ZEPHYRHILS - City Councilman Charlie Proctor faces three misdemeanor charges that he illegally bought and sold jewelry and other secondhand items from his coin shop, Charlie's Coins. Proctor said he wasn't aware of the state laws governing the sales of secondary goods, since he mostly deals in coins.

"I've been in business 25 years," he said. "I may not be the smartest man in the world, but I would never have broken the law over a $6 certificate. That's what it costs to register."

Florida doesn't regulate the sale of U.S. coins, but anyone who deals in "secondary goods" including fine jewelry must register with the state Department of Revenue and comply with regulations on the sale of those items.

Proctor was first elected in 2011, defeating incumbent Councilman Manny Funes. He was unopposed in his re-election campaign until Monday, when Dylan Kinsman filed to run against him. Kinsman had initially filed to run against Councilman Kent Compton but withdrew from that race to challenge Proctor instead.

Obama's prayerful gibberish don't know how it would fit, exactly, in this liturgical mushiness between Epiph-any and the threshold of Lent, but in the aftermath of President Barack Obama's eyebrow-arching remarks at the National Prayer Breakfast on Thursday, is there a Christian minister anywhere who didn't immediately feed Sunday's half-finished sermon to the shredder?

I mean, how could any or-dained defender of the faith let this latest, hopelessly egregious exercise in moral equivalency by the president pass unchallenged?

Settle down. This isn't a plea for politics at the pulpit. Instead, it's about setting the record straight. It's about reassuring rattled believers in the pews that to make an irrelevant point --- the current of Islamic ex Darbaric acts tremists are not unique in human history or to Middle East geography — the leader of the free world indulged in history mining that was cherry-picked at best and was, at worst, conveniently misrepresented.

Speaking of unworthy, though, how he dragged Christianity into the mix was exactly that.

"Lest we get on our high horse and think this unique to some other place," he said, "remember that during the Crusades and the Inquisition, people committed terrible deeds in the name of Christ.

"In our home country, slavery and Jim Crow all too often was justified in the name of Christ."

Wow. It's hard to know just where to dive in, although this should be said at the outset: JACKSON, Page 3 Wilbur Dew splits wood at the Pioneer Florida Museum and Village. He's getting ready for the Farm Festival & Quilt Show on Saturday and Sunday. He needs the wood to make syrup from sugar cane. It takes about five hours over flames to turn ground cane into syrup.

As part of its west campus expansion, Saint Leo University plans to build a new plant operations facility off two-lane Pompanic Street.

Settlement ends strife over future of tiny road

Pompanic Street will be rebuilt, with drainage added

ST. LEO — The towns of San Antonio and St. Leo have reached a settlement and road improvement agreement to avoid a trial over Saint Leo University's use of tiny Pompanic Street, ownership of which is shared by the two municipalities.

San Antonio initiated a lawsuit last year over concerns last week, Pompanic, which about possible adverse ef-fects to Pompanic caused by trucks accessing a proposed 17,000-square-foot plant operations facility that the university plans to build just off State Road 52.

During months of sometimes tense negotiations with the university, residents of both towns also expressed concerns about the agreement, the university safety and property values.

Under the agreement reached "currently has substandard pavement and width," will be rebuilt from the intersection at S.R. 52 south to McMullen Drive. The rebuilt road will include two 12-foot-wide lanes and drainage.

St. Leo will pay no more than $94,500 for the road improvements, which could cost more than twice that amount; under AGREEMENT, Page 2
