3. During the transition period beginning October 1, 1997, the customer could elect (and has so elected) to have all of its electric consumption during a transition period from October 1, 1997 to March 31, 1998 priced in accordance with Gulf Power's hourly RTP prices. Such option, once exercised, shall remain in effect for the duration of the identified transition period.

4. Beginning in May 2002 and continuing annually thereafter, there is a review provision that could result in either an additional customer payment to Gulf Power or a rebate from Gulf Power to the customer. The payment or the rebate is dependent on how the average offered price during the review period compares to the average offered price during the period immediately prior to the review period.
