CASE BACKGROUND

As a result of the "Service First" legislation in 2001, numerous state employees were reclassified from Career Service to Selected Exempt status effective July 1, 2001. The First District Court of Appeal subsequently decided that all such reclassified employees were entitled to a point of entry to proceedings to determine whether their positions met the statutory criteria for exemption from the Career Service. Reinshuttle v. Agency for Health Care Administration, 849 So. 2d 434 (1st DCA 2003). Reclassified employees were notified of their right to seek an administrative hearing. Former Commission employee Robert Crouch, a Utility Systems/Communications Engineer Supervisor, timely requested a hearing to challenge the reclassification of his position.

FPSC-COMMISSION CLERK

The matter was referred to the Division of Administrative Hearings for a formal hearing. A hearing was held on November 13, 2003. On December 18, 2003, the Administrative Law Judge issued his Recommended Order. The Recommended Order includes specific findings of fact and conclusions of law that support the Administrative Law Judge's decision that the Commission properly reclassified Mr. Crouch. No party filed exceptions to the Recommended Order. The order is attached to this recommendation as "Attachment A".

DISCUSSION OF ISSUES

ISSUE 1: Should the Commission adopt the Administrative Law Judges's Recommended Order as its Final Order in this case?

RECOMMENDATION: Yes.

STAFF ANALYSIS: An agency may not reject or modify findings of fact made by the Administrative Law Judge unless a review of the complete record demonstrates that such findings were not based upon competent substantial evidence or that the proceedings on which the findings were based did not comply with the essential requirements of law. §120.57(1), Fla. Stat. (2003).

After hearing the testimony and reviewing the exhibits submitted by the two witnesses in this case, the Administrative Law Judge recommended that the evidence supported the conclusion that Petitioner, Mr. Crouch, was a supervisory employee as defined in section 110.205(2)(x), Florida Statutes (2001), and was therefore properly reclassified from Career Service to Selected Exempt Service effective on July 1, 2001. The Administrative Law Judge recommended that the Commission enter a final order that Petitioner's position was properly reclassified as Selected Exempt Service. Mr. Crouch did not file any exceptions to the recommended order, and thereby has waived any objection to the findings of fact contained in it. Environmental Coalition of Florida, Inc. v. Broward County, 586 So. 2d 1212 (Fla. 1st DCA 1991); Couch v. Commission on Ethics, 617 So. 2d 1119 (Fla. 5th DCA 1993).

DOCKET NO. 030871-OT
DATE: FEBRUARY 5, 2004

A review of the record demonstrates that the findings of fact contained in the Recommended Order are supported by competent, substantial evidence in the record. In addition, staff believes the conclusions of law correctly apply the applicable law to the facts of this case. The Commission should therefore adopt the Recommended Order as its Final Order.

ISSUE 2: Should this docket be closed?

RECOMMENDATION: Yes.

STAFF ANALYSIS: Upon rendition of the Commission's Final Order adopting the Administrative Law Judge's recommendation, this docket may be closed.

STATEMENT OF THE ISSUE

The issue presented is whether Petitioner was a supervisory employee as defined by Section 110.205(2)(x), Florida Statutes (2001), and was therefore properly reclassified from Career Service to Selected Exempt Service effective July 1, 2001.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

On August 14, 2003, Petitioner filed a request for review of agency action with the Respondent Public Service Commission (Commission) alleging that Respondent wrongly reclassified his position from Career Service to Selected Exempt Service effective July 1, 2001. The Commission forwarded the request to the Division of Administrative Hearings (DOAH) on August 29, 2003, for assignment of an administrative law judge to conduct a final hearing. After granting one continuance, the final hearing was held on November 13, 2003, in Tallahassee, Florida.

Petitioner presented his own testimony during the final hearing. The Commission presented the testimony of Marshall W. Willis, Bureau Chief of Rate Filings at the Public Service Commission. The Commission also called Mr. Crouch during its case-in-chief. The Commission's Exhibits 1 through 10 were admitted without objection. At the close of evidence, counsel for the Commission requested time to have the proceedings transcribed, after which the Petitioner and Commission would prepare and file written final arguments and proposed recommended orders.

A Transcript was filed on November 25, 2003. Petitioner's Brief was filed on December 2, 2003. The Commission filed a Proposed Recommended Order on December 3, 2003. Both were considered in preparation of this Recommended Order.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Petitioner became employed by the Commission as an Engineering Supervisor in 1984, and held Select Exempt status prior to 1991, when he was reclassified to a Career Service employee. From 1997 until his retirement, he held Position No. 00168, titled "Utility Systems/Communications Engineer Supervisor." The first paragraph of his October 1, 1997, Position Description states:

This is work supervising engineers in the Bureau of Economic Regulation. The primary duty of the employee in this position is to spend the majority of time communicating with, motivating, training and evaluating employees, planning and directing their work; and having the ability to effectively recommend to hire, transfer, suspend, layoff, recall, promote, discharge, assign, reward or discipline subordinate employees.

2. The October 1, 1997, Position Description was in effect at the time Petitioner was reclassified to Select Exempt following enactment of the Service First Initiative.

3. Following the decision of the District Court of Appeal in Reinshuttle v. Agency for Health Care Administration, 849 So. 2d 434 (1st DCA 2003), Petitioner was notified of his right to seek an administrative hearing for the purpose of challenging his reclassification. Petitioner timely requested a hearing on August 13, 2003.

4. Petitioner does not dispute the supervisory nature of the job outlined in the Position Description. He claims that despite his Position Description, his position was not truly "supervisory" as a practical matter and thus did not fit within the authorized grounds for reclassification under Section 110.205(2)(x), Florida Statutes (2001).

5. The Position Description alone is not controlling, because it is possible the actual nature of Petitioner's job changed and the Position Description had not been amended to reflect that. It is therefore appropriate to look behind the Position Description to see whether the actual duties expected of Petitioner were supervisory in nature. To support his claim that his responsibilities had "eroded" to the point they were no longer supervisory in nature, Petitioner points to the hiring of several individuals to work in the section for which he was responsible.

6. Several individuals (Ed Fuchs, Ted Davis, Gerald Edwards, and Jeanette Sickel) were hired to work under Petitioner by the Commission. Petitioner objected to the hiring of some of those persons on the ground that they lacked qualifications, educational and otherwise, for their positions, but they were hired nevertheless. Another individual, Wetherington, was hired with Petitioner's assent after interviewing with Petitioner and the Bureau Chief.

7. Once the individuals were hired, they worked under the supervision of Petitioner. He was responsible for approving their time sheets, conducting their annual evaluations, approving travel and leave requests, and training.

8. Petitioner was responsible for assigning the work to employees Sickel, Munroe, Davis, Edwards, and Wetherington, and for monitoring its quality. It was Petitioner who the Commission held responsible for the work product of the section. Petitioner directed the manner in which the employees performed their work on a day-to-day basis.

9. Petitioner answered to Marshall Willis, Bureau Chief of Rate Filings. Willis was responsible for evaluating Petitioner's performance on the basis of how well Petitioner managed the performance of employees under Petitioner's supervision, and Petitioner was rated and held accountable to communicate, train, direct, and assign work to subordinate employees assigned to him.

10. Petitioner's evaluation by Mr. Willis dated December 8, 2000, notes that Petitioner must put forth greater effort in reviewing the work of his engineering section and in improving the analysis reflected in written recommendations. Similar issues had been raised in an earlier evaluation. In response to a November 1998, evaluation of his performance by Mr. Willis, Petitioner acknowledged deficiencies in the performance of his engineering section, and provided assurance that he would "strive to do a better job of supervising my staff" in the future.

11. At all pertinent times, Petitioner's position was not of a routine, clerical, or ministerial nature, and did require the application of judgment. Petitioner had a significant role in personnel administration, as he served as the officer trusted by the state to verify the hours worked, to direct the amount and quality of work performed during those hours, and to be held accountable for the collective performance of the employees in the engineering section.

12. Petitioner did lack the ultimate authority to hire and fire personnel, but that does not make his role in personnel administration insignificant. While hiring and firing are indeed important decisions, in state government the ultimate authority to hire and fire always resides with the agency head or office head. The bulk of the day-to-day management of personnel does not consist of hiring and firing, but rather of assigning the work and monitoring its successful completion.

13. In addition to the expectations set out in the Position Description, the course of conduct and of communications received from his Bureau Chief establish that supervisory responsibility was in fact a requirement of Petitioner's position. Petitioner was actually expected to spend a majority of his time communicating with, motivating, and training employees, and planning and directing their work.

14. The clearly established expectations for Petitioner's position would place upon the incumbent the responsibility for making effective recommendations for hiring, transfer, suspension, layoff, recall, promotion, discharge, assignment, reward, or discipline of subordinate employees. The instances of other Commission officials declining to follow Petitioner's recommendations regarding hiring reflect the officials' lack of satisfaction with the way Petitioner was carrying out those supervisory responsibilities, not an acknowledgement that those responsibilities do not exist.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

15. The Division of Administrative Hearings has jurisdiction over the parties to and the subject matter of this proceeding. Sections 120.569 and 120.57(1), Florida Statutes (2003).

16. Petitioner's position was that of a managerial employee under Section 447.203(4), Florida Statutes (2003), when he was reclassified to Select Exempt status, because his duties were not of a routine clerical or ministerial nature and he had a significant role in personnel administration. Because the position met the definition of "managerial" in Section 447.203, Petitioner was subject to reclassification under Section 110.205(2)(x), which incorporates the definitional language in Section 447.203(4) by reference.

17. Petitioner is also subject to reclassification as Select Exempt on the separate and independent ground that his position was that of a "supervisory employee" as that term is defined in Section 110.205(2)(x), itself. To properly carry out his stated duties, it would be necessary for Petitioner to spend the majority of his time communicating with, motivating, training, and evaluating employees, and planning and directing employees' work. While it is true that Petitioner lacked the ultimate authority to hire, transfer, suspend, lay off, recall, promote, discharge, assign, reward, or discipline subordinate employees, his position did come with the authority and indeed expectation that it would effectively recommend such action. The determination of whether a reclassification was authorized by Section 110.205(2)(x) must focus on the position itself, its stated responsibilities, and its real world expectations, not on the quality of how the job was actually performed by the incumbent. An employee assigned to a supervisory position could not, by simply failing or refusing to perform supervisory functions, be excluded from the definition of a supervisory employee. While there is no contention that this Petitioner simply refused to perform his supervisory duties, there is evidence that the manner in which Petitioner performed those supervisory functions was unsatisfactory to his Bureau Chief. That being the case, it is hardly surprising that the bulk of Petitioner's recommendations about important decisions such as hiring and firing were not accepted by the Bureau Chief. Petitioner had very specific ideas about the nature of the qualifications that should be expected of those working under him, and obviously the Bureau Chief disagreed. Under these circumstances, the Commission's refusal to follow Petitioner's recommendation does not result from any lack of supervisory authority inherent in the position, but from lack of agreement with the way that the supervisory authority was exercised.

18. Petitioner was a supervisory employee as defined in Section 110.205(2)(x), Florida Statutes (2001), and was therefore properly reclassified from Career Service to Selected Exempt Service effective July 1, 2001.

RECOMMENDATION

Based on the foregoing Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law, it is RECOMMENDED that the Public Service Commission enter a final order that Petitioner's position was properly reclassified as Selected Exempt Service.
