

BEFORE THE FLORIDA PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION

In Re: Purchased Gas Adjustment) DOCKET NO. 970003-GU
(PGA) Clause.) ORDER NO. PSC-97-0336-CFO-GU
_____) ISSUED: March 25, 1997

ORDER REGARDING PEOPLES' REQUEST FOR CONFIDENTIAL TREATMENT OF CERTAIN PORTIONS OF ITS
NOVEMBER 1996 PGA FILINGS
(DOCUMENT NO 13571-96)

On December 20, 1996, Peoples Gas System, Inc. (Peoples) filed a request for confidentiality concerning certain portions of its PGA filings for the month of November 1996. The confidential information is located in Document No. 13571-96.

Florida law presumes that documents submitted to governmental agencies shall be public records. The only exceptions to this presumption are the specific statutory exemptions provided in the law and exemptions granted by governmental agencies pursuant to the specific terms of a statutory provision. This presumption is based on the concept that government should operate in the "sunshine." It is the Company's burden to demonstrate that the documents fall into one of the statutory examples set out in Section 366.093, Florida Statutes, or to demonstrate that the information is proprietary confidential information, the disclosure of which will cause the Company or its ratepayers harm.

In its monthly purchased gas adjustment filing, Peoples must show the quantity and cost of gas purchased from Florida Gas Transmission Company (FGT) during the month and period shown. The purchased gas adjustment, which is subject to FERC review, can have a significant effect on the price charged by FGT.

Specifically, Peoples seeks confidential classification for the information in lines 9 and 13-24 of column L ("Total Cents Per Therm") in Schedule A-3. Peoples argues that this information is contractual data, the disclosure of which "would impair the efforts of [Peoples] to contract for goods or services on favorable terms." Section 366.093(3)(d), Florida Statutes. The information shows the rates Peoples paid to its suppliers for gas during the month shown. Peoples argues that disclosure of these prices would give other competing suppliers information which could be used to control gas pricing, because these suppliers could all quote a particular price (which in all likelihood would equal or exceed the price paid by Peoples), or could adhere to the price offered by a particular supplier. Suppliers would likely refuse to sell gas at prices lower than this average rate. Peoples argues that the end result of disclosure is reasonably likely to be increased gas prices, which would result in increased rates to Peoples' ratepayers.

Regarding Schedule A-3, Peoples also seeks confidential treatment for lines 9 and 13-24 of columns E-K ("System Supply", "End Use", "Total Purchased", "Commodity Cost/Third Party", DOCUMENT NUMBER-DATE

03125 MAR 25 5

FPSC-RECORDS/REPORTING

"Commodity Cost/Pipeline", "Demand Cost", and "Other Charges"). These data are algebraic functions of the price per therm paid by Peoples as shown on lines 9 and 13-24 of column L ("Total Cents Per Therm"). Peoples argues that disclosure of the information in these columns would allow suppliers to derive the prices Peoples paid to its suppliers during the month. Peoples asserts that disclosure of this information would enable a supplier to derive contractual information which "would impair the efforts of [Peoples] to contract for goods or services on favorable terms." Section 366.093(3)(d), Florida Statutes.

Regarding Schedule A-3, Peoples also seeks confidential treatment for lines 9-24 of column B ("Purchased From"). Peoples argues that disclosing the names of its suppliers would be detrimental to the interests of Peoples and its ratepayers since it would provide competitors with a list of prospective suppliers. Peoples also argues that a third party could use such information to interject itself as a middleman between Peoples and the supplier. In either case, Peoples argues, the end result is reasonably likely to be increased gas prices and, therefore, an increased cost of gas which Peoples must recover from its ratepayers.

Peoples also seeks confidential treatment for the information at lines 1-26 and 36 of columns G and H ("Wellhead Price" and "Citygate Price") in Schedule A-4. Peoples asserts that this information is contractual information which, if made public, "would impair the efforts of [Peoples] to contract for goods or services on favorable terms." Section 366.093(3)(d), Florida Statutes. The information in column G consists of the invoice price per MMBtu paid for gas by Peoples for the involved month. The information in column H consists of the delivered price per MMBtu paid by Peoples for such gas, which is the invoice price plus charges for transportation. Peoples states that disclosure of the prices paid to its gas suppliers during this month would give competing suppliers information with which to potentially or actually control the pricing of gas, either by all quoting a particular price which could equal or exceed the price Peoples paid, or by adhering to a price offered by a particular supplier. A supplier which might have been willing to sell gas at a price less than the price reflected in any individual invoice would likely refuse to do so. Such a supplier would be less likely to make any price concessions which it might have previously made or been willing to make. The end result, Peoples asserts, is reasonably likely to be increased gas prices and, therefore, an increased cost of gas which Peoples must recover from its ratepayers.

Peoples seeks confidential classification of the information found at lines 1-26 and 36 of columns C-F ("Gross Amount," "Net Amount," "Monthly Gross," and "Monthly Net") in Schedule A-4. Peoples maintains that since it is the rates (or prices) at which the purchases were made which Peoples seeks to protect from disclosure, it is also necessary to protect the volumes or amounts of the purchases in order to prevent the use of such information to calculate the rates or prices.

In addition, Peoples requests confidential classification of the information found at lines 1-26 of columns A and B ("Producer Name" and "Receipt Point") in Schedule A-4. Peoples indicates that publishing the names of suppliers and the respective receipt points at which the purchased gas is delivered to Peoples would be detrimental to the interests of Peoples and its ratepayers since it would provide a complete illustration of Peoples' supply infrastructure. Specifically, Peoples states that if the names in column A are made public, a third party might interject itself as a middleman between the supplier and Peoples. Further, disclosure of the receipt points in column B would give competing vendors information that would allow them to buy or sell capacity at those points. Peoples argues that the resulting loss of available capacity for already-secured supply would increase gas transportation costs. Peoples asserts that in either case the end result is reasonably likely to be increased gas prices and, therefore, an increased cost of gas which Peoples must recover from its ratepayers.

Peoples seeks confidential treatment for lines 9 and 19-36 at columns C and E of its Open Access Report. Peoples argues that this information is contractual data which, if made public, "would impair the efforts of [Peoples] to contract for goods or services on favorable terms." Section 366.093(3)(d), Florida Statutes. The information in column C shows the therms purchased from each supplier for the month, and column E shows the total cost of the volumes purchased. This information could be used to calculate the actual prices Peoples paid to each of its suppliers for gas in the involved month. Peoples argues that disclosure of the prices Peoples paid to its gas suppliers during the month would give competing suppliers information with which to potentially or actually control gas pricing. A supplier which might have been willing to sell gas at a price less than the price reflected in any individual invoice would likely refuse to do so. Such a supplier would be less likely to make any price concessions. Peoples argues that the end result is reasonably likely to be increased gas prices and, thus, an increased cost of gas which Peoples must recover from its ratepayers.

Peoples also seeks confidential treatment for lines 9-11 and 19-36 at column A of its Open Access Report. The information in column A includes the names of Peoples' gas suppliers. Peoples maintains that disclosure of the suppliers' names would be detrimental to the interests of Peoples and its ratepayers since it would provide a list of prospective suppliers. If the names were made public, a third party might try to interject itself as a middleman between the supplier and Peoples. Peoples argues that the end result is reasonably likely to be increased gas prices and, therefore, an increased cost of gas which Peoples must recover from its ratepayers.

Peoples requests confidential treatment for customer names at lines 9 and 10 on page 2 of 10 of its Invoices for November 1996. Peoples claims that this information is contractual "information relating to competitive interests, the disclosure of which would impair the competitive business of [Peoples]." Section 366.093(3)(e), Florida Statutes. Peoples argues that disclosure of customer names would be detrimental to Peoples and its ratepayers since it would provide competitors with a list of prospective customers and charges associated with those customers and would reasonably likely provide an unfair advantage to competitors pursuing customers.

In addition, Peoples requests confidential treatment for supplier names (lines 1, 6, and 22) on page 6 of 10 of its Invoices for November 1996. Peoples also requests confidential treatment for information that would tend to indicate the identity of suppliers (lines 2-5 and 7-9) on page 6 of 10 of its November invoices. Peoples maintains that disclosure of the suppliers' names or facts that could lead to their identification would be detrimental to the interests of Peoples and its ratepayers since it would provide a list of prospective suppliers. If the names were made public, a third party might try to interject itself as a middleman between the supplier and Peoples. Peoples argues that the end result is reasonably likely to be increased gas prices and, therefore, an increased cost of gas which Peoples must recover from its ratepayers.

Also regarding its November 1996 Invoices, Peoples requests confidential classification for the "Rate" information at lines 10 and 11 on page 6 of 10. These rates are the prices at which Peoples purchased gas from its suppliers. Peoples asserts that this information is contractual information which, if made public, "would impair the efforts of [Peoples] to contract for goods or services on favorable terms." Section 366.093(3)(d), Florida Statutes. Peoples argues that disclosure of the prices Peoples paid to its gas suppliers during the month would give competing suppliers information with which to potentially or actually control gas pricing. A supplier which might have been willing to sell gas at a price less than the price reflected in any individual invoice would likely refuse to do so. Peoples argues that the end result is reasonably likely to be increased gas prices and, thus, an increased cost of gas which Peoples must recover from its ratepayers.

Peoples also requests confidential classification for the "Therms" and "Amount" information at lines 10, 11, and 24 on page 6 of 10 of its November 1996 Invoices. These lines contain the volumes and total costs of Peoples gas purchases. Peoples argues that this information could be used to calculate the rates for which it has also requested confidentiality.

Peoples seeks confidential treatment for the entirety of page 10 of 10 of its November 1996 Invoices. Peoples states that a large amount of proprietary and confidential information is contained in these invoices, mainly rates (including volume and total cost data that would allow one to determine rates) and supplier names (including information that would tend to indicate the identity of suppliers).

Peoples argues that disclosure of the prices, or data that would allow one to determine the prices, Peoples paid to its gas suppliers during the month would give competing suppliers information with which to potentially or actually control gas pricing. A supplier which might have been willing to sell gas at a price less than the price reflected in any individual invoice would likely refuse to do so. Peoples argues that the end result is reasonably likely to be increased gas prices and, thus, an increased cost of gas which Peoples must recover from its ratepayers.

Peoples maintains that disclosure of supplier names or facts that could lead to the identification of suppliers would be detrimental to the interests of Peoples and its ratepayers since it would provide competitors with a list of prospective suppliers and would facilitate the intervention of a middleman. Peoples argues that the end result is reasonably likely to be increased gas prices and, therefore, an increased cost of gas which Peoples must recover from its ratepayers.

Peoples seeks confidential treatment for certain information contained in its Accruals For Gas Purchased Report for November 1996, pages 1-12. Specifically, Peoples seeks confidential treatment of the information in columns B-D at: lines 1, 8-12, and 16 on page 1; lines 1 and 15 on page 2; lines 1, 8, 9, and 16 on page 3; lines 1, 2, and 15 on page 4; lines 1 and 15 on page 5; lines 1, 8-13, and 16 on page 6; lines 1 and 15 on page 7; lines 1, 8, 9, and 16 on page 8; lines 1 and 15 on page 9; lines 1, 2, and 15 on page 10; lines 1 and 15 on page 11; and lines 1 and 15 on page 12. Peoples argues that disclosure of this information would impair its efforts to contract for goods or services on favorable terms. The information consists of rates and volumes purchased, as well as the total cost of the purchase accrued. Peoples maintains that disclosure of the rates at which Peoples purchased gas from its suppliers would give competing suppliers information with which to potentially or actually control the pricing of gas either by all quoting a particular price (equal to or exceeding the rates Peoples paid) or by adhering to a rate offered by a particular supplier. A supplier which might have been willing to sell gas at a lower rate would be less likely to make any price concessions. Peoples argues that the end result is reasonably likely to be increased gas prices which Peoples must recover from its ratepayers. Since it is the rates at which purchases were made which it seeks to protect from disclosure, Peoples claims that it is also necessary to protect data showing the volumes and total costs of its purchases in order to prevent the use of such information to calculate rates.

Further, Peoples seeks confidential treatment for the names of suppliers which appear on its Accruals For Gas Purchased Report for November 1996, pages 1-12. Specifically, Peoples seeks confidential treatment of the information in column A at: lines 1 and 9-12 on page 1; line 1 on page 2; lines 1 and 9 on page 3; lines 1-2 on page 4; line 1 on page 5; lines 1 and 9-13 on page 6; line 1 on page 7; lines 1 and 9 on page 8; line 1 on page 9; lines 1-2 on page 10; line 1 on page 11; and line 1 on page 12. Disclosure of these supplier names would be detrimental to the interests of Peoples and its ratepayers since it would provide competitors with a list of prospective suppliers and would facilitate the intervention of a middleman. The end result, Peoples argues, is reasonably likely to be increased gas prices and, therefore, an increased cost of gas which Peoples must recover from its ratepayers.

Peoples requests confidential classification for certain information on its Actual/Accrual Reconciliation of Gas Purchased Report for October 1996, pages 1-5. Specifically, Peoples requests confidential treatment of the information in columns C and E at lines 1-26 and 93-95, and in column D at lines 1-26. Peoples argues that disclosure of this information would impair its efforts to contract for goods or services on favorable terms. The information consists of rates and volumes purchased, as well as the total cost of the purchase accrued. Peoples maintains that disclosure of the rates at which Peoples purchased gas from its suppliers would give competing suppliers information with which to potentially or actually control the pricing of gas either by all quoting a particular price (equal to or exceeding the rates Peoples paid) or by adhering to a rate offered by a particular supplier. A supplier which might have been willing to sell gas at a lower rate would be less likely to make any price concessions. Peoples argues that the end result is reasonably likely to be increased gas prices which Peoples must recover from its ratepayers. Since it is the rates at which purchases were made which it seeks to protect from disclosure, Peoples claims that it is also necessary to protect data showing the volumes and total costs of its purchases in order to prevent the use of such information to calculate rates.

Peoples further requests confidential treatment of supplier names provided on its Actual/Accrual Reconciliation of Gas Purchased Report for October 1996, pages 1-5. Specifically, Peoples requests confidential treatment of the information in column A at lines 1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, 13, 15, 17, 19, 21, 23, and 25 on pages 1-3. Peoples maintains that disclosure of its suppliers' names would be detrimental to the interests of Peoples and its ratepayers since it would provide competitors with a list of prospective gas suppliers and would facilitate the intervention of a middleman. The end result, Peoples argues, is reasonably likely to be increased gas prices and, therefore, an increased cost of gas which Peoples must recover from its ratepayers.

Peoples requests confidential treatment for its Gas Purchase Invoices for October 1996, pages 1-8, in their entirety. The information on these pages includes the rates at which purchases covered by the invoices were made (except for the rates of FGT which are public), the volumes purchased, and the total cost of the purchase. Since it is the rates at which the purchases were made which Peoples seeks to protect from disclosure, Peoples argues that it is also necessary to protect the volumes and costs of the purchases in order to prevent the use of such information to calculate the rates. Peoples argues that this information is contractual data which, if made public, "would impair the efforts of [Peoples] to contract for goods or services on favorable terms." Section 366.093(3)(d), Florida Statutes.

Also regarding the October 1996 Invoices, Peoples requests confidential treatment of the names of its suppliers. Peoples maintains that disclosure of supplier names would be detrimental to the interests of Peoples and its ratepayers since it would provide competitors with a list of prospective suppliers and would facilitate the intervention of a middleman. In either case, Peoples argues, the end result is reasonably likely to be increased gas prices and, therefore, an increased cost of gas which Peoples must recover from its ratepayers.

Peoples also requests confidential treatment of all related information that tends to indicate the identity of each gas supplier. Such information includes supplier addresses, phone and fax numbers, contact persons, logos, and miscellaneous numerical references such as invoice numbers, account numbers, wire instructions, contract numbers, and tax I.D. information. Peoples asserts that the format of the invoices alone might indicate with whom Peoples is dealing. Since this information may indicate to persons knowledgeable in the industry the identity of the otherwise undisclosed gas supplier, Peoples has requested confidential treatment of it.

Peoples has requested confidential treatment of certain customer names contained in its Prior Month Adjustment Invoices. Specifically, Peoples requests confidential treatment for line 13 on page 2 of 6, lines 17 and 18 on page 4 of 6, and lines 17, 18, 21, and 22 on page 6 of 6. Peoples claims that these names are contractual information relating to competitive interests, the disclosure of which would impair the competitive business of Peoples. Peoples asserts that disclosure of customer names would be detrimental to Peoples and its ratepayers since it would provide competitors with a list of prospective customers and charges associated with those customers. The end result, Peoples argues, is reasonably likely to provide competitors with an unfair advantage in pursuing customers.

Peoples has requested that the proprietary information discussed above be treated as confidential until June 20, 1998. According to Peoples, the period requested is necessary to allow Peoples and its affiliates to negotiate future gas purchase contracts. Peoples argues that if this information were declassified at an earlier date, suppliers and competitors would have access to information which could adversely affect the ability of Peoples and its affiliates to negotiate future contracts on favorable terms. It is noted that this time period of confidential classification will ultimately protect Peoples and its ratepayers.

In consideration of the foregoing, it is therefore,

ORDERED by Commissioner J. Terry Deason, as Prehearing Officer, that the requested information in Document No. 13571-96 shall be treated as proprietary confidential business information to the extent discussed above. It is further
