To whom it may concern,

Since we have no other choice to receive our electrical power from except FPL you need to make sure that their increases are fair and just. If they require and increase to improve services or for emergency response/services then the increase should be to cover the costs and those items only.

Older homeowner and even renters on a fixed or limited budget will inevitably get the short end of the stick if their bill increases and additional $23.00 per hundred that they are spending now. Not only will there individual electric bills increase but the cost of goods and services will also go up as merchants increase prices to offset the increase in their costs for electricity.

Again, their increase should only be to cover additional costs for improving their service and infrastructure and not for additional profit to their bottom line.

Respectfully
