162 (Fla. 1st DCA 1981). In a motion for reconsideration, it is not appropriate to reargue matters that have already been considered. Sherwood v. State, 111 So. 2d 96 (Fla. 3rd DCA 1959); citing State ex. rel. Jaytex Realty Co. v. Green, 105 So. 2d 817 (Fla. 1st DCA 1958). Furthermore, a motion for reconsideration should not be granted "based upon an arbitrary feeling that a mistake may have been made, but should be based upon specific factual matters set forth in the record and susceptible to review." Stewart Bonded Warehouse, Inc. v. Bevis, 294 So. 2d 315, 317 (Fla. 1974). This standard is equally applicable to reconsideration by the Commission of a Prehearing Officer's order. See, Order No. PSC-96-0133-FOF-EI, issued January 29, 1996, in Docket No. 950110-EI.

Throughout this proceeding, one hotly contested issue has been whether, in making its determination to grant or deny the Petitions, the Commission can consider only the four mandatory criteria enumerated in Section 364.164(1) or whether it is also required or permitted to consider the extent to which residential customers whose local rates would be increased if the Petitions are granted are likely to benefit from offsetting long distance rate decreases. This is ultimately an issue of statutory construction which we indicated on several occasions would be considered at the conclusion of the evidentiary hearing.

The thrust of the Petitioners' motion for reconsideration is that the inclusion of Issues 6 through 10 in the Second Order Modifying Procedure improperly introduced consideration of this long distance rate impact into the proceedings on their Petitions. OPC, on the other hand, argues that these Issues were properly included, since the Commission must consider the combined impact on residential customers of any local rate increases and any long distance rate decreases.

Upon consideration, we conclude that the Motion for Reconsideration does not identify a mistake of fact or law made by the Prehearing Officer in rendering his decision. The determination about which the Joint Petitioners express concern is not one made by the Prehearing Officer in his Order. The Prehearing Officer did not impose additional requirements on the ILECs' Petitions to reduce access charges; instead, he included additional issues for consideration in this proceeding based upon our decision to consolidate Docket No. 030961-TI with Dockets Nos. 030867-TL, 030868-TL, and 030869-TL for hearing. His Order clearly set forth that this is the basis upon which he modified the schedule and the issues list for the proceeding. As such, his decision is not only correct, but needs no clarification. The decision to consolidate Docket No. 030961-TI was made by this Commission in Order No. PSC-03-1240-PCO-TP, issued November 4, 2003. Reconsideration of that decision was not requested. The Prehearing Officer's Order merely implements that decision by amending the schedule and including issues to reflect the consolidation. As for the legal issue raised by the Joint Petitioners, that being whether we should consider impacts on the toll market in making our decision on the ILECs' Petitions, that issue was not addressed by the Prehearing Officer and remains for decision by this Commission at the conclusion of the hearing. For these reasons, the Joint Motion For Reconsideration is denied.

B. OPC's Motion for Reconsideration of Order No. PSC-03-1331-FOF-TL (filed Dec. 5, 2003) / AARP's Motion for Reconsideration of Same Order (filed Dec. 8, 2003) (The Attorney General Joined in the Motions on December 9)

These motions asked that we reconsider certain language in our Order denying AARP's Motion to Dismiss these cases for failure to join the IXC's as indispensable parties. OPC and AARP argue that the language contained in the order did not accurately capture the rationale for the Commission's decision as expressed during the Commission's deliberations on that motion. A response in opposition was filed by the Joint Petitioners on December 9, 2003. We received additional argument on this Motion at the outset of the hearing.

While we do not believe that reconsideration is appropriate in this instance, upon consideration of the arguments and review of the Order itself, we do believe that some clarification is in order. It is clear that certain language included in the Order could be misconstrued. Therefore, Order No. PSC-03-1331-FOF-TL, at pages 11 and 12, is amended and clarified as reflected in the following type and strike version:

In reaching this conclusion, we refer to the language of Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. Contrary to AARP's assertions, none of the four mandatory criteria set forth for our consideration in addressing the petitions mandates necessitates participation by the IXCs. ~~As plainly stated by the Legislature,~~ The first factor set forth in Section 364.164(1), Florida Statutes, for our consideration does not mandate that direct the Commission to consider how the ILECs' proposals will affect the toll market "for the benefit of residential consumers." Instead, the plain language states that consideration should be given to whether granting the petitions will:

~~As such, the relevant market for use in making the final determination on the Petitions is the local exchange market. Thus, we find that, for purposes of Section 364.164, Florida Statutes, consideration of the impact on the toll market (and resulting impact on toll customers) is not required for the Commission's full and complete determination of the Petitions.<sup>3</sup> In reaching this conclusion, we do not find that we are precluded from such consideration, rather we conclude only that we are not required to do so.~~

~~The language of Section 364.164, Florida Statutes, appears clear; thus, under principles of statutory interpretation, this Commission need not look further to divine the Legislature's intent. Southeastern Utilities Service Co. v. Redding, 131 So.2d 1 (Fla. 1950).~~ That said, we nevertheless acknowledge AARP's contention that the Legislature considered the impacts on customers' toll bills in passing the new legislation.<sup>4</sup> We emphasize, though, that the Legislature did address the impact on the toll market if the Petitions are granted, but it did so through a separate section of the statutes, Section 364.163, wherein intrastate toll providers are required to pass the benefits of the access charge reductions on to their residential and business customers. This Commission is charged under that section with ensuring that reductions are, in fact, flowed through.

C. Attorney General's Motion for Summary Final Order, filed Nov. 17 (AARP and OPC Joined in the Motion)

The Attorney General moved for a summary final order on the grounds that the record raises no genuine issue of fact regarding whether granting the Petitions will benefit residential consumers. Verizon, AT&T/MCI, BellSouth, and Sprint timely filed responses to the Motion. We received argument on this Motion at the hearing.

As became clear from the oral argument on this motion, the underlying contention by the Attorney General, OPC, and AARP is that Section 364.164 requires the Petitioners to demonstrate that residential consumers will benefit from long distance rate reductions, and that the prefiled testimony and exhibits showed that such benefits are not sufficient to offset the impact of the proposed local rate increases. The opponents of the motion contended that no such showing is required, and that the prefiled testimony establishes that residential customers will benefit from increased competition if the Petitions are granted.

Rule 28-106.204(4), Florida Administrative Code, provides:

Any party may move for summary final order whenever there is no genuine issue as to any material fact. The motion may be accompanied by supporting affidavits. All other parties may, within seven days of service, file a response in opposition, with or without supporting affidavits. A party moving for summary final order later than twelve days before the final hearing waives any objection to the continuance of the final hearing.

The standard for granting a summary final order is very high. The purpose of summary judgment, or in this instance summary final order, is to avoid the expense and delay of trial when no dispute exists concerning the material facts. The record is reviewed in the light most favorable to the party against whom the summary judgment is to be entered. When the movant presents a showing that no material fact on any issue is disputed, the burden shifts to his opponent to demonstrate the falsity of the showing. If the opponent does not do so, summary judgment is proper and should be affirmed. The question for determination on a motion for summary judgment is the existence or nonexistence of a material factual issue. There are two requisites for granting summary judgment: first, there must be no genuine issue of material fact, and second, one of the parties must be entitled to judgment as a matter of law on the undisputed facts. See, Trawick's Florida Practice and Procedure, §25-5, Summary Judgment Generally, Henry P. Trawick, Jr. (1999).

In summary, under Florida law, "the party moving for summary judgment is required to conclusively demonstrate the nonexistence of an issue of material fact, and . . . every possible inference must be drawn in favor of the party against whom a summary judgment is sought." Green v. CSX Transportation, Inc., 626 So. 2d 974 (Fla. 1st DCA 1993) (citing Wills v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 351 So. 2d 29 (Fla. 1977)). Furthermore, "A summary judgment should not be granted unless the facts are so crystallized that nothing remains but questions of law." Moore v. Morris, 475 So. 2d 666 (Fla. 1985); City of Clermont, Florida v. Lake City Utility Services, Inc., 760 So. 1123 (5th DCA 2000).

The parties disagree on the proper interpretation of Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. We find, based on the pleadings, the arguments, and the prefiled testimony, there are genuine issues of material fact in dispute, regardless of whose statutory interpretation is ultimately determined to be correct. Since the motion must be viewed in the light most favorable to the parties against whom the motion is sought, the Motion must be denied in this case. In reaching this conclusion, we make no determination on the legal or factual issues to be addressed through the hearing. Rather, we conclude only that the high standard for granting a summary final order has not been met.

IV. STATUTORY INTERPRETATION

The question of the proper interpretation of Section 364.164 is one that has been raised time and again in this case in various motions, testimony, and in this Commission's own comments. We carefully withheld ruling on the question of whether Section 364.164, Florida Statutes, is ambiguous until after conclusion of the evidentiary hearing and the closing arguments of counsel. It is important to address this question before reaching the other issues in the case, because our decision will determine whether we can consider arguments and evidence presented in the case regarding the Legislative history and intent of the statute.

The law on this aspect of statutory interpretation is clear. When interpreting statutory provisions, one first should look to the provision at issue to determine whether the "language is clear and unambiguous and conveys a clear and definite meaning. . . ." Holly v. Auld, 450 So. 2d 217 (Fla. 1984), citing A.R. Douglass Inc. v. McRaney, 102 Fla. 1141 (1931). If the meaning is clear, there is no need to resort to statutory interpretation. Furthermore, an unambiguous statutory provision cannot be construed to extend, modify, or limit its express terms or its reasonable and obvious implications. Holly, at 219. However, a statute should not be given its literal reading if such reading would lead to an unreasonable conclusion. Id.

Section 364.164 sets forth the criteria we must consider in determining whether to grant the ILECs' petitions. Those criteria are as follows:

[W]hether granting the petition will:

- (a) Remove current support for basic local telecommunications services that prevents the creation of a more attractive competitive local exchange market for the benefit of residential consumers.
- (b) Induce enhanced market entry.
- (c) Require intrastate switched network access rate reductions to parity over a period of not less than 2 years or more than 4 years.
- (d) Be revenue neutral as defined in subsection (7) within the revenue category defined in subsection (2).

The ILECs argue that this language clearly expresses the Legislature's intent and, thus, is not subject to interpretation. The OPC, the Attorney General, and AARP present a vastly differing interpretation of the statute, and have offered into evidence and in their arguments the Legislative history of the bill. Each side offers tenable arguments regarding how the statute could be interpreted. We note that the lack of clarifying language or punctuation in the provisions at issue contributes to the differing interpretations. As such, having considered the arguments and the language of the statute itself, we find that the language of Section 364.164, Florida Statutes, is not clear on its face and, thus, is subject to statutory interpretation. Having reached this conclusion, our decisions as set forth below reflect our interpretation of the Legislature's intent as gleaned from the Legislative history, including consideration of the potential impacts of granting the Petitions on the toll rates paid by residential customers.

V. SUMMARY OF DECISION

As discussed in more detail later in this order, we find and conclude, based on the record, that:

1. Intrastate access rates currently provide support for basic local telecommunications services that would be reduced by bringing such rates to parity with interstate access rates.
  2. The existence of such support prevents the creation of a more attractive competitive local exchange market by keeping local rates at artificially low levels, thereby raising an artificial barrier to entry into the market by efficient competitors.
  3. The elimination of such support will induce enhanced market entry into the local exchange market.
  4. Enhanced market entry will result in the creation of a more competitive local exchange market that will benefit residential consumers through:
    - a. increased choice of service providers;
    - b. new and innovative service offerings, including bundles of local and long distance service, and bundles that may include cable TV service and high speed internet access service;
    - c. technological advances;
    - d. increased quality of service; and
    - e. over the long run, reductions in prices for local service.
  5. The ILECs' proposals will reduce intrastate switched network access rates to parity over a period of not less than two years or more than four years.
  6. The ILECs' proposals will be revenue neutral within the meaning of the statute, which permits access charge reductions to be offset, dollar for dollar, by increases in basic local service rates for flat-rate residential and single-line business customers.

7. Because of the mandatory flow-through provisions of Section 364.163, approval of the plans will be financially neutral to the IXC's, who are required to reduce their intrastate toll rates and charges to consumers to offset the benefit of any access charge reductions the IXC's receive.

8. Contrary to the position taken by the Attorney General in these proceedings, the statute does not require that implementation of the proposals be "bill neutral" to any particular customer or class of customers.

9. We are not mandated by Section 364.164 to consider the impact of the proposals on toll rates paid by residential consumers. However, consistent with the legislative history of the 2003 Act, we conclude that we are permitted to do so. In this regard, we find that many residential customers will benefit directly from the elimination of in-state connection fees and reductions in per-minute intrastate toll rates. We also find that residential customers as a whole will enjoy prices for toll services that are closer to economic costs and, therefore, will have less of a repressive effect on long distance usage. We also find that under the long distance rate reduction plans offered by the IXC's, residential customers as a whole will get a proportionate share of any toll rate reductions based on their share of total access minutes of use.

10. Experience from other states that have rebalanced local and toll rates shows that approval of the ILEC's proposals will have little, if any, negative impact on the availability of universal service. While no customer likes to see a rate increase, the record shows that basic local service will continue to remain affordable for the vast majority of residential customers.

11. Although we find that it is not a benefit that we should weigh in the balance in considering whether or not to grant the Petitions, the amended Lifeline provisions in Section 364.10 will help to protect economically disadvantaged consumers from the effect of local rate increases. This protection is enhanced by the ILECs' agreement to further increase the eligibility criteria for Lifeline assistance from 125% to 135% of the federal poverty level, increasing the number of customers eligible for the program by approximately 119,000, and to protect Lifeline recipients against basic local service rate increases for four years. Although we cannot predict the future with certainty, economic theory suggests, and we are encouraged to believe, that the establishment of a more competitive local market will put downward pressure on local exchange prices that will eventually reduce the need for targeted assistance programs such as Lifeline.

VI. REMOVAL OF CURRENT SUPPORT

In this section, we address whether the ILECs' proposals meet the requirements of Section 364.164(1)(a), Florida Statutes. For clarity of analysis, we have considered these requirements in three parts: (A) what is a reasonable estimate of the level of support for basic service provided by access charges; (B) does that support prevent the creation of a more attractive local exchange market; and (C) would the creation of a more attractive local exchange market benefit residential consumers.

1. Arguments

Verizon contends that its basic local services receive support from its network access charges, and that its plan removes this support by bringing the prices of those services more in line with costs. Verizon asserts that removing support for basic local services will promote local exchange competition for the benefit of residential customers. Verizon contends that it will make residential customers more attractive to competitors and thus induce enhanced market entry, encourage innovation, and promote increased freedom of choice. Verizon asserts that the plan will also reduce intrastate access rates, thereby allowing residential customers to make more long distance calls at lower prices. Verizon, along with BellSouth and Sprint, sponsored the testimony of Dr. Kenneth Gordon addressing this issue. Verizon's witnesses Fulp and Danner also offered testimony in this regard.

Verizon states that for purposes of this proceeding, it seeks to remove $76.2 million of support from basic local telecommunication services. Verizon contends that this amount is necessary to bring its intrastate switched network access rate to parity with its interstate switched network access rate.

Likewise, Sprint argues that the level of support provided for basic local services by intrastate switched network access rates in excess of parity in Sprint's service areas is $142,073,492 per year, based upon current access minutes of use. Sprint offered the testimony of witnesses Dickerson, Felz, and Staihr on this issue.

BellSouth emphasizes that this Commission has already found that BellSouth's residential rates receive support from access charges, which is further buttressed by the detailed testimony of BellSouth's witness Bernard Shell, particularly the information in witness Shell's exhibit WBS-1 (Hearing Exhibit 53). This support from above-parity intrastate access charges ranges from $125.2 million to $136.4 million per year, depending on the method used to perform the calculation. BellSouth maintains that its proposal will remove current support for basic local telecommunications services, and will bring the rates for basic local exchange service to a level that encourages competitive entry in the local exchange market. BellSouth argues that this is evidenced, in part, by the testimony of AT&T and Knology in this proceeding. BellSouth adds that residential customers will benefit from having new choices of providers and services that additional competition will bring and will also benefit from the pass-through of access charge reductions in the form of reduced toll rates. To address this aspect of its petition, BellSouth submitted the testimony of its witnesses Shell and Banerjee.

Knology asserts that granting these petitions will materially diminish the current support for basic local telecommunications services. Knology contends that this support prevents creation of a more competitive market. Knology asserts that diminution of the support will spur additional competition. Knology states that its experience in its existing markets provides examples of how the entry of a facilities-based competitor for telephone service expands the products available to consumers, increases the customer service levels, and promotes product and pricing competition.

AT&T and MCI agree that the ILEC proposals will remove current support for basic local telecommunications services by simultaneously reducing intrastate switched access rates that have been established at economically inefficient levels through the residential rate setting process and adjusting local exchange rates upward on a revenue neutral basis. They assert that through the process of residual ratemaking, intrastate switched access charges have been historically elevated well above their relevant economic cost and the surplus has served as residual support for basic local telecommunications services. Dr. John Mayo testified on AT&T and MCI's behalf on this point.

OPC asserts that residential basic local telephone service is not subsidized by access service or any other service. OPC contends that the ILECs' petitions, therefore, do not remove current support, because there is none. OPC further asserts that Basic Local Telecommunication Services (BLTS) are not supported by the rates for intrastate access, because the existing BLTS rates exceed their incremental costs. AARP, Common Cause, and Sugarmill Woods agree to a large extent, although they further argue that there is no support, because the loop itself is a common cost that should be fully allocated among all services that use the loop. Dr. David Gabel provided testimony on behalf of OPC addressing this issue, while Dr. Mark Cooper testified on behalf of AARP.

2. Findings and Decision

We find that the ILECs' access charge rates provide support to local exchange service. In making this determination, we accept the economic testimony of the ILECs' and IXCs' witnesses, which treat the cost of the local loop as a cost of basic local service. In particular, the testimony shows there is no economic principle requiring that the cost of that loop be allocated across other ancillary services that are provided over the loop.

We are not persuaded by the testimony of AARP and OPC's witnesses that all or some of the cost of the local loop should be shared, such that any costs shared by more than one service would be excluded from the ILECs' Total Service Long Run Incremental Cost (TSLRIC) calculations. This would be inconsistent with our past decisions, perhaps most notably in our 1998 Report on Fair and Reasonable Rates to the Legislature, that the costs associated with the local loop should not be allocated. The arguments raised by OPC and AARP have been considered and rejected in the past, and we find no new persuasive basis upon which to deviate from our consistent policy on this issue.

We note that the record raises some concern about the cost information provided in the proceeding by the ILECs. For instance, BellSouth's use of model inputs is inconsistent with past Commission decisions in the Docket No. 990649-TP, in which we established rates for unbundled network elements (UNEs). Also, we find that Verizon's use of interstate minutes to calculate switching and transport costs is problematic, and that Sprint and BellSouth's use of retail costs appears to be excessive, particularly since they do not differentiate between costs that apply to basic local service and costs that apply to all other services. Nevertheless, after weighing all the evidence, we find that the correction of these deficiencies would not alter our conclusion that local exchange rates are supported by intrastate access charge rates; that the ILECs have, in fact, provided a reasonable estimate of the level of support for basic local telecommunications service; and that their proposals appropriately remove that support as required by the statute. In reaching this decision, we do not in any way indicate agreement with the ILECs' costs, inputs, or methodologies considered herein for any purpose beyond this proceeding.

In addition, we note that AT&T/MCI witness Mayo emphasized that the statute does not require removal of a pure economic subsidy, but rather "support" for basic local service. Thus, he disputes witnesses Gabel and Cooper's arguments that there is no subsidy to be removed. We also find this argument persuasive in view of the plain language of the statute.

B. SUPPORT PREVENTS THE CREATION OF A MORE ATTRACTIVE

1. Arguments

Verizon contends that its current residential basic monthly rates are well below incremental cost, and therefore impair competition for residential customers. Verizon asserts that the availability of local service at supported prices limits the prices that competitive local providers can charge. Verizon contends that to the extent that competitive providers' costs are similar to Verizon's, the existing supported prices make it economically infeasible for those providers to compete. Dr. Gordon spoke to this issue on behalf of the three ILECs. In addition, Verizon offered the testimony of witness Danner in this regard.

Sprint contends that the presence of heavily supported residential basic local service acts as an obstacle to the creation of widespread residential local competition. The removal of this obstacle, according to Sprint, is the goal of the 2003 Act. Sprint's witness Staihr spoke to this issue.

BellSouth again contends that we have already determined that its residential rates are supported. BellSouth emphasizes that the testimony of its witness Shell lends further support to the argument that removal of the support for basic local service will bring rates to a level that encourages competition, leading to new choices for consumers, as well as reduced toll rates. BellSouth's witnesses Ruscilli and Banerjee offered additional testimony on this point.

Knology maintains that granting these petitions will materially diminish the current support for basic local telecommunications services. Knology asserts that this support prevents creation of a more competitive market and that diminution of the support will spur additional competition.

AT&T and MCI assert that the currently excessive intrastate switched access charge rate levels make it difficult for a telecommunications company to enter the local exchange market and compete against incumbent providers whose local rates are supported by access charges; the support allows incumbent providers to

subject their competitors to an anticompetitive price squeeze. AT&T and MCI contend that excessive access charges further depress competition by limiting competitors' ability to compete across the full range of service categories. Dr. Mayo addressed this aspect of the ILEC Petitions on behalf of AT&T and MCI.

Although their analysis differs somewhat, OPC, AARP, Common Cause Florida, and Sugarmill Woods each contend there is no support for basic local service; therefore, raising current prices will not create a more attractive competitive local exchange market for the benefit of residential consumers. They contend that the existing levels of basic local telecommunications service rates have minimal, if any, impact on making the local exchange market more attractive to competitors. Drs. Gabel and Cooper also provided testimony in this regard on behalf of OPC and AARP, respectively.

The Commission staff offered the testimony of witness Ollila for purposes of providing additional perspective on this issue by way of the Commission's 2002 Report on Competition in Telecommunications Markets in Florida. In addition, the 2003 Report was received into the record as a stipulated exhibit.

2. Findings and Decision

Upon consideration, we agree with witness Gordon that the current level of support has allowed residential rates to remain lower than they would be in an undistorted competitive market, and that they are, in fact, lower than in other states in our region. We can find no basis in economics for the underpricing of basic service which is demand-inelastic relative to usage. Except for a limited range of residential customers, it is not economically feasible for a CLEC to price complementary products and packages in a manner that would allow it to make up for lack of profitability in the provision of basic service. As a result, there is little opportunity or ability to bundle products and services for consumers, and a very limited range of customers can truly be served on a profitable basis.

As recognized by both witness Mayo and witness Gordon, the state law, as well as the federal Telecommunications Act of 1996, shifts the utility commission's role away from historically protecting monopolists from competitors' entry and protecting consumers from the monopolist, to a role of encouraging competition. Under the old regime, utility commissions set rates for non-basic services, such as long distance, carrier switched access, and vertical features, above cost in order to hold down the price for basic local exchange service. This was in furtherance of universal service.

As witness Mayo emphasized, even as we moved toward price cap regulation, the pricing structure did not really change; thus, the prices for non-basic services continued to support basic service. Specifically, access charges were created after divestiture of AT&T to provide a source of revenue that would enable the local exchange companies to continue to keep prices low. Witness Mayo added that at the federal level, access charges have been reduced dramatically over the past 19 years, and this process has taken place for intrastate access charges in other states as well. Nevertheless, the witness emphasized that intrastate access rate levels in Florida are still in excess of their incremental cost, serving as continued support for low local service rates. As such, according to witnesses Mayo and Gordon, approving the ILECs' petitions to reduce intrastate access charges in a revenue neutral manner will, in fact, remove some of the support for local service, which will in turn make local service market entry more attractive for prospective entrants. This testimony was very compelling.

Witness Gordon further testified that the effect of having rates that are below cost is to discourage entry, as well as investment, by both new entrants and incumbents. Thus, not only is there less likelihood of competition, but of innovation as well. He emphasized that there is empirical evidence on this point, as referenced in the Ros-McDermott study he mentions in his pre-filed testimony. He also testified that in states that have implemented rebalancing, namely California, Illinois, Ohio, Massachusetts, and Maine, there was little noticeable impact on subscribership levels in spite of residential local service rate increases comparable to the increases proposed in the ILECs' petitions. In addition, he noted that, in the states that have implemented rebalancing, toll rates were lowered.

Our 2003 Competition Report shows that CLEC residential market share is only 9% in Florida, while CLEC's serve 29% of the business market. Similarly, Verizon's competition study for its territory

shows that there is a 100 to 1 ratio of business versus residential customers being served by facilities-based CLECs. This drops to 10 to 1 if UNE-P and resale are taken into account. Together, these studies persuade us that competition for residential customers is currently suffering as a result of barriers to entry.

In addition, Knology's witness Boccucci specifically stated that, ". . . under current rates for local services in Florida, Knology has not been able to generate rates of return sufficient to attract the capital necessary to expand in adjacent areas to Panama City or elsewhere in Florida. If rate rebalancing is implemented, Knology has every intention to expand and compete further in Florida." He emphasized that because of Florida's low local rates, that ". . . from our investors' perspective, in the competition for the valuable CAPX or the capital expenditures, it was tough to make a business case to expand into the panhandle when we could expand into Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama and North Carolina [where local rates are higher] and be more assured that we could meet the returns that our investors expected in the marketplace."

1. Arguments

Verizon asserts that by moving basic local residential rates toward cost, its rate rebalancing plan will promote competition for the benefit of residential customers, which is the benefit contemplated by Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. Verizon contends that implementation of its rebalancing proposal will make these residential customers more attractive to competitors and thus induce enhanced market entry, encourage innovation, and promote increased freedom of choice. Verizon asserts that, in addition, its rebalancing plan will lower intrastate access rates and, ultimately, allow residential customers to make more long distance calls at lower prices. Again, Dr. Gordon provided testimonial support for the three ILECs on this point. In addition, Verizon's witnesses Danner and Fulp addressed this issue.

Similarly, Sprint contends that the creation of a more attractive competitive local exchange market will benefit residential consumers by giving them choices in providers, services, technologies, and pricing options. Sprint maintains that this is what consumers are demanding, and that this range of choice will only be made available through a competitive market. Sprint offered the testimonies of witnesses Staihr and Felz on this point.

BellSouth again argues that its residential rates are supported. BellSouth emphasizes that the testimony of its witness Shell lends further support to the argument that removal of the support for basic local service will bring rates to a level that encourages competition, leading to new choices for consumers, which is the benefit contemplated by the 2003 Act, as well as reduced toll rates. BellSouth's witnesses Banerjee and Ruscilli provided testimony on this issue.

Knology states that its experience in its existing markets provides examples of how the entry of a facilities-based competitor for telephone service expands the products available to consumers, increases the customer service levels, and promotes product and pricing competition. Knology's witness Boccucci emphasizes that telecommunications services are converging, such that a wireless consumer does not really think of his or her service in terms of local versus long distance service. He envisions that with increased competition in the wireline market, the same will hold true for wireline customers. Likewise, he argues that the value for consumers in a competitive market is a converged bill with multiple telecommunications services, upgraded service quality, as well as price competition. He also added that a higher local rate will enable Knology to provide bundled packages at prices economical to seniors on fixed incomes, so that they can receive more economic and better quality service than they do today.

AT&T and MCI agree that the ILECs' proposals will benefit residential consumers as contemplated by Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. They contend that the ILECs' proposals will reduce current deterrents to local market entry and create a more level playing field, which will ultimately induce increased market entry. The result will be to provide consumers, residential and business alike, with a wider choice of providers' offerings and prices. They contend that residential consumers will further benefit from toll rate reductions and the elimination of any in-state connection fee. Dr. Mayo provided testimony addressing this point on behalf of AT&T and MCI, while witness Fonteix provided additional information on behalf of AT&T.

OPC, AARP, Common Cause Florida, and Sugarmill Woods contend that the ILECs' rebalancing petitions will not benefit residential consumers as contemplated by Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. They assert that the ILECs have not made a showing that the proposed rebalancing of basic local telecommunications service rates would create a more attractive competitive local exchange market for the benefit of residential customers, nor that market entry will be enhanced, because the ILECs' analyses are based on a model that no entrant would ever use. They argue that, moreover, any claims of benefits to consumers based on the removal or reduction of support for residential basic local telecommunications service are moot, since no such support exists. Again, Drs. Gabel and Cooper provided testimony on this point for OPC and AARP, respectively.

Commission staff's witness Shafer testified that the ILECs' proposals will likely result in benefits for residential customers, such as increased value and choice in products.

2. Findings and Decision

Upon consideration of the evidence presented, as well as the Legislature's clear policy to enhance competition in Florida's telecommunications market, we find that the ILECs' proposals will ultimately benefit residential consumers as contemplated by Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. As evidenced by the results in other states that have engaged in rate rebalancing, the ILECs' proposals will make the residential market more economically attractive for CLECs, which should lead to an increase in choice of providers. This will be accomplished by increasing in the short term the rate at which residential service can be offered by competitors, leading to increased profit margins for CLECs serving residential customers. Witness Fonteix specifically stated that AT&T's decision to enter BellSouth's territory was "... predicated upon an assumption after the passage of the Act that it would be implemented." Furthermore, the witness testified that in AT&T's experience in Michigan and Georgia, where rates have already been

Companies providing bundled offerings that include both local and long distance service will benefit not only from the increased rate at which residential service can be offered on a competitive basis, but also from the decreased terminating access rate. These changes will make providing bundled packages to residential customers more economically attractive, because companies will increase their profit margin.

Again, as argued by AT&T's witness Fonteix, because the Bell incumbents are now able to enter the long distance market, it is better to proceed with access charge reform, which has been underway at the federal level for some time now. The witness emphasized that waiting will only further harm the long distance market. This testimony was consistent with that of witness Gordon, who maintained that long distance service is overpriced, because of the support provided by access charges to local service. He asserted that as prices come down for long distance service, people will respond by making more long distance calls, which he contends is a benefit to society. He concluded that:

If the toll prices are overpriced, then there will be less calling and that constitutes a loss to society. And there's no reason to have it. It's a very expensive way to achieve the goal in Crandall's and Waverman's point. If you really want to have universal service and you think it's a problem, you know, a policy problem that should be addressed, better that the payments should be made directly in some fashion than by distorting the entire price structure, which is the mechanism we've used to date.

While it is uncontested that some customers will not receive a direct benefit as a result of the implementation of the ILECs' proposals, we find that Florida consumers as a whole will reap the benefits of increased competition and, ultimately, competition will serve to regulate the level of prices consumers will pay. Increased competition will lead not only to a wider choice of providers, but also to technological innovation, new service offerings, and increased quality of service to the customer. The evidence in this case shows that Knology will continue its plans to enter Florida markets if the Petitions are granted, and will consider broadening the number of Florida markets it enters, as demonstrated through the testimony of witness Boccucci. AT&T witness Fonteix has also indicated that AT&T's entry into BellSouth's territory has been largely influenced by the 2003 Legislation and the hope that with the granting of these Petitions, the raising of local rates will make Florida markets more profitable for competitors. Furthermore, witness Gordon explained that less regulation in the wireless market has not only produced lower prices, but also a beneficial impact on consumer welfare, because the use of the technology has become so prevalent.

While Section 364.164 does not mandate that we consider the degree of benefit to residential customers from long distance rate reductions, our review of the legislative history convinces us that it is within our discretion to do so. Thus, we have considered witness Ostrander's argument that the Petitioners have been unable to quantify the impact of competition, and therefore have been unable to show the benefit to customers. We reject that argument, and find that the preponderance of the evidence in the proceeding shows that the benefits to residential customers as a whole generated by the resulting decreases in long distance rates and elimination of the in-state connection fee will outweigh the increases in local rates. This benefit should be a continuing one, since the IXC's have indicated that they will flow through the reductions on a pro-rata basis according to minutes of access, and the record indicates that market forces should exert enough pressure to ensure that rates are kept low. Furthermore, as in the wireless industry, whose ability to offer bundled packages has been facilitated by the fact that they do not pay the high level of access fees that the wireline carriers do, we anticipate that the reduction in access fees will result in an increase in bundled offerings by wireline carriers and a decrease in the distinction between wireline local and long distance service.

We acknowledge, as OPC, the Attorney General and AARP have argued, that not every residential customer will get a long distance rate reduction, and those who do receive reductions will not necessarily receive reductions that totally offset the increase in their rate for local service. Such "bill neutrality" is not required by the statute and, in fact, would be inconsistent with its plain language. First, there could never be "bill neutrality" unless every residential customer made exactly the same number of long distance calls and could therefore share per capita in any long distance rate decreases. Second, Section 364.164 achieves revenue neutrality to the ILEC by permitting it to increase rates for flat-rate residential and single-line business service. Section 364.163, Florida Statutes, in contrast, gives the IXCs discretion in where to flow through their long distance rate decreases so long as some portion of the benefit goes to residential and business customers. As discussed in Section X(D), we find that the IXCs' proposals to flow through these reductions between business and residential customers in proportion to their access minutes of use complies with both the language and spirit of the statute.

Also on this issue, we acknowledge that the testimony from the public hearings was mixed. Many customers did not believe that the ILEC proposals would benefit them, but others were hopeful that they would see competition in their area. Generally, the written comments we received tended to be unfavorable. However, when considered with the economic testimony received through our technical hearing, we find that customers as a whole will benefit as contemplated by the statute. As noted by witness Boccucci, customers will get better quality service for the products they choose, as well as a wider variety of products and providers. The evidence also shows that even those customers that use calling cards or dial-around service will receive benefits from increased competition, as will older citizens that use 1+ calling.

We also acknowledge the customer testimony critical of extended calling service (ECS) rates. In recognition of the concerns raised, we direct our staff to organize a Commission workshop to discuss the history of ECS, the current state of the law on ECS, and what role, if any, ECS has in today's market. The Petitioners have all agreed to participate fully in this workshop. In addition, it is notable that Sprint's petition includes a five-free-call allowance for ECS.

Although we find that it is not a benefit that we should weigh

Petitions, we observe that the amended Lifeline provisions in Section 364.10 will help to protect economically disadvantaged consumers from the effect of local rate increases. The use of targeted assistance, rather than implicit rate subsidies, to address this social issue will result in more efficient pricing, which will benefit the competitive market, spur innovations and new product offerings. This is the benefit contemplated by the Legislature when it enacted this legislation and is further supported by the testimony of AT&T/MCI's witness Mayo. As noted by the witness, the ability to target assistance is far more effective at promoting universal service objectives. The witness also testified that targeted assistance is more economically efficient than continuation of implicit support from access charge prices. We agree, and expect that, over time, competition should take care of those protected by Lifeline, in spite of the current limited duration that these customers are protected from the local increases at issue here. The evidence shows that even with the proposed local rate increases, there will not be a significant number of customers that drop off the network. While the need for continued targeted assistance for some customers may foster its own social welfare concerns, those concerns must be balanced with the Legislature's clear intent to move Florida's telecommunications markets towards increased competition.

Furthermore, Dr. Cooper acknowledged that Exhibit 85 indicates that many seniors on fixed incomes take a number of additional services, such as cellular service, cable service, and Internet service. This indicates not only a likelihood that the increases proposed are within the zone of affordability for this segment of consumers, but also, as indicated by witness Boccucci, demonstrates that this segment in particular may see increased benefits as a result of bundled competitive offerings. Similarly, the evidence shows that 53% to 72% of Lifeline customers served by the Petitioners purchase one or more ancillary services.

As argued by witness Mayo, in approaching this task we must balance "hard-headed" economic principles with "soft-hearted" social welfare goals. It is the application of sound economic principles that will bring efficiencies, and as a result, competition to the telecommunications market, while the statute itself provides for targeted assistance that will assist those unable to afford the proposed increases.<sup>5</sup> At the end of the day, capitalism and the free market will maximize benefits to consumers in a way that regulation cannot. That is not, however, to say that the companies should not be encouraged to consider their social welfare obligations in targeting assistance to customers and coming up with new ideas to address the needs of the economically disadvantaged.

VII. INDUCE ENHANCED MARKET ENTRY

A. Arguments

BellSouth states that by removing implicit support from basic local exchange rates, competitors will have increased business opportunities to attract new customers and offer new products, services, and bundles. BellSouth contends that competitors base their entry decisions on whether or not they can at least match the rates charged by ILECs. BellSouth argues that if these rates are lowered artificially by subsidies, but the incremental costs do not change, then competitors are likely to be deterred from entering the market. BellSouth concludes that this situation limits competition. BellSouth witness Banerjee offered testimony in this regard.

<sup>5</sup> It is noteworthy that the ILECs have also agreed to the increase the number of customers to whom Lifeline is available to those whose income is 135% or less of the federal poverty level. This increases the pool of Lifeline eligible customers by approximately 119,000 when compared to the 125% standard required by Section 364.10.

price of service is raised to, and above, its relevant costs, such customers become more attractive to competitors, according to BellSouth witness Ruscilli.

Witness Gordon contends that when the price of services increases, a cash flow analysis would show that the investment project becomes more profitable (or less of a loss) and, thus, more attractive for new market entrants. Dr. Gordon adds that technology is changing so rapidly that competitive markets will do a much better job than a monopoly would of discovering which technologies can or cannot succeed in the long run. Dr. Gordon further opines that in order for the lowest cost mix of technologies to remain in the market, price and the signals it sends must not be distorted and must reflect the underlying cost of providing service.

BellSouth emphasizes that lowering intrastate access rates to parity with interstate rates eliminates an artificial discrepancy between two nearly identical services. Lower intrastate access rates make long distance calling more attractive for customers and competitors who wish to bundle long distance service with local service. BellSouth witness Banerjee testifies that the unevenness of the business market versus the residential market entry is attributable in large part to the relationship between end-user rates for basic local telephone service and UNE/UNE-P rates. Dr. Banerjee explains that generally the margins are far more substantial for business service. Unconstrained by public policy or regulation, the CLECs have gravitated naturally to business markets. As indicated by Dr. Gordon, the problem of an unattractive residential market may be worse in Florida than in other states because these other states have higher residential rates, indicating a greater need to rebalance the rates in Florida.

Verizon states that its rate rebalancing plan will bring the prices of its basic local services more in line with costs. Verizon asserts that prices that more closely reflect underlying costs, such as those proposed in its rate rebalancing plan, will increase the likelihood that competitive providers can offer services at a price equal to or lower than that offered by Verizon, and still remain profitable. Verizon contends that as a result, the reformed prices proposed in Verizon's rate rebalancing plan

Verizon further contends that by removing implicit support from basic local exchange rates, competitors will be enticed into the market. Verizon contends that Knology's testimony that it decided to enter the Florida market following the passage of the access reduction legislation demonstrates that Verizon's rebalancing proposal will encourage competitive entry. Also, Verizon cites to Dr. Gordon's testimony, which includes statistical studies demonstrating that rebalancing will have a positive effect on competitive entry.

Sprint concurs with BellSouth and Verizon, stating that CLECs will benefit from the higher residential basic prices, without being required to reduce their own intrastate access prices. Sprint contends that rebalancing reduces risk for CLECs, improving the cash flow equation for serving residential customers. Sprint witness Staihr testifies that rebalancing rates for basic local service will create a situation where competitors will find that, on average, a larger percentage of the residential market will be financially attractive to serve. Witness Staihr states further that the current artificially low prices are unsustainable in the face of competition, and they come at a cost: (1) fewer options among services; (2) less innovation; and (3) in large portions of Sprint's territory, no competitive choices. Sprint concludes that rebalancing will induce enhanced market entry, thereby providing customers with the benefits of more choices, enhanced service offerings and greater innovation.

Knology states that the ILEC petitions should be granted because that decision will help to implement the policy underlying Section 364.164, Florida Statutes, and it will enhance the competitive choice available to Florida citizens. Knology identifies itself as a prime example of how granting the ILECs' Petitions will induce enhanced competition. As stated previously, Knology is a facilities-based intermodal competitor offering voice, video and data services over hybrid fiber coax (HFC) and fiber to the curb (FTTC) network in Panama City, with plans to expand in Pinellas County, Florida. Knology has been providing telecommunications services in Florida since 1997 and is currently providing its services to over 275,000 residential and business

Knology witness Boccucci testified that the 2003 Act creates the regulatory environment necessary to attract capital investment to expand telephone competition in Florida. Knology contends that granting the ILEC petitions will allow it to attract and deploy new capital investment in Florida, thereby offering consumers a choice in facilities-based providers for new and advanced high-tech services. Knology asserts, however, that if the petitions are not granted, it will be forced to deploy capital in states with more favorable market conditions as it has done in the past.

AT&T and MCI state that economic theory demonstrates that a decrease in overpriced access charges together with an increase in the retail price of residential service will encourage market entry. AT&T and MCI contend that prices are a key signal to prospective entrants regarding the desirability of a particular market. Higher prices relative to cost provide greater inducements for entry. AT&T and MCI contend further that bundled offerings are undermined by excessive access charges, because the lower bound to which competitors can drive prices is defined by the artificially high level of access charges. The presence of excessive access charges will limit the ability of competitors to enter the market. AT&T/MCI witness Mayo offered testimony in this regard. Dr. Mayo opines that the reduction of existing access support will also make the market more attractive for traditional long distance companies to enter the telecommunications market.

Witnesses Mayo and Fonteix testified that the reduction and eventual elimination of the access support is critical to sustainable competition as it will allow CLECs to compete on a more equal footing. Witness Mayo explains that the anemic CLEC market share for residential customers provides prima facie evidence that low residential prices are inhibiting competitive entry.

OPC responds that competition will not be enhanced to the residential consumer's benefit, although the ILECs' revenue from inelastic basic local service will be enhanced and the respective ILEC's market share will increase using revenues as a basis of measurement, according to OPC witness Ostrander. Witness Ostrander further contends that there will be no new or unique service introductions and no uniquely associated benefits of capital investment. OPC witness Gabel states that entry decisions are made on the basis of the expected total revenues and costs of all services an entrant can offer, not just one service. If total revenues cover total costs, it is completely irrelevant to a firm's decision to enter a market if one of the components of the offering (e.g. basic local service) may produce a loss according to some measure. Therefore, OPC surmises that a rise in total revenue from current levels may not be sufficient to allow entrants to overcome existing competitive barriers.

AARP concurs with OPC in its basic position that granting the ILECs' petitions will not induce enhanced market entry or increase competition. AARP witness Cooper argues that the Legislature intended that the ILECs be required to demonstrate that competition would, in fact, occur, as opposed to simply being more likely to occur, if the Petitions are approved. Witness Cooper further argues that none of the companies have provided such proof for any of their geographic areas. AARP contends that competition for bundled service is where the focus is in telecommunications. Therefore, AARP concludes that the shifting of costs from intraLATA long distance to basic service will have little, if any, impact on this competition since both are in the bundle.

However, Commission Staff witness Shafer testified that the likelihood of increased market entry is improved by granting the rebalancing petitions, particularly in those markets where profitability is marginal. Witness Shafer states that there appears to be a relationship between the subsidy and market entry, indicating that the removal of the subsidy will also increase market entry. Witness Shafer concludes that one can reasonably expect the ILECs' petitions will create additional market entry, particularly in markets that, to date, have been only marginally profitable or slightly unprofitable.

B. Findings and Decision

Upon consideration, we are persuaded that granting the ILEC petitions will induce enhanced market entry.

There are two types of evidence that the parties have presented in this case: empirical, which is based on real-life scenarios, and economic theory. We believe that the ILECs have offered strong theoretical and empirical evidence that the proposed changes to intrastate access charges and basic local service rates will improve the level of competition in many markets. The ILECs' witness Gordon testified that when the price of services increases, a cash flow analysis would show that investment in the market becomes more profitable and, thus, more attractive for market entry. BellSouth explains that if these rates are lowered artificially by subsidies but the incremental costs do not change, then competitors ineligible to receive the subsidy are likely to be deterred from entering the market. In addition, AT&T and MCI indicate that the reduction and eventual elimination of the access support is critical to sustainable competition as it will allow CLECs to compete on equal footing with the ILECs. We find that these arguments compelling. We conclude from the evidence presented that entry into the local telephone market is deterred if the ILECs' local service prices are below cost and that rate rebalancing is critical to actually promoting competition.

While OPC and AARP have expressed doubt about the effect that a reduction in access charges will have on competition, they have failed to convince us that these rate reductions will not induce enhanced market entry. To the contrary, Knology presents a model case on the impact that these reductions have had and will have on market entry by CLECs. Witness Boccucci testified that the granting of the ILEC petitions will allow Knology to attract and deploy new capital in Florida, thereby offering consumers a choice in facilities-based providers for new and advanced high-tech services. In addition, AT&T indicated that it has entered the BellSouth territory as a result of the 2003 Act.

We are persuaded that companies like Knology and AT&T provide the empirical evidence of how the ILECs' proposals will increase competition. We note that poor profitability, or limited profitability, is the main deterrent to market entry. We conclude that the evidence presented by the ILECs demonstrates that granting the petitions will induce enhanced market entry, thereby promoting competition, as required by Section 364.164(1)(b), Florida Statutes.

For almost 20 years, the telecommunications industry has been in transition from a monopolistic regime to a competitive one. While changes to Florida law and enactment of the Telecommunications Act of 1996 have made great strides in promoting competition, there is still a lack of widespread competition in the residential local exchange market. Implementation of the access reductions and offsetting rate increases permitted by the 2003 Act should serve to enhance competition in this important market.

Based on the foregoing, we find that the existing rate structure impairs competition for residential customers. Granting the ILECs' petitions will result in more attractive pricing for basic local telephone service, providing market entry opportunities for competitors that have been constrained by inefficient pricing in the past. Thus, we find that the petitions filed by BellSouth, Verizon and Sprint to reduce intrastate switched network access charges will induce enhanced market entry.

VIII. PARITY

In this section, we address the requirement of Section 364.164(1)(c) that any plan provide for intrastate access rates to be reduced to parity with interstate rates over a period of not less than two years or more than four years.

A. Arguments

Verizon contends that its proposal will reduce intrastate switched network access rates to interstate parity over a period of not less than two years or more than four years. Specifically, Verizon proposes to reduce its composite intrastate access total average revenue per minute (ARPM) from $.0485441 to $.0117043 in three increments over two years. The total Verizon reduction would be $76.2 million.

There was conflicting testimony in the record regarding whether Verizon's inclusion of its non-traffic sensitive interstate presubscribed interexchange carrier charge (PICC) in the calculation of its switched access charge reduction was appropriate. Verizon's witness Fulp testified that the PICC was included because its interstate access rates include both traffic sensitive and non-traffic sensitive charges. Witness Fulp asserts that the 2003 Act permits the inclusion of the PICC, since the 2003 Act defines the term "intrastate switched access rate" to include the carrier common line charge and the PICC is a federal common line charge. He asserts that because the Act includes common line charges in Verizon's intrastate access rates, the analogous PICC federal common line charge must be included in Verizon's calculation of the interstate ARPM for a consistent comparison.

Verizon's witness Fulp asserts that if the PICC is excluded from its calculation, Verizon would have to reduce its composite intrastate access rate by a greater amount than originally proposed. As such, to preserve revenue neutrality, Verizon's basic local rates would have to increase more than its original proposal. Specifically, the witness explained that if Verizon were to exclude the PICC from the parity calculation, Verizon would have to reduce its access revenues by $12,679,052 more than originally proposed, and, consequently, Verizon would have to increase its basic local revenues by a corresponding amount. The result would be an increase to Verizon's basic local rates of $0.86 more than Verizon originally proposed.

AT&T and MCI assert that Verizon's proposal does not correctly reduce its intrastate switched access rates to interstate parity. AT&T witness Fonteix contends that Verizon's inclusion of the PICC is inappropriate for two reasons. He contends that the PICC is not part of the intrastate rate elements. Witness Fonteix asserts that even if the PICC was appropriate for inclusion in the calculation, Verizon should have used the interstate minutes of use in calculating the ARPM rather than the intrastate minutes of use. Finally, Witness Fonteix argues that the PICC should have been excluded because the PICC charge applies to multiline business customers and the access charge reductions allow Verizon to collect business line revenue from all Florida residents.

AARP, Common Cause Florida, and Sugarmill Woods also contend that Verizon's inclusion of the interstate PICC end-user charge in its calculation of intrastate access charges for the purpose of

rebalancing means that Verizon has failed to comply with the provisions of the Act requiring parity and revenue neutrality. They assert that Verizon's petition should be denied on these grounds.

Sprint asserts that its proposal will reduce intrastate switched network access rates to interstate parity over a period of not less than two years or more than four. Sprint contends that its petition, testimony, and exhibits demonstrate that rebalancing prices over a two-year period (three annual increments) will provide the marketplace with the appropriate competitive signals and will not result in consumer rate shock. Sprint's initial proposal was to reduce its access rate by $62,319,890 the first year, $56,211,862 the second year, and $23,541,711 the third year. Sprint's total proposed reduction is $125.2 million. However, during closing arguments Sprint agreed to spread its reduction and corresponding increase in four steps over a period of three years, consistent with the position advocated by Commission staff witness Shafer. Under Sprint's revised proposal, the basic local telecommunications services increases will be $2.25 the first year, $2.25 the second year, $1.50 the third year, and $0.86 the fourth year.

BellSouth contends that its proposal will reduce intrastate switched network access rates to interstate parity over a period of not less than two years or more than four. BellSouth asserts that its proposed increases will occur over three installments, 1st quarter 2004, 1st quarter 2005, and 1st quarter 2006. BellSouth presents two alternative methodologies by which parity can be achieved: "mirroring" and the "typical network." Witness Ruscilli testified that BellSouth's proposed reductions under either methodology will be 40% in the 1st quarter of 2004, 35% in the 1st quarter of 2005, and 25% in the 1st quarter of 2006. Witness Ruscilli further testified that BellSouth's proposal reaches parity in 24 months, consistent with the requirement in Section 364.164(1)(c), Florida Statutes, that parity be reached in not less than 2 years and not more than 4 years.

"mirroring" methodology appropriately quantifies the revenue impact of the intrastate rate reductions necessary to achieve parity by multiplying the demand times the difference between its intrastate and interstate tariffed rates. However, witness Fonteix asserts that BellSouth's "typical network" methodology is inappropriate because it targets only a select set of rate elements to equal interstate rate levels, and thus fails to address all of the rate elements in the statutory definition of intrastate switched network access rate.

Witness Shafer contends that Sprint should extend its implementation of access reductions and increases to basic local service rates by 12 months in order to mitigate rate shock to consumers. Witness Shafer testified that while the statute did not directly address or define rate shock, the statute does provide for a transition period for the access charge and basic local service rate adjustments of not less than 2 years and not more than 4 years. He asserts that due to this range it is reasonable to infer that the Legislature recognized the concept of rate shock or rate reasonableness. Witness Shafer asserts that it would be appropriate for Sprint to implement an additional incremental rate adjustment 36 months after the initial adjustment in order to complete its transition to parity. He argues that this would put Sprint's residential customers more on par with those of BellSouth and Verizon in terms of the amount of the increase they receive at any one time.

B. Findings and Decision

Section 364.164(1)(c), Florida Statutes, requires that we consider whether the Petitions will require intrastate switched network access rate reductions to parity over a period of not less than 2 years or more than 4 years. We find that each of the three amended Petitions meets the requirement of 364.164(1)(c), Florida Statutes.

As noted above, there was testimony regarding whether it was appropriate for Verizon to include the PICC in its access charge reduction calculation. Section 364.164(6), Florida Statutes, defines the term "intrastate switched network access rate" as:

. . . the composite of the originating and terminating network access rate for carrier common line, local channel/entrance facility, switched common transport, access tandem switching, interconnection charge, signaling, information surcharge, and local switching.

Based on the definition in the statute, as well as the testimony of witness Fulp, we are persuaded that the PICC can be included in the calculation of the interstate rate target, since it was developed to recover nontraffic sensitive charges that were originally in the traffic sensitive carrier common line charge. In construing the statute in this manner, we are mindful that the interpretation advocated by other parties would result in a higher overall charge to the consumer. Thus, we conclude that Verizon's explanation for inclusion of the PICC is not inconsistent with the statute and find that Verizon's methodology for calculating its switched access charge reduction complies with Section 364.164(1)(c), Florida Statutes.

We note that witness Shafer testified that it would be appropriate for Sprint to implement an additional incremental rate adjustment 36 months after the initial adjustment in order to complete its transition to parity. However, we find that Sprint's original proposal met the criteria set forth in Section 364.164(1)(c), Florida Statutes. We also note that Sprint subsequently agreed to spread its reduction and corresponding increase over a period of three years and that this revised proposal also meets the statutory criteria.

Finally, we address which of BellSouth's methodologies, "mirroring" or "typical network," is the appropriate method to be applied in the next section. However, we find that either method meets the "parity" criteria set forth in Section 364.164(1)(c), Florida Statutes.

IX. REVENUE NEUTRALITY

In this section, we address whether the ILECs' proposals will achieve revenue neutrality as required by Section 364.164(1)(d), Florida Statutes.

A. Arguments

Verizon contends that its rate rebalancing plan is revenue neutral, as defined in the statute. Verizon asserts the plan will reduce Verizon's intrastate switched network access rates by $76.2 million and offset that reduction with a corresponding increase in basic local rates. Verizon proposes incremental residential local service rate increases of $1.58 in its first increment, $1.58 in its second increment, and $1.57 in its third increment.<sup>6</sup> Verizon asserts that single-line business recurring rates will be raised to $32.00 per month. Verizon proposes to raise its network establishment charge and central office connection charges by $5.00 over three increments. Verizon proposes to raise its non-recurring single line business network establishment charges by $0.10.

Sprint asserts that, as demonstrated by the testimony and exhibits it filed, rebalancing will be accomplished in a revenue neutral manner. Sprint testified that it will be reducing its switched network access charges by a total of $142.1 million. Sprint initially proposed basic residential rate increases of $2.95 for increment one, $2.75 for increment two, and $1.16 for increment three for a total of $6.86. However, as noted previously, Sprint agreed in its closing argument to four incremental increases of $2.25 in 2004, $2.25 in 2005, $1.36 in 2006, and $1.00 in 2007. Sprint also proposes to increase its single-line business rates by $2.70 in the first increment, $2.40 in the second increment, and $0.90 in the third increment.

explains that the "mirroring" methodology actually mirrors the recurring rate elements listed in Section 364.164(6), namely the carrier common line, local channel/entrance facility, switched common transport, access tandem switching, interconnection charge, signaling, information surcharge, and local switching. He testified that the revenue impact of reducing these elements to interstate parity is $136.4 million. Under the "mirroring" methodology, BellSouth would raise residential recurring rates a $1.39 in the first increase, $1.38 in the second increase, and $1.09 in the third increase, for a total of $3.86 per month. BellSouth proposes to raise single line business to $25 (rate groups 1-3), $28 (rate groups 4-6), and $30.20 (rate groups 7-11, X2, X4) in two equal installments. BellSouth also proposes to raise its non-recurring charges in three installments.

Witness Hendrix also explained that BellSouth's "typical network" methodology achieves parity by comparison of the "typical network" composite rate for interstate switched access with the composite rate for intrastate switched network access utilizing the rate elements in BellSouth's annual filing with this Commission, the Florida Access and Toll Report, Tables 1 and 2. He further testified that the revenue reduction resulting from the achievement of parity using the "typical network" methodology is $125.2 million. Under the "typical network" methodology, BellSouth would raise residential recurring rates a total of $3.50; $1.25 for the first increase, $1.25 for the second increase; and $1.00 for the third increase.<sup>7</sup> BellSouth's proposal to raise single line business rates remains the same as set forth under the "mirroring" methodology, as does its proposed increase in non-recurring charges.

Witness Hendrix asserts that the difference in the revenue impact between these two methodologies stems from the number of rate elements utilized in each methodology. He contends that both methodologies use the most recent 12-months' demand to determine the intrastate switched network access revenue reduction. He asserts that the "mirroring" methodology uses all of the recurring switched network access rate elements, whereas the "typical network" methodology uses the limited, specific rate elements that are considered to be representative of averages for BellSouth's network. Witness Hendrix testified that use of composites from a typical network is consistent with the Commission's past practice for determination of switched access revenue reductions.

AT&T and MCI contend that the ILECs' rebalancing proposals appear to be revenue neutral notwithstanding any failures to correctly reach interstate parity. Under the parity section, AT&T and MCI argued that BellSouth's "mirroring" methodology, but not the "typical network" methodology, meets the criteria for parity. As noted previously, witness Fonteix claims that BellSouth's "typical network" methodology targets only a select set of rate elements to equal interstate rate levels, and thus fails to address all of the rate elements in the statutory definition of intrastate switched network access rate.

AARP, Common Cause Florida, and Sugarmill Woods assert that the ILECs have not substantiated that their respective intrastate long distance rate reductions for residential customers will equal their corresponding basic long distance telecommunications service increases. They further assert that Verizon's inclusion of the interstate PICC end-user charge in its calculation of intrastate access charges for the purpose of rebalancing results in Verizon's failure to comply with the provisions of the Act requiring both parity and revenue neutrality. They conclude that Verizon's petition should be denied on these grounds.

The Attorney General argues that the ILECs have not substantiated that their respective intrastate long distance rate reductions for residential customers will equal their corresponding basic local telecommunications services increase. He argues that the ILECs have failed to demonstrate that the increase is revenue neutral.

B. Findings and Decision

AARP, Common Cause Florida, and Sugarmill Woods, articulate their specific position that because the PICC should not have been included in Verizon's switched network access charge reduction, Verizon's petition is not revenue neutral. For the reasons noted in the previous section, we find that it is appropriate for Verizon to include the PICC in its switched network access charge reduction calculation. Given that the PICC is appropriately included, we find that Verizon's proposed revenue reduction and basic rate increases are revenue neutral. Thus, we find that Verizon's proposal meets the criteria set forth in Section 364.164(1)(d), Florida Statutes. We also find that Sprint's proposed revenue reduction and basic rate increases are revenue neutral.

BellSouth has proposed two methodologies, "mirroring" and "typical network," which could be used to achieve revenue neutrality. We find that both the "mirroring" and "typical network" methodologies meet the statutory requirements for revenue neutrality. We note that the "typical network" methodology provides for less of an increase in basic local residential rates. Thus, we find it appropriate to approve the "typical network" methodology as the methodology which has a lesser impact on the local rates. In addition, we find that BellSouth's proposal meets the criteria set forth in Section 364.164 (1)(d), Florida Statutes.

Section 364.164(1)(d), Florida Statutes, requires that we consider whether approving the ILECs' proposals will be revenue neutral as defined in subsection (7) within the revenue category defined in subsection (2). Subsection (7) states that "revenue neutrality" means that the total revenue within the revenue category established by the statute remains the same before and after the local exchange telecommunications company implements any rate adjustments under this section. Subsection (2) states that once the ILEC petitions are granted, the local exchange telecommunications company is authorized to immediately implement a revenue category mechanism consisting of basic local telecommunications service revenues and intrastate switched network access revenues to achieve revenue neutrality. We find that each of the three amended Petitions meet the revenue neutrality requirement of 364.164(1)(d), Florida Statutes.

Furthermore, contrary to the position taken by the Attorney General in these proceedings as further elucidated in Section VI(C) of this Order, we find the statute does not require that implementation of the proposals be "bill neutral" to any particular customer or class of customers.

X. FLOW-THROUGH CONSIDERATIONS

In this section, we consider the proper application of Section 364.163, Florida Statutes. We note that for each of the flow-through issues, Common Cause Florida and Sugarmill Woods adopted the position of AARP.

A. Applicability and Content of Flow-Through Tariffs.

This section addresses which IXC's should be required to file flow-through tariffs and what information should accompany those filings.

1. Argument

AT&T and MCI argue that all IXC's should be required to flow through the switched access reductions they receive in order to keep long distance carriers on a level playing field. For competitive neutrality, any flow-through conditions imposed must be applied to all IXC's. However, AT&T and MCI would not be opposed to a de minimus threshold established by this Commission for those IXC's for which the flow-through would have no meaningful impact. Such threshold, however, should be set sufficiently low to allow only those IXC's with very low volume of access use to qualify.

BellSouth Long Distance notes that Section 364.163, Florida Statutes, requires that all IXC's who benefit from the access reductions must flow through the benefits. Also, a company's tariff filings should specify the rates to be reduced and contain a statement of the particular company's corresponding anticipated revenue reduction.

Sprint Communications Company's conditional position is that any IXC paying more than $1 million in access charges should be required to demonstrate that the required flow-through has occurred. It is not clear that the demonstration of flow-through should occur in the tariff filings. The demonstration of compliance with the statutory requirements should be up to each company and should insure that confidentiality is maintained where needed. Tariffs should reflect rates and charges that flow through benefits of reduced access charge prices.

Verizon Long Distance argues that any IXC that receives the benefit of intrastate switched access rate reductions must file intrastate tariffs (if tariff filings are required) flowing through such reductions. An IXC reseller should not be required to reduce prices to its customers unless it receives a reduction in the prices it is charged by its facilities-based supplier. IXCs should have the discretion to determine how to flow through the access charge reductions by lowering the in-state per minute rates, or monthly recurring plan charges, or both. If this Commission should decide to deregulate long distance services and eliminate long distance tariffing obligations, Verizon contends the reductions should be passed through to end users under end user service agreements.

OPC and AARP urge that all IXCs in Florida should be required to file tariffs and flow through the impacts of access rate reductions, except for those IXCs whose intrastate access expense reduction is $100 or less, per month. Those IXCs which are not required to flow through the reductions should attest to such, via a letter filed with this Commission. These flow-through reductions should be directed to residential customers in the same proportion as the basic local telephone service revenue increases proposed by the ILECs. Included in these tariff filings should be the information delineated in the testimony of witness Ostrander.

The Attorney General argues that all IXCs in Florida should be required to file tariffs and flow through the impacts of access rate reductions, except for those IXCs whose intrastate access expense reduction is $100 or less, per month. Those IXCs which are not required to flow through the reductions should attest to such, via a letter filed with this Commission.

2. Findings and Decision

There appears to be little disagreement among the parties as to the fact that the savings must be flowed through. There is disagreement, however, as to the type of documentation that should be required to demonstrate that this requirement has been met.

Upon consideration, all IXCs that paid $1 million or more in intrastate switched access charges within the most recent 12 month period shall include in their tariff filings: (1) a calculation of

the dollar benefit associated with the LEC's intrastate access rate reductions; (2) separate demonstrations that residential and business long distance rates have been reduced and the estimated annualized revenue effect, residential and business, including how those estimates were made; and (3) a demonstration that all rate reductions have been flowed through.

Further, IXCs that paid less than $1 million in intrastate switched access charges within the most recent 12-month period shall include in their tariff filings a letter certifying that they paid less than $1 million in intrastate switched access charges within the most recent 12 month period, and that they have complied with each of the flow-through requirements as specified in Section 364.163(2), Florida Statutes. Any IXC whose intrastate switched access expense reduction is $100 or less per month shall not be obligated to flow through its reduction, but must attest to such through a letter filed with this Commission.

Finally, we direct our staff to work with the parties on an appropriate reporting format with consideration given to the formats used to demonstrate the 1998 access charge reduction flow throughs. In addition, our staff shall be diligent in assuring compliance with the requirements of this Order.

B. Timing

1. Argument

AT&T and MCI state that it is unnecessary to set the exact same filing dates for both the ILECs and IXCs. They maintain the statute clearly requires the IXC's revenues to be reduced by the amount of access reductions it receives, but does not specify a time frame for making the reduction. They believe IXCs need a sufficient amount of time to both calculate the savings they will receive and to prepare tariffs for filing. As such, they argue that IXCs should be allowed 60 days from the date the ILEC files its access tariff revisions to file any IXC tariff revisions for flow-through. If this Commission chooses to mandate the ILEC and IXC tariffs be effective simultaneously, the ILEC access tariff revisions should be filed 60 days in advance of the effective date so that IXC's have the time necessary to conduct their analysis and file their tariffs, according to AT&T and MCI.

BellSouth Long Distance notes that affected IXC's should file their tariffs to flow through the access reductions within 15 days of the effective date of the last of the three ILEC's filings. This would allow the carriers to avoid unnecessary multiple filings.

Sprint Communications Company's position is that IXC's should be allowed to have up to 60 days from the time that ILEC's access reductions are effective in order to implement the tariff, billing and other administrative changes necessary to flow through the price adjustments.

Verizon Long Distance argues that facilities-based IXC's that benefit from reductions in the price of access should be required to pass through rate reductions via their intrastate tariffs (if tariffs are required), as soon as possible after the approved ILEC access rate reductions. Non-facilities-based IXC's should be required to flow through access charge reductions when they are received from the underlying facilities-based carrier. Since the flow-through of the access charges will require facilities-based carriers as well as IXC resellers, to make modifications to, for example, billing systems, rate tables, marketing and fulfillment materials, carriers should be given a reasonable amount of time to implement necessary plan and system changes before they are required to pass through access rate reductions.

On cross-examination, most of the IXC witnesses conceded that tariffs could be filed within 44 days after an ILEC's access charge tariff filing.

OPC, AARP and the AG all simply state that IXC's should be required to flow through the benefits of any rate reductions, via the tariffs, simultaneously with the approved ILEC access rate reductions.

2. Findings and Decision

Based on past experience with the 1998 access charge reduction flow-through, IXC's have not had difficulty complying with filing requirements as short as 21 and 30 days. We have heard no compelling testimony as to why, for the present dockets, 44 days from the filing of the LEC tariffs is not a reasonable time frame for filing of the IXC tariffs. The ILECs are required by Section 364.164(2), Florida Statutes, to give 45 days notice before tariffs go into effect, but IXC's need give only one day's notice. The goal of this requirement would be to have the ILEC and IXC tariffs become effective simultaneously. Accordingly, the IXC tariffs shall be required within 44 days after the filing of the ILECs tariffs, and the ILEC and IXC tariffs shall become effective simultaneously.

C. Duration of Revenue Reductions

Here, we address the appropriate duration of the IXC revenue reductions necessary to fully flow through the benefits of the access charge reductions to customers.

1. Argument

AT&T and MCI state that the highly competitive long distance market should and will decide this issue. They urge that specific restrictions have been unnecessary in the past, and could have negative consequences. In a highly competitive market, imposing any restrictions on the length of time a revenue reduction is in place could place the IXC's at a disadvantage in that it could prevent an IXC from implementing a pricing strategy that maximizes its competitive position. AT&T and MCI state that, should this Commission mandate the time period over which the reductions should be maintained, it would be the first time such a mandate has been imposed. In the earlier flow-throughs identified in these proceedings, this Commission did not impose a period of time that the rate reductions must be in place.

BellSouth Long Distance argues that, given the completely and irrevocably competitive nature of the intrastate interexchange long distance market in Florida, market forces will ensure that any long distance revenue reductions resulting from the flow-through of access charges will remain in place. There is significant and considerable competition among traditional long distance carriers as well as competition from other providers, such as voice over internet protocol providers and wireless carriers. According to BellSouth Long Distance, this competition will cause carriers to move their prices toward cost and prevent them from raising rates. Intrastate interexchange carriers should have the flexibility to change rates to meet market conditions, as long as they reduce their revenues in an amount equal to their access charge reductions.

Sprint Communications Company's conditional position is that market forces will insure that the revenue benefits of access reductions will be effective in maintaining the revenue benefits of the access reductions. Nevertheless, each provider required to make a flow-through filing should reduce average prices by an amount at least equivalent to the access reduction on a per minute basis and should maintain those average price reductions for all three years of the access reductions plus at least one additional year.

Verizon Long Distance urges that the long distance market is highly competitive in that the traditional wireline long distance carriers compete against each other as well as with wireless carriers, cable companies and IP telephony providers. Competition will ensure that IXC's flow through access reductions without any need for Commission intervention. Nevertheless, to remove any doubt about whether customers will actually receive the benefit of the access reductions, Verizon Long Distance (and its affiliates) agree to flow through the reductions for three years. After that time, Verizon Long Distance argue IXC's should be free to change their long distance rates in accordance with the demands of the marketplace.

OPC, AARP and the AG argue that the IXC's should be required to cap and maintain their long distance rate reductions for a period of three years after parity is achieved, as required by Section 364.163, Florida Statutes, and as further described by witness Ostrander.

2. Findings and Decision

We find that, in order to implement the intent of the statutory requirements, there needs be a period of rate certainty after parity is achieved. We are not, however, persuaded by the arguments that we should mandate that the reductions remain in effect for a period of three years after parity is achieved. This is contrary to the fact that the long distance market is highly competitive, and as noted by witness Kapka, market forces will likely prove effective in keeping long distance rates low over the long term. Accordingly, we find that rate reductions shall remain in effect for no less than one year subsequent to parity being accomplished.

D. Allocation of the Flow-Through Benefits between Residential and Business Customers.

Here, we address the proper method for allocating the flow-through benefits between residential and business customers.

1. Argument

AT&T and MCI argue that the 2003 Act simply requires the IXC's to return the benefits of access reductions to both residential and business customers. However, it does not micro-manage the IXC market by mandating a methodology or specific allocation between the customer classes. In doing so, the Act recognizes the competitive market will determine the specifics of the access flow-through. They argue the 2003 Act specifically has given IXC's the maximum flexibility to determine how best to make reductions that meet the needs of the market place. As long as both residential and business customers benefit, each IXC should be left to accomplish its flow-through consistent with its market needs, according to the companies. In addition, each IXC must eliminate any in-state connection fee by July 1, 2006.

BellSouth Long Distance urges that both residential and business customers must receive benefits from the reduction in access charges, but emphasizes that Section 364.163, Florida Statutes, does not require any specific allocation. Nonetheless, under current market conditions, and so long as the other carriers agree to do so, BellSouth Long Distance will allocate the revenue reductions in an approximately pro rata manner between residential and business customers based upon access minutes of use.

Sprint Communications Company states that the methodology contained in witness Kapka's direct testimony should be a guide for flow-through. In his testimony, witness Kapka explained his methodology as follows:

For services which are substantially used by residential subscribed customers, Sprint would determine the average revenue per minute for these services in the aggregate. With each reduction in access charges, Sprint would adjust the average revenue per minute for this base of customers such that the average revenue per minute would be reduced by an amount at least equal to the reduction in access charges per minute. . . . This general approach will ensure that the residential subscriber base will experience a reduction in long distance prices at a level at least as much as the reduction in access costs associated with long distance minutes that customer segment consumes.

Verizon Long Distance (and the Verizon affiliates) plan to flow through the benefits realized from access reductions to both residential and business customers based on the relative proportion of access minutes associated with those classes of customers. The amount of intrastate switched access that Verizon Select Services uses is significantly less than the amount that Verizon Long Distance uses.

The position of OPC, AARP and the AG is that the IXC's should allocate rate reductions between residential and business customers in the same proportion as the respective percent revenue increases for those two classes of customers that have been proposed by the ILECs.

2. Findings and Decision

Each of the IXC's has agreed that the allocation of rate reductions between the residential and business customer classes should be in proportion to the respective access minutes of use. While we have considered the argument that the reductions should be allocated in accordance with the increases on the local exchange side, we are not persuaded that this is feasible, economically appropriate, or even contemplated by the statute. Accordingly, we acknowledge the reasonableness of the IXC proposals that the allocation of the rate reductions being flowed through to residential and business customers on a pro-rata basis according to access minutes of use is reasonable.

XI. CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing, we hereby grant the Petitions of Verizon, Sprint, and BellSouth as filed in Dockets Nos. 030867-TL, 030868-TL, and 030869-TL, as amended by commitments made on the record at the final hearing. In doing so, we find that these Petitions meet the statutory criteria set forth in Section 364.164, Florida Statutes, and that granting the Petitions furthers the Legislature's stated policy of furthering competition in the local exchange market and promoting new offerings and innovations in the telecommunications market for Florida consumers.

BELLSOUTH	SPRINT	VERIZON
Increase non-recurring charges so that the single line residential rates would be lowered by approximately 36 cents.	Increases to basic residential recurring and non-recurring rates would be in four steps spread over three years.	Increase non-recurring revenues from $1.2 million to $2.4 million so that basic local rates can be raised by $1.2 million less than requested.

you're allowing a rate increase for the phone companies to increase competition? why? to see if they can catch up with the government in stealing my money. my service costs me $18.50 a month. the taxes are $21.50 a month. see anything wrong here? there will be NO increase in competition. if there was money to be made the companies would've already done it. that's why they're in business, to make money. with you people(snickers) in charge they don't have to do things like improve service or cut costs. they just whine to you and you leeches just hand them more of my money. did it ever occur to you that maybe some people are getting tired of getting reamed by the government?

Dear Ms. Bradley::

Because of the complexity of the record in these cases, I want to be sure we correctly understand the Directions to Clerk that you filed on January 20, 2004.

With regard to the general direction to include documents described in Rule 9.200(a)(1), and based on a conversation between you and our General Counsel, we understand that you do not intend for us to include:

- (a) the original filed copy of "prefiled testimony" if that testimony was subsequently inserted into the record and included in the transcript of the final hearing; or
- (b) notices of service of discovery and notices of service of discovery responses.

With regard to the direction to include various discovery requests and responses (Items 2, 3, and 4), I want to point out that these documents are not on file with the Commission –and therefore will not be included in the record – except to the extent that they were admitted into the record at the final hearing and/or were subject to a claim of confidentiality.

With regard to the direction to include Item 1 (all correspondence), we intend to include these documents in a separate pouch or pouches that will be described in the index to the record as a single item, e.g., "Pouches Containing Customer Correspondence."

Dear Sir:

Re: Senate Bill 654 (Tele-Competition Innovation and Infrastructure Enhancement Act)

I am appalled that anyone would consider raising basic telephone bills to the extent proposed. This would adversely impact the most vulnerable of our citizens: the poor and the elderly. Many poor people sacrifice to have a basic telephone so that they can look for work opportunities and use for emergency use. The elderly on fixed incomes also can barely afford basic service for emergencies and, in many cases, is their only lifeline to family and to the outside world.

Even a modest increase would adversely affect them, but the proposed increase and the unimaginable prospect of 20% annual increase (with inflation and cost of living increases hovering at around 3%) could mean having to do without telephones or having to cut down on other luxuries such as food.

Please do all that you can to defeat, modify, or at least postpone this bill.

Sincerely

In today's St. Pete Times, a "gentleman" named Alan Ciamporcerio of Verizon in Tampa voiced the opinion that the "new telephone" rates promoted competition. Not here in Citrus County, we have nothing but Sprint and it "stinks." Just this morning I tried calling a neighbor and got the recording advising me "to use a 1 and the area code when calling this number" I tried again without it and my call was completed. Good service, I don't think so but. no alternative. Can the "new rates" improve service, please show me and I might change my mind. Thank you.

You have recently approved a substantial rate increase for the phone companies, which I know is not justified in the current business climate.

I have been a manager in the telecommunications industry for the last twenty years and have seen many of the abuses that have contributed to the current economic conditions in Phone and Data Communications. I have watched as telecommunications companies, such as AT&T and BellSouth, continued to bloat its upper management positions, while squandering resources by over paying for acquisitions and then selling them at heavy losses in order to service ballooning debt. At the same time these companies are experiencing increased competition in non-monopoly areas from companies who are well managed and are making use of new technologies that decreases their expenses and enables them to offer services at lower costs.

The communication companies have lobbied long and hard for these higher rates, I know because I had been involved in the effort. These new rate increases downplay the fees and focus on supposed competition; however, these rate increases only fatten company's profits while doing little or nothing to promote competition. In fact they work just the opposite, as the case with Bell South where they are proposing to reduce competition by purchasing AT&T Wireless with the profits from these higher rates.

There isn't a problem with a company making a reasonable profit if it is by sound management but that is not the current situation. In most cases these companies have been mismanaged to a great extent and are bloated with management overhead. CEO's and executive management are getting compensation in the tens of millions of dollars for this poor management. At the same time they are shipping American jobs out of the country while requiring customers under their monopoly control to pay more. Now in view of all these problems, that have been created by this mismanagement, the PSC has approved fat rate increases that will increase profits not through good management or enhanced services and products but by forcing higher payments from consumers, for the same or lesser service under the guise of competition.

Allowing these rate hikes only increases consumer costs for basic services and does nothing but promote poor management, provide for bloated compensation for those who are responsible for this problem. Increases in corporate profits should be from services and products where consumers are willing to pay higher rates for services they want or need.

This is a request that you repeal this rate increase; the legal suit that the Attorney General has filed should not be necessary to stop this act of piracy by the Communciation Companies.

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing to complain about the cost of phone service in Florida. Bell South is raising rates yet again, and my service has not improved at all. In addition, Florida charges an excess of taxes on phone service.

It would be nice if the folks in Tallahassee would consider the consumer. I am glad to have a job, but working in the airline industry, I was forced to accept a 30% cut in pay and benefits last year. It is hard to make ends meet. Nevertheless, in spite of the recession, everything continues to go up in price. My cable is going up, phone service, insurance costs are skyrocketing, property taxes jump every year along with every other tax. And what do we have to show for it? Florida has about the worst schools in the country now. Health and Human services are taking cuts as well.

Where is all the consumer's and taxpayer's money going? If you look at my monthly phone bill, it runs about $20 or so. Then you add the taxes, and it jumps to about $32! That's ridiculous.

Please address these outrageous taxes and rate hikes. As far as I can tell, all this money is not providing any better service from Bell South or the state of Florida.

Sincerely,

John-Paul Phillipp

Dear Mr. Melson:

We have received and reviewed the draft index to the record on appeal in Case No. SC04-9. As I mentioned during our telephone call yesterday, we found it difficult to cross-reference the index with the docket listing due to the fact that the draft index omits the document numbers. Thank you for providing a copy of the draft index hand-notated with document numbers; this has been helpful. We urge you to consider including the document numbers in the final index filed with the court, or, at a minimum, listing the filing date in the left margin so it is easier to locate particular items.

As we discussed, we have identified several documents that were omitted from the index which we believe should be included. These documents are:

- ✓ 08063-03 Citizens' Motion to Expedite Discovery
- ✓ 08204-03 Memo dated 9/3/03 from Chairman Jaber to Clerk Bayo forwarding correspondence from Attorney General Charles J. Crist, Jr.
- ✓ 08256-03 9/3/03 letter to BellSouth advising FPSC will conduct audit to verify billing units
- ✓ 08257-03 9/3/03 letter to Verizon advising FPSC will conduct audit to verify billing units
- ✓ 08258-03 9/3/03 letter to Sprint advising FPSC will conduct audit to verify billing units
- ✓ 08993-03 9/19/03 memo to CCA forwarding confidential index of audit for Verizon's petition
- ✓ 08994-03 Volume 2 of 2, audit work papers of Verizon's petition

Additionally, as we discussed yesterday, it is necessary that the category "All non-confidential exhibits admitted in record at December 2003 hearing" be expanded to individually list each of these exhibits. It will be impossible to provide the court meaningful citations to these exhibits unless they are individually identified in the record.

You also confirmed yesterday that the correspondence referred to on the last page of the index will be individually paginated.

Finally, it appears that document 12840 should be moved to be included with the rest of the transcripts.

Please advise when you expect to have the index ready for filing with the Florida Supreme Court. Obviously, the index to the record lays the foundation for all subsequent stages of the appeal. If you have any questions regarding this letter or would like to discuss any of these items further, please call.

Very Truly Yours,

Lynn C. Hearn

Re: Telephone Rate Increase
Date: April 4, 2004

Dear Sirs:

I do not agree with the recent rate increase on local and long distance service. I have not made a long distance call from this telephone in more than 2 years. I had the service blocked as I could not see paying taxes on something I do not use. My telephone bill went from $38 to $50 in two months. I would register this complaint using the telephone but I find it difficult to talk to the push buttons. I do not believe there is a real person working for these companies, so who is getting all the money to justify the increase? It certainly is not going for manpower.

As this increase was passed by your office I would like to ask you to rethink this bill. Florida is made up primarily of retirees living on a fixed income and cannot with stand increases monthly on car insurance, house insurance, gas, and especially prescription drugs to name a few. It may sound like pennies to you but we can only absorb so much. If this continues it will not be long before Florida becomes a welfare state.

This is not a threat to Bell South or AT&T but if the rates continue to increase alternative ways will have to be looked at as the telephone at this point in my life really is a luxury.

Thank you.

ORDER ON MOTIONS FOR RECONSIDERATION

BY THE COMMISSION:

I. CASE BACKGROUND

On August 27, 2003, Verizon Florida Inc. (Verizon), Sprint-Florida, Incorporated (Sprint), and BellSouth Telecommunications, Inc. (BellSouth), each filed petitions pursuant to Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. Dockets Nos. 030867-TL (Verizon), 030868-TL (Sprint), and

ORDER NO. PSC-04-0456-FOF-TL

030869-TL (BellSouth) were opened to address these petitions in the time frame provided by Section 364.164, Florida Statutes. On September 10, 2003, this Commission dismissed the initial petitions, because they each failed to make the proposed rate changes over at least the required two-year minimum set forth in Section 364.164(1)(c), Florida Statutes. The companies were allowed to refile, and did so on September 30 (BellSouth), October 1 (Sprint) and October 2 (Verizon).

By Order No. PSC-03-1240-PCO-TL, this Commission consolidated Docket No. 030961-TI, which was opened to address questions regarding the IXCs' flow-through to customers of any access charge reductions, into this proceeding for hearing. A hearing on this matter was held on December 10-12, 2003. Our final order, Order No. PSC-03-1469-FOF-TL, was issued on December 24, 2003.

On January 7, 2004, Charles J. Crist, Jr., Attorney General, State of Florida (AG) filed his Notice of Appeal. On the same day, the Office of Public Counsel (OPC) filed its Notice of Appeal.

On January 8, 2004, the AG filed his Motion for Reconsideration of the final order. In his Motion for Reconsideration, the AG asserts that we should reconsider our decision because: (1) we did not properly consider the impacts on the public health, safety, and welfare, as required by Section 364.01, Florida Statutes; (2) the rate increase proposed by BellSouth is anticompetitive because there will be no rate increase for bundled service packages; and (3) we failed to consider the impact of the rate increases on senior and low-income consumers. On January 12, 2004, the AG filed a Request for Oral Argument, and on March 17, 2004, he filed an Amended Request for Oral Argument.

On January 8, 2004, AARP filed its Motion for Reconsideration of the final order, as well as a Request for Oral Argument. AARP seeks reconsideration of our decision on five points in the Order: (1) our delegation to staff of the authority to review and approve the 45-day tariffs that would be filed as a result of approval of the ILECs' petitions; (2) our approval of the ILECs' additional concessions; (3) our decision that the costs of the local loop are properly borne by basic local service; (4) our decisions that basic local service is artificially supported and that removal of support will induce enhanced market entry; and (5) our decision that residential customers will benefit from approval and implementation of the ILECs' petitions as contemplated by the statute.

On March 3, 2004, the Florida Supreme Court relinquished jurisdiction to this Commission for the limited purpose of ruling on the AG and AARP motions for reconsideration. The Court set a deadline of May 3, 2004 for us to make our ruling.

On March 15, 2004, Verizon, Sprint, BellSouth/BellSouth Long Distance (BellSouth), and AT&T/MCI ("respondents") filed their Responses to the AG's Motion for Reconsideration.

and to AARP's Motion for Reconsideration and to the initial Requests for Oral Argument.<sup>1</sup> Thereafter, on March 29, 2004, Verizon, BellSouth/BellSouth Long Distance, AT&T/MCI, and Sprint filed responses to the AG's Amended Motion for Oral Argument. On April 20, 2004, the AG filed a Notice of Supplemental Authority, referring us to the decision in United States Telecom Ass'n v. Federal Communications Commission, 359 F.3d 554 (D.C. Cir. 2004), decided March 2, 2004.

This Order addresses the Motions for Reconsideration, Responses, and Requests for Oral Argument. By this decision, we comply with the Supreme Court's direction in its March 3 Order.

II. ORAL ARGUMENT/REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF CONFIDENTIAL MATERIAL

We received oral argument on the motions addressed in this Order, as requested by AARP and the Attorney General. However, the Attorney General's request for oral argument also contained a request that we release confidential material. We find that that request cannot be granted, as it is untimely and not proper within the context of a Motion for Oral Argument. We are concerned by the fact that the Attorney General has not specified what material he would like released. Moreover, the prehearing officer has already issued Orders addressing all pending Requests for Confidential Classification. Thus, to the extent that material is currently being treated as confidential, it has been accorded that treatment by an Order issued in this proceeding.

The most recent Orders addressing Requests for Confidentiality were issued on March 8, 2004. The time for seeking reconsideration of those Orders ran on March 18, 2004. No party responded in opposition to any of the requests for confidential classification, and no party sought reconsideration of any of the Orders granting confidentiality. Florida case law is clear that we are without authority to extend the time for seeking reconsideration of an Order, even if it were otherwise inclined to do so. See City of Hollywood v. Public Employee Relations Commission, 432 So. 2d 79 (Fla. 4th DCA 1983).

III. MOTIONS FOR RECONSIDERATION

A. Standard of Review

The standard of review for a motion for reconsideration is whether the motion identifies a point of fact or law which was overlooked or which this Commission failed to consider in rendering its Order. See Stewart Bonded Warehouse, Inc. v. Bevis, 294 So. 2d 315 (Fla. 1974); Diamond Cab Co. v. King, 146 So. 2d 889 (Fla. 1962); and Pingree v. Quaintance, 394 So. 2d

<sup>1</sup> By Order No. PSC-04-0037-PCO-TL, issued January 13, 2004, the prehearing officer extended the time for filing responses until such time as the Supreme Court relinquished jurisdiction to allow us to consider the outstanding motions.

162 (Fla. 1st DCA 1981). In a motion for reconsideration, it is not appropriate to reargue matters that have already been considered. Sherwood v. State, 111 So. 2d 96 (Fla. 3rd DCA 1959), citing State ex.rel. Jaytex Realty Co. v. Green, 105 So. 2d 817 (Fla. 1st DCA 1958). Furthermore, a motion for reconsideration should not be granted “based upon an arbitrary feeling that a mistake may have been made, but should be based upon specific factual matters set forth in the record and susceptible to review.” Stewart Bonded Warehouse, Inc., 294 So. 2d at 317.

B. Attorney General’s Motion

1. Consideration of Section 364.01(4)

a. Arguments

The Attorney General contends that we erred by failing to consider our legislative mandate, as set forth in Section 364.01(4)(a), Florida Statutes, to protect the health, safety and welfare of all consumers by ensuring they have access to basic local service at reasonable and affordable rates. Referring to the testimony of Verizon witness Danner, the Attorney General argues that the proposed increase in basic rates will be five times greater for seniors aged 76 and over, compared to the increase for consumers aged 26 to 35 years of age. The Attorney General adds that those who can least afford the increase in the basic rates will not enjoy any of the alleged benefits arising from the theoretical competition that might be seen in the future. Consequently, the Attorney General contends that we must have “. . . overlooked the requirement to ensure reasonable and affordable basic rates for all consumers.” Motion at p. 5.

The respondents universally reject the Attorney General’s contention on this point. Specifically, BellSouth contends that the Order contradicts this assertion, as it is replete with analysis of evidence concerning how granting the petitions of the incumbent local exchange companies (ILECs) will benefit the residential telecommunications consumers in Florida, including those who desire only basic local service.

The respondents also contend that we did not err in our application of the appropriate statutory considerations. Of note, BellSouth argues that Section 364.164 is the latest expression of legislative intent concerning basic local telecommunications services and the impact of rates on Florida consumers, and that this specific statutory provision takes precedence over a prior, general expression of legislative intent.<sup>2</sup> BellSouth argues, therefore, that this Commission properly considered the benefit to residential customers as contemplated by Section 364.164(1), Florida Statutes.

Similarly, Sprint states that it is a well-settled rule of statutory construction that a special statute covering a particular subject matter is controlling over a more general statutory provision covering the same and other subjects. The more specific statute is considered to be an exception to the general terms of the more comprehensive statute. Under this rule, Sprint asserts, the specific provisions of Section 364.164 (1) prevail over Section 364.01(4)(a), which provides the general manner in which the Commission should exercise its authority to protect the public health, safety, and welfare. To arrive at another conclusion, Sprint states, would render the specific language of Section 364.164(1) meaningless.<sup>3</sup>

AT&T and MCI join Verizon in arguing that we did consider Section 364.01. AT&T and MCI state that although the Commission's Order does not specifically cite to Section 364.01(4), the Commission fulfilled the legislative purpose embodied in Section 364.01(4) by implementing Section 364.164. They emphasize that the legislative intent of Section 364.01(4) is addressed throughout the Order.

b. Decision

Upon consideration, we find that the Attorney General has not demonstrated that in acting on the petitions we overlooked or failed to consider our obligations under Section 364.01(4)(a). A primary rule of statutory interpretation is to harmonize related statutes so that each is given effect. Butler v. State, 838 So. 2d 554, 555 (Fla. 2003). It is also a well-established rule of statutory construction that a special statute covering a particular subject matter is controlling over a general statutory provision covering the same and other subjects. McKendry v. State, 641 So. 2d 45, 46. Furthermore, statutes should be read together to give each provision the maximum force and effect, but when there is unavoidable conflict, the more recent, specific expression of the Legislature's intent is the controlling provision. Id., citing Sharer v. Hotel Corp. of America, 144 So. 2d 813 (Fla. 1962). Thus, while Sections 364.01(4) and 364.164 must be read together, Section 364.164 is the controlling provision to the extent there is any conflict between the two. To arrive at any other conclusion would render the specific language of Section 364.164(1) without meaning. See Saunders vs. Saunders, 796 So. 2d 1253 (Fla. 1st DCA 2001).

In this case, however, there is no conflict between Sections 364.164 and 364.01(4)(a). The former section required us to consider, among other things, the impact of proposed rate changes on the creation of a more attractive competitive local exchange market for the benefit of residential consumers. The Order is replete with discussion of our findings and conclusions on this issue. The latter section required us to consider whether our actions ensure that basic local telecommunications services are available to all consumers in the state at reasonable and affordable prices. Although the Order did not make specific reference to Section 364.01(4)(a), the Order demonstrates that we did consider the impact of its action on reasonable and affordable prices for basic telecommunications services. For example, we found that:

- Experience from other states shows that approval of the ILECs' proposals will have little, if any, negative impact on the availability of universal service. (Order at 18.)
- [T]he record shows that basic local service will continue to remain affordable for the vast majority of residential customers. (Order at 18.)
- [T]he amended Lifeline provisions in Section 364.10 will help to protect economically disadvantaged customers from the effect of local rate increases. (Order at 19.)

In making these findings, we afforded the testimony of Verizon witness Danner the proper weight. That testimony addressed the difference in net impact on consumers in various age groups and indicated that consumers in all age groups will receive benefits from long distance rate reductions that will offset, to varying degrees, the impact of the increase in basic local service rates. When combined with other evidence, we conclude that the net impact of granting the petitions is consistent with the requirement to ensure that basic local service is available at reasonable and affordable prices. Thus, we reject the Attorney General's Motion on this point.

To avoid any misinterpretation, we shall, nevertheless, clarify the Order by adding a sentence at the end of the first paragraph under the heading "Conclusion" on page 56 to state that:

In granting the Petitions, we have also considered the provisions of Section 364.01(4)(a) and concluded that our action will preserve reasonable and affordable prices for basic local service.

2. BellSouth's Increases Do Not Apply to Bundled Packages

a. Arguments

The premise of the Attorney General's second argument for reconsideration is that BellSouth's proposed rate increase is anticompetitive. The Attorney General contends that BellSouth's proposed increases to basic rates exempt bundled services from increases; thus, the approval of BellSouth's petition encourages customers to purchase bundled services in order to obtain some benefit or exemption from the rate increase. The Attorney General maintains that this emphasis on bundled services has an anticompetitive impact on consumers. The Attorney General states that under Section 364.164, we are required to consider whether a petition will induce enhanced market entry. The Attorney General believes that BellSouth's rate increase will encourage use of bundled services and will not induce enhanced market entry, but instead discourage competition.

In response, BellSouth cites to testimony of AT&T and MCI witness Mayo where he maintains that the ILEC proposals are consistent with Section 364.164. He asserts that the proposals are anticipated to spur competition in telephony and result in more competitive markets. BellSouth also argues that it has applied the basic rate increases in accordance with Section 364.164(2). Further, BellSouth argues that the Attorney General attempts to raise a new argument, which is inappropriate in a motion for reconsideration. BellSouth also contends that the record shows that market entry will be enhanced by removing the access charge support for local services because the CLECs will be able to compete in providing basic and bundled services.

The other respondents offer similar arguments. AT&T and MCI further indicate that the Attorney General fails to cite to any record evidence to support his claim that mere preexisting market share and the ability to bundle services constitute anticompetitive conduct. AT&T and MCI argue to the contrary that, as explained by Knology's witness Boccucci, any carrier's best opportunity to compete is through providing bundled services at competitive prices.

b. Decision

Upon consideration, we conclude that the Attorney General's claim that BellSouth's proposal is anti-competitive must fail. The evidence clearly demonstrates that each of the ILECs' proposals will result in a more competitive market. We find the evidence establishes that the best opportunities to compete in telecommunications exist through a carrier's ability to bundle services. Order at pp. 27 and 38. Furthermore, we have already considered this issue as demonstrated by the discussion set forth at pages 5 and 6 of the Attorney General's Motion. Thus, the Attorney General has not identified a mistake of fact or law in our decision. As such, the Motion on this point is denied.

3. Benefit to Residential Customers

a. Arguments

The Attorney General asserts that Florida citizens will be irrevocably injured by granting the ILECs' petitions, because the drastic increases in the basic phone rates are neither reasonable or affordable for senior and low-income consumers. Thus, the Attorney General contends that we must have failed to properly consider the testimony of the detriment to customers that will result if the ILECs' proposals are implemented.

The respondents generally reject this notion as well. They argue that we considered customer impacts, but found competing testimony regarding ultimate benefits to customers more persuasive. Thus, they believe that the Attorney General's arguments on this point are a rehash of arguments this Commission has already considered and rejected. Further, BellSouth states that this Commission thoroughly considered the impact on seniors by finding that many seniors on fixed incomes take a number of additional services such as cellular service, cable service and internet services. On that basis, BellSouth concludes that the rate increases are "within the zone of affordability" for this segment of consumers. BellSouth notes that we determined in our Order that 53% to 72% of even Lifeline customers served by the ILECs buy one or more ancillary services. Order at p. 32. AT&T and MCI also note that Knology witness Boccucci asserted that the ability to provide bundled services allows Knology to provide more economical prices to seniors.

b. Decision

Regarding the Attorney General's third point, we find that this issue was thoroughly considered and addressed. See Order at pp. 26 – 33. We concluded that "... Florida consumers as a whole will reap the benefits of competition, and, ultimately, competition will serve to regulate the level of prices consumers will pay." Order at p. 29. We also found that "... even those customers that use calling cards or dial-around service will receive benefits from increased competition, as will older citizens that use 1+ calling." Order at p. 31. Furthermore, we noted that, while outside the scope of our consideration of the Petitions, the ILECs' concessions regarding Lifeline will provide additional protection for the economically disadvantaged, while the statute itself provides targeted assistance for those unable to afford the increases. Order at p. 32. We found that

The evidence shows that even with the proposed local rate increases, there will not be a significant number of customers that drop off the network. While the need for continued targeted assistance for some customers may foster its own social welfare concerns, those concerns must be balanced with the Legislature's clear intent to move Florida's telecommunications markets towards increased competition.

Order at p. 32. The Attorney General has not identified an error in this conclusion. Rather, he re-argues matters we have already addressed.

As for the Supplemental Authority offered by the Attorney General, we conclude that the D.C. Circuit's decision in United States Telecom Ass'n v. Federal Communications Commission does not rise to the level that would necessitate that we reconsider our decision. While the decision does muddy the waters as to the future of certain UNEs, it does not, by itself, automatically remove any UNEs from the national list. Furthermore, the D.C. Circuit's decision is currently stayed, and further appeals are possible. While we are concerned about the uncertain state of the FCC's unbundling rules, even if the D.C. Circuit's decision remains in place, and UNEs are removed from the list as a result, that process will likely take place over an extended period of time. Furthermore, even if the D.C. Circuit's decision remains in place, carriers that compete using their own facilities would not be directly affected. For all these reasons, we conclude that the D.C. Circuit's decision does not require a change to our conclusions in this case.

For all the foregoing reasons, we hereby deny the Attorney General's Motion on this point as well.

C. AARP'S Motion

1. Approval of 45-day Rate Adjustment Filings

a. Arguments

AARP argues that, in our Order, we have improperly allowed our staff to administratively review and approve the tariffs filed implementing this Commission's decision approving the ILECs' Petitions. AARP contends that this is directly contrary to the language of the statute, which requires:

... The commission shall, within 45 days after the rate adjustment filing, issue a final order confirming compliance with this section, and such an order shall be final for all purposes.

Section 364.164(2), Florida Statutes. AARP contends that we should modify our Order to reflect that the Commission staff is not authorized to administratively review and approve the tariffs, and that the rate increases contained in such tariff filings will only become effective after we have issued an order approving them.

Generally, those parties responding to AARP's motion believe that AARP has not identified an error on this point, but note that should we see fit, clarification may be in order.

AT&T and MCI note that the authority delegated to our staff to conduct the essentially ministerial task of reviewing and approving the tariffs implementing the ILECs' Petitions is not unlike that delegation of authority to review a tariff which was upheld by the Court in Citizens of the State of Florida v. Wilson, 567 So. 2d 889, 892 (Fla. 1990). In that case, the Court upheld our delegation to staff of authority to review a supplemental tariff rider to ensure that it met certain conditions, and if it did, to then approve the tariff. AT&T and MCI argue that the situation here is very similar in that this Commission has already approved the ILECs' Petitions, which specify the conditions the tariffs must meet, and has only delegated to staff the administrative and ministerial task of ensuring that the tariffs meet the conditions of the approved Petitions. AT&T and MCI also add that it is clear that if the tariffs filed in this case do not conform to our Order, our staff will bring the non-compliant tariffs before us for our consideration.<sup>4</sup>

b. Decision

Upon consideration, we conclude that AARP has identified a point that requires clarification due to a scrivener's error. We find error in our Order to the extent that the Order, as issued, does not fully and accurately reflect our actual vote, which was to provide administrative authority to our staff to review the 45-day rate adjustment filings and issue an administrative final order based upon that review. The Order does not reflect the issuance of an administrative final order. Therefore, the next to last ordering paragraph is amended to read:

ORDERED that Commission staff is hereby authorized to administratively review ~~and approve~~ the tariffs implementing these decisions and to issue administrative final orders approving tariffs that conform to these decisions. It is further

With this correction, the Order accurately reflects our decision. Furthermore, we find that, as corrected, our Order complies with the statute. We find that our delegation of authority to Commission staff is allowable, and is, in fact, not uncommon for the review of similar filings. See Citizens of the State of Florida v. Wilson, supra, (finding delegation to staff to review and approve tariff not improper when conditions for approval clearly set forth by Commission). In this case, review of the tariffs will be limited to ensuring that they conform to the conditions in the approved Petitions. If any tariff does not conform, it will be brought before us as quickly as possible. We further note that the 45-day requirement in the statute is generally not conducive to bringing a recommendation for our consideration at an Agenda Conference, further supporting, as a practical matter, our decision to delegate authority to our staff to approve conforming tariffs. (Transcript, Vol. 16, p. 2060).

2. Approval of ILEC Commitments

a. Arguments

AARP asserts that we erred when we approved the ILEC's additional concessions as set forth in the following chart:

Increase non-recurring charges so that the single line residential rates would be lowered by approximately 36 cents.	Increases to basic residential recurring and non-recurring rates would be in four steps spread over three years.	Increase non-recurring revenues from $1.2 million to $2.4 million so that basic local rates can be raised by $1.2 million less than requested.

ATTN: ST. JAMES	Sprint	AT&T/MCI
Increase Lifeline eligibility to 135% of the federal poverty level.	Increase Lifeline eligibility to 135% of the federal poverty level.	Increase Lifeline eligibility to 135% of the federal poverty level.
	Lifeline rates would not be increased for four years.	Lifeline rates would not be increased for four years.
Will work with PSC to review ECS in a Commission workshop.	Will work with PSC to review ECS in a Commission workshop.	Will work with PSC to review ECS in a Commission workshop.

AARP contends that these proposals effectively modified the ILECs' petitions, and that approval of the modified petitions appears contrary to Section 364.164(1), Florida Statutes, which specifically provides that this Commission shall issue an order "granting or denying" any petition. AARP contends that we were authorized only to approve or deny the petitions, not to modify them. AARP adds that the only proper way for this Commission to grant the petitions with the offered amendments would have been to deny the petitions, but with specific directions that amended petitions incorporating the above concessions would be considered on an expedited basis. AARP also notes that these proposals were offered late in the proceeding, and that, consequently, AARP and the other consumer representatives had no opportunity to conduct discovery or cross-examination regarding the proposals.

The respondents maintain that AARP has not identified a mistake of fact or law on this point. They argue not only that the statute should not be read to preclude amendments to the petitions, but also that even if the statute is read as suggested by AARP, we considered and approved the proposals as a matter separate and apart from our consideration of the petitions. Thus, no violation occurred even under AARP's reading of the statute.

In addition, AT&T and MCI emphasize that the ILECs' additional proposals are beyond the scope of their specific requests to reduce access charges in a revenue neutral manner; thus, their approval does not result in any violation of Section 364.164(1), Florida Statutes. Sprint adds that its proposal to spread the proposed increases in four steps over three years was made in response to the testimony of Commission staff witness Shafer, and that all parties had the opportunity to cross-examine Mr. Shafer. Furthermore, Sprint notes that AARP did cross-examine Sprint's witnesses regarding Mr. Shafer's proposal.

b. Decision

The Hearing Transcript clearly reflects that the additional commitments of the ILECs were addressed and approved after the ILECs' petitions had been approved, which demonstrates that the Commission did not consider the additional commitments to constitute amendments to the petitions. See Transcript Vol. 16 at pp. 2057-2060. Thus, to the extent the Order at p. 56 gives the impression that we considered the additional proposals to constitute amendments to the petitions, the Order is in error. Because we accepted and approved the additional ILEC commitments as a matter separate and apart from our approval of the ILEC Petitions under the criteria outlined in Section 364.164, Florida Statutes, we hereby amend our Order such that the first sentence under the heading "Conclusion" on page 56 of the Order shall now read:

Based on the foregoing, we hereby grant the Petitions of Verizon, Sprint, and BellSouth as filed in Dockets Nos. 030867-TL, 030868-TL, and 030869-TL, ~~as amended by commitments made on the record at the final hearing.~~

Otherwise, AARP's motion on this point is denied, because we are not persuaded that our approval of the additional commitments constituted modification of the Petitions or approval of modifications to the Petitions.<sup>5</sup>

3. Assignment of the Cost of the Local Loop

a. Arguments

AARP argues that we erred by assigning the entire cost of the local loop to basic local service. Had we done otherwise, AARP contends that this Commission could not have concluded that intrastate access charges provide support for basic local telecommunications rates. AARP emphasizes that our only past decision on this point was the 1998 Report on Fair and Reasonable Rates to the Legislature, which AARP maintains: (1) is not legally binding; (2) is not economically and logically sound; and (3) "fl[ies] in the face of the financial facts governing the operation of the ILECs." AARP contends that the testimony in the case reflects that there are other services that could not exist without the local loop; therefore, if only basic local service bears the cost of the loop, other services get a "free ride." While AARP seems to acknowledge that there is no economic principle requiring that the costs of the local loop be spread across other ancillary services, AARP contends that "fundamental fairness and basic common sense" require that the costs be spread.

The respondents maintain, as a general matter, that AARP's assertions on this point are pure reargument and that the Commission has already addressed and rejected these contentions. They further argue that the record supports this Commission's conclusion, referencing in particular the testimony of witnesses Caldwell (as adopted by witness Shell), Banerjee, and Dickerson. Citing the Hearing Transcript Vol. 8 at pages 928 through 929, Verizon, in particular, emphasizes that “. . . the ILEC witnesses went to great lengths to explain that local loop costs cannot be fairly apportioned to services other than basic service.”

<sup>5</sup> In reaching this conclusion, we do not determine whether AARP's interpretation of the statute on this point is correct. Rather, we simply do not reach that point, because we considered the Petitions and additional commitments separately.

b. Decision

AARP has not identified any mistake in our conclusion regarding the assignment of the loop costs, but merely argues against the weight we gave to the evidence presented, which does not identify a mistake of fact or law in our decision. Furthermore, we did not rely solely upon the Fair and Reasonable Rate Report as the basis for our conclusion that the costs of the local loop should not be allocated beyond basic local service. In fact, the second sentence of the section of the Order containing our findings on this point states that, “In making this finding, we accept the economic testimony of the ILECs’ and IXCs’ witnesses, which treat the cost of the local loop as a cost of basic local service.” Order at p. 21. While we did place some weight on the fact that this issue had been considered previously in the context of the Fair and Reasonable Rates Report, the Order clearly reflects that this Commission did not find our earlier decision to be binding precedent. Instead, we simply found that neither AARP nor OPC had provided any “new persuasive basis” to deviate from that earlier conclusion, which was supported on the current record by testimony of the ILEC and IXC witnesses. Order at p. 22. AARP’s motion on this point is, therefore, denied.

4. Support Is Barrier to Competition/Removal Will Induce Enhanced Market Entry

a. Arguments

Based upon its assertion that our conclusion that the costs of the loop should not be allocated is erroneous, AARP next argues that we erred by concluding that the existence of support serves as a barrier to competitive entry and that removal of that barrier will induce enhanced market entry. AARP further contends that even if there is some amount of support for local service derived from access fees, the record does not show that the existence of such support serves as a barrier to entry by efficient competitors. Instead, AARP argues, the record shows that competition for the residential customer has increased in recent years without increases in the rates charged by the ILECs for local service.

AARP also contends that the record does not show that increasing local rates will induce enhanced market entry, specifically disputing the testimony offered by Knology and AT&T. AARP maintains that the testimony offered by these companies regarding their entry into Florida markets is just as easily attributed to other factors unrelated to the ILECs’ Petitions in this case. Thus, AARP argues that our decision on this point is not based upon competent, substantial evidence and should be reconsidered.

The responding parties argue that the record does, in fact, support this Commission's conclusions that support for basic local service provided by access charges does impede competition and that removal of that support will induce enhanced market entry. They maintain that AARP is improperly re-arguing its case and only disputes the weight that we gave to the evidence in the record. Therefore, they argue that the Motion on this point should be denied.

b. Decision

As demonstrated by the discussion at pages 24 - 26 and 38 - 39 of our Order, we gave careful, thoughtful consideration to the record on these points. We considered testimony from experts on economic theory, as well as empirical evidence. Based on that evidence, we reached the well-reasoned conclusions that: (1) the current level of support for basic local service rates provided by access charges makes it economically infeasible for CLECs " . . . to price complementary products and packages in a manner that would allow [the CLEC] to make up for lack of profitability in the provision of basic service"; (2) CLECs, as a result, are unable to effectively bundle products and services for consumers, limiting their ability to serve customers, and particularly residential customers, on a profitable basis; (3) poor profitability, or limited profitability, is the main deterrent to entry; and (4) granting the petitions will remove an obstacle to market entry, providing opportunities for competitors to not only enter new markets, but also to offer new products and services beyond those that they would otherwise be able to offer were the market to remain constrained by the pricing vestiges of the former regulatory regime. Order at pp. 24, 38, 39. We found the testimony of witnesses Gordon, Mayo, and Boccucci particularly persuasive on these points, as well as evidence from our own Competition Report.

Furthermore, we specifically addressed and rejected AARP's and OPC's concerns about the effect access charge reductions would have on competition in view of testimony from Knology's witness Boccucci that granting the ILEC petitions would allow his company to attract and deploy new capital in Florida, thereby offering Florida consumers a choice of providers in the residential and business local exchange markets, as well as a choice of new services. Order at pp. 26, 28, and 38. AARP's attempt to dismiss the example provided by Knology as " . . . a cable TV operation that sells telephone service as an ancillary operation" is not well-taken, because we recognized that Knology, regardless of how characterized, offers consumers a competitive choice in telecommunications providers and services. AARP Motion at p. 7; Order at pp. 29-30.

In sum, AARP has not identified any error in our decision on these points, nor anything we overlooked. AARP simply re-argues its case and disputes the weight given by this Commission to certain witnesses' testimony. As such, AARP's Motion on this aspect of the Order is denied.

5. Benefit to Residential Consumers

a. Arguments

AARP argues that we erred by concluding that residential customers will benefit as a result of granting the ILECs' petitions. AARP notes, in particular, that it believes we erred in our consideration of the impact of the flow-through of the access charge reductions by the IXC's. Specifically, AARP contends that in rejecting arguments made by OPC's witness Ostrander that the Petitioners were unable to quantify the benefits to customers, we erroneously stated that:

We reject that argument, and find that the preponderance of the evidence in the proceeding shows that the benefits to residential customers as a whole generated by the resulting decreases in long distance rates and elimination of the in-state connection fee will outweigh the increases in local rates.

Order at p. 30. AARP contends this statement is false. AARP argues that the evidence reflects that 90% of the increases will be borne by residential customers, while the IXCs intend to flow through the access charge reductions to all of their customers, including their multi-line business customers. AARP adds that the record shows that more than half of the access charge reductions will be flowed through to IXCs' large customers.

AARP also contends that there was no demonstration that technological advances would occur, or that there would be any increased quality of service. AARP adds that comments in our Order regarding long term reductions in local service rates are similarly unsubstantiated.

In response, AT&T and MCI simply contend that, "AARP's final point of factual mistake is . . . argumentative about the conclusions drawn from the evidence and not a complaint about the evidence itself." Response at p. 17. By and large, the other responses on this point are similar. The respondents further maintain that AARP raises arguments that are not relevant to the inquiry regarding the ILECs' Petitions, because this Commission was not required to consider the degree of benefit that residential customers would receive from the long distance rate reductions. Regardless, each cites to numerous portions of the record that they believe support our conclusions.

b. Decision

Upon consideration, we find that we carefully weighed the evidence presented on this issue, and even considered evidence on benefits derived from long distance rate reductions that we concluded we were not required to consider.<sup>6</sup> We received and considered testimony that residential customers will benefit as a result of increased competition from having choices regarding providers, services, technologies and pricing. We also heard testimony that customers would benefit from upgraded quality and increased calling volumes as a result of competition and reduced long distance rates. Order at pp. 26-28. In addition, we considered the arguments offered by OPC, AARP, Common Cause, and Sugarmill Woods that no benefit had been shown and that the market would not be enhanced as claimed by the ILECs, because the ILECs' testimony was based on a flawed model. Id. In the end, we weighed the evidence presented and concluded that residential consumers would ultimately experience an overall benefit from the increased competition that will result from the implementation of the ILECs' petitions. AARP has not identified an error in this conclusion, but, again, simply re-argues its case and asks us to re-weigh the evidence. As such, we find it appropriate to reject this aspect of AARP's Motion as well.

We acknowledge, nevertheless, that clarification to a limited degree may be warranted with regard to the sentence in our Order describing our finding that "...the benefits to residential customers as a whole generated by the resulting decreases in long distance rates and elimination of the in-state connection fee will outweigh the increases in local rates." The referenced sentence was not intended to indicate that we found that the long distance rate reductions would result in a "dollar for dollar" offset of the local rate increases for residential customers. Rather, as the rest of the Order more clearly explains, we found that many customers would receive the benefit of reduced long distance rates, as well as the elimination of the in-state connection fee, and that even those who did not receive a rate reduction would receive a qualitative benefit from increased availability of bundled offerings, more competitive options for service, and stimulated long distance usage. Ultimately, the sentence criticized by AARP was intended to reflect that the cumulative benefits resulting from granting the ILECs' petitions, including long distance rate reductions, would offset the impact of the local rate increases. Thus, the specific sentence on page 30 of the Order that AARP has referenced is hereby clarified to read as follows:

We reject that argument, and find that the preponderance of evidence in the proceeding shows that the qualitative and quantitative benefits to residential customers as a whole generated by the resulting decreases in long distance rates, and elimination of the in-state connection fee, increased availability of bundled offerings, more competitive options for service, and stimulated long distance usage will outweigh the increase in local rates.

<sup>6</sup> "While Section 364.164 does not mandate that we consider the degree of benefit to residential customers from long distance rate reductions, our review of the legislative history convinces us that it is within our discretion to do so." Order at p. 30.

IV. CONCLUSION

For all of the foregoing reasons, the Motions for Reconsideration are denied. Neither motion identifies a mistake of fact or law in this Commission's decision. However, we hereby clarify or amend our Order in certain respects, as set forth more specifically in the Section III of this Order. In brief, we clarify or amend our Order by: (1) adding language to confirm that we considered the impact of Section 364.01(4)(a) in reaching our decision; (2) amending the Order to clarify that we delegated to our staff the authority to review the required tariff filings and to issue administrative final orders approving those tariffs; (3) amending the Order to clarify that our approval of certain ILEC commitments was not a precondition to the approval of the ILECs' petitions; and (4) clarifying that in analyzing the benefits to residential consumers of long distance rate reductions, we considered qualitative as well as quantitative benefits. With these amendments and clarifications, we find that we have fully performed our duty and rendered our decision in this consolidated proceeding in accordance with the applicable provisions of Chapter 364, Florida Statutes.

It is therefore

ORDERED by the Florida Public Service Commission that the Motions for Reconsideration filed by the AARP and the Attorney General of the State of Florida are hereby denied. It is further ORDERED that Order No. PSC-03-1469-FOF-TL, issued December 24, 2003, is hereby amended and clarified as set forth in the body of this Order. It is further

ORDERED that Order No. PSC-03-1469-FOF-TL is otherwise reaffirmed in all other respects. It is further

PROBLEM INFORMATION

Problem Type: Other Complaints

Complaint Detail: I would like to know what regulations the Public Service Commission adheres to in overseeing Florida Power & Light and Bellsouth? Bellsouth is on the top fifty's list of the most profitable companies in the USA. FP&L most recently reported profits for the first quarter of $130 million dollars. The previous year showed a stellar performance of $887 million in profit. How can you possibly support the position for validating further increases in the cost of these services? Most of the residents that reside in our complex, and in Deerfield Beach for that matter are on fixed incomes. We have no means of keeping parity with these constant increases when the Public Service Commission keeps agreeing to these unwarranted and abusive rate hikes. We can cut spending on food and clothing, but the basic electric and phone services are indispensable. I don't know who's interests your suppose to be serving, obviously it not the people who live here. Sincerely, Thomas Ciulla Jr.

Subject: RE: Comments regarding DN 11953-03 in Docket 030869 (rate rebalancing)

Good Morning Kay:

I staff filed document 11953-03 on November 24, 2003. This filing consisted of sensitive documents and information obtained by the staff auditors from BellSouth in Audit No. 03-247-1-1 and claimed as confidential by Bell at the audit exit conference.

Bell filed a follow-up letter claim on December 2, 2003, document 12347-03. In their letter Bell refers to confidential working papers associated with this audit; therefore, we recognized document 11953-03 as claimed confidential in our RCA division records.

In preparing for the quarterly report as of September 30, 2005, I checked on all outstanding RCA Division items.

Since there was no declassification date for document 11953-03, I reviewed the electronic files and noted the docket was closed, apparently on August 19, 2005 by document 08097-05. Since the five-year-declassification-clock starts for "claimed audit working papers" seemed to start, I discussed establishing a declassification date with Marguerite. Our recommendation for this material is that it should be destroyed 5 years after the docket closed in accordance with the Divisions records retention for audit materials dealing with telecommunications audits.

I hope this information will help you process this matter.

If you need additional information please let me know.

Bob, this is Vol 2 of BellSouth audit (audit control No. 03-247-1-1) on verification of pricing units.

We have "confidential claim" as its status. Is that the correct status? BellSouth says in a response to the audit (DN 12347-03) that they filed at least two RCCs covering some of the material in the audit. If that is the case, I believe the conf. material filed with those RCCs has been declassified.

Any assistance you can provide will be welcome!

Thanks.

Yes on all. You would also want to locate their claim letters (10475, etc.) and move those as well.

As for 10488 and 10996, they and their claims, etc. need to be placed in all four dockets. He referenced only 030961 (which is the flow-through docket, yes) but the order was issued in all four dockets.

Confusing, I know, but Rick Wright said this is only happening for one more year. Thank goodness.

Kay,

10476-05

10477-05 ~ (these next 3 are pretty much the same thing, so advising me that one document should be moved will tell me if they all should be moved)

10478-05

Should these 2 be moved from 050000 to 030961?
