Dear Commissioner

Their prices are lower than my children in Georgia and Ohio pay. They have significantly improved service, as they have cut times when power has been out. They have restored service very quickly. I see them replacing old poles all the time, hopefully to keep power flowing during a storm. This must cost some money.

I am sure you will review their request; but I do not have a problem paying a little more if the quality is there and everything is going up, including my Social Security.

I have no idea why AARP is getting into this issue. Maybe they should be looking into beef, toilet paper prices, and their own subscription prices more than this. I retired from the Federal Government and I just wish that my old job provided services to the public as well as FPL does.

Pedro Guilarte

Thank you,
