Details:

Recent notification from FPL of another rate increase due to increasing natural gas prices. Apparently this was approved last summer when natural gas was between $7-9 per MM BTU. Now the price is at $2.50 per MM BTU, slightly below this same time last year, and at or below the average price since 2018. It's ridiculous that this increase was approved based upon a spike, that has since normalized. We need an adjustment downward, since natural gas has not increased. I also blame the PSC for a knee-jerk reaction.
