Can you scan it and let me read it and then I'll get back with you? I think I'll still have to contact them either way just to explain the difference between bankruptcy and voluntary cancellations. One company paid the RAFs even though they had filed for bankruptcy because they did not want it on the record that it was a bankruptcy cancellation. They may also want a voluntary cancellation.

I'm reading this application, and realize now that what they're saying is the company filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection. Does that make a difference in handling this?

It is OK only if they stated in the letter when they will pay the 2002 RAF. Otherwise, send to me and I'll attempt collection prior to opening a docket. Thanks.

Paula, we got a pleading titled "Application" today from Swidler Berlin law firm to cancel this company's certs and they're asking that it be done by 5/10 (when BellSouth discontinues underlying service).

Okay to open the docket?
