American CLEC

American CLEC is a consulting company helping Internet Service Providers (ISPs) successfully become Competitive Local Exchange Carriers. Becoming a CLEC is a natural transition for ISPs who are major providers to consumers and businesses in their areas of Internet and other data and telecommunications services. Becoming a CLEC offers ISPs the opportunity to offer a wider range of data telecommunications services to its customers at better prices.

American CLEC is a business unit of WinNET Communications, Inc. (Win.Net). Win.Net is a CLEC and an ISP which has been operating since August 1990 – 15 years. Win.Net serves principally the Louisville Kentucky market, Central Kentucky including Frankfort, Lawrenceburg, and Shelbyville, and Southern Indiana from Jeffersonville through Corydon – approximately the central 1/3rd of Kentucky and Southern Indiana.

Win.Net began as a software developer which created the 1st Microsoft Windows package for sending & receiving Internet email (WinNET Mail). Internet service was offered nationally since 1992 with international licenses of the software in the UK, Germany, Canada, Cambodia, and Australia.

In 2002, Win.Net became a CLEC through its subsidiary: Win.Net Telecommunications, Inc. This change enabled Win.Net to enter the Central Kentucky market and to expand offerings in Southern Indiana. Win.Net is currently approved and operates as a facility based CLEC in Kentucky and Indiana. It has active Interconnection Agreements with BellSouth, SBC, and Verizon. Win.Net's activities as a CLEC involves all of the usual activities of filing state PSC reports, filing state and federal taxes, maintaining approved Tariffs, semi-annual NRUF reporting to the FCC, SS7 links, RAO accounting codes, LERG updates for NANPA allocated telephone number blocks, and the other usual responsibilities of a facilities based CLEC.

All along, Win.Net has been active in the ISP community. At present, Win.Net is a member of the Federation of Internet Solutions Providers of the Americas (a national ISP association known as FISPA), California ISP Association, and the Kentucky ISP

Association. At present, Michael Tague, Win.Net's founder and President serves as Treasurer of FISPA.

In 2004, seeing the terrific advantages becoming a CLEC brought to Win.Net including new services such as Extended Reach DSL-T1 that brought broadband Internet service to all businesses throughout the underserved Southern Indiana area (see: <http://info.win.net/getnetpress.html>), Michael Tague, founder and President of Win.Net, decided that becoming a CLEC is something that other ISPs should be doing, but that much of the help available to ISPs was not the right type. ISPs as CLECs are not seeking to offer traditional voice phone services and as such have different needs. In 2004, Michael Tague created American CLEC, a business unit of Win.Net, focused on helping ISPs become CLECs.

At present, American CLEC is helping ISPs in four states: Virginia, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, and Georgia. This involves CLECs with Interconnection agreements with Sprint, Verizon, and Bellsouth. Other relationships are pending in states from Vermont to Florida to Texas.

American CLEC's services as a consultant are based upon the experience and expertise of American CLEC's and Win.Net's founder, Michael Tague, and upon that of Joe Mays, Win.Net Engineering Manager and American CLEC's Project Manager. Michael Tague was directly responsible for the initial creation of Win.Net's CLEC subsidiary and for the regulatory approval, BellSouth Interconnection agreement, and beginning of operations in the state of Kentucky. Joe Mays was directly responsible for the regulatory approval in the state of Indiana and the interconnection agreements and collocation with SBC and Verizon.

Joe Mays has been with Win.Net for 11 years and has served as its Engineering Manager for most of that time. Michael Tague is President of Win.Net and has been actively involved with Win.Net since it's founding in 1990. Before founding Win.Net, Michael Tague was V.P. of Operations for Victory Technology, a San Francisco software and services company, and before that Development Manager for Honeywell Information Systems in Massachusetts where he directly managed a large scale computer Operating System development project know as Opus. Opus was a multi-year 31 person software development project. Michael Tague also had oversight for 21 software developers at the Advanced Computing Technology Center in Calgary Canada. Previously with Honeywell, Michael Tague was manager of Multics Development at the Cambridge Information Systems Laboratory.
