FINAL ORDER APPROVING WITHDRAWAL OF SERIES 6000 CHANNEL SERVICE OFFERING

BY THE COMMISSION:

On October 16, 1989 AT&T Communications (ATT-C) filed tariff revisions requesting to withdraw the Series 6000 Channel Service offering from its Channel Services Tariff. The Series 6000 Channel Service offering is used to provide one-way audio transmission (mainly wired music) for use in connection with loudspeaker and sound recording equipment. The Company mirrored the LEC Private Line tariff at divestiture which included this service. The Company has not received any request for the service since divestiture. The Company indicates that it has not incurred any cost by keeping the service tariffed. Therefore, no customer, revenue or cost impact will be created by the withdrawal of this service. ATT-C indicates the lack of demand for this service is mainly due to the technological advances in digital services and that the music industry has provided attractive alternative services. One such alternative would be a Series 2000 Service which would also be able to transport the audio transmissions.

Therefore, we find it appropriate for ATT-C to withdraw this Series 6000 Channel Service offering, effective November 21, 1989. Since no further action is required in this docket, it is hereby closed.
