Ref: Docket No. 060122-WU - Joint petition for approval of stipulation on procedure with Office of Public Counsel, and application for limited proceeding increase in water rates in Pasco County, by Aloha Utilities, Inc.

Dear PSC Commissioners,

First of all I would like to address the poor performance you showed at the Agenda meeting held on February 12, 2008. It is very apparent that you are not protecting the people in the Seven Springs area of Pasco County. You should be ashamed of yourselves!! The actions of the staff are appalling and should not be accepted by you.

This letter is to PROTEST your approval of the rate increase for Aloha Utilities.

My reasons are numerous, but I will only list a couple of the more important ones as follows:

1. The rate was approved on estimated costs from Aloha which with a customer audit showed that Aloha submitted numerous invoices that were unrelated to the project.
2. The rate increase should have been on where the water is coming from rather than a blanket increase. We all know that Aloha is going to pump their wells to the maximum amount allowed and then supplement additional needs from Pasco County water. Aloha will know what is pumped from their wells and from Pasco County by day and by week so there should be two rates on our bill; one rate for water coming from their wells and one rate for water purchased from Pasco County. Why should the customer pay the Pasco rate for water coming from their wells? The bills should be adjusted monthly on our bill base on where the water comes from. Not a flat rate.
3. We will not be getting 'better water' because Aloha will still be pumping from their wells. So why should I pay more for water when Aloha has NOT solved their black, smelly, and unhealthy water problem. Aloha has no intension of complying with the PSC Agreement.
4. The staff continually ignores Aloha's customers who has proven Aloha is deceiving the PSC, staff, and the customers. And that the staff does whatever Aloha wants them to do or say.

WARNING

Florida - where the Governor, the PSC, and Pasco County Commissioners refuses to protect its citizens from Aloha Utility which provides an inferior water product.

I totally support Senator Fasano in his efforts to remove Aloha's territory. You need to listen to what thousands of the captive customers of Aloha have been telling you for over 15 years ... get rid of Aloha Utilities and work with Pasco County to acquire the utility.

Please make sure this letter is posted on Aloha's dockets.

Sincerely,

Steve

I talked with Mike Cooke yesterday afternoon. I reminded him that at the meeting Wednesday, we all kind of over looked the fact that Aloha reported being behind on purchasing the property for the booster station; was to be completed 1st week in August. Pasco and DEP permitting was to be completed by 1st week in September and booster station bid awards all done by 2nd week in Oct. We asked if the country water was on schedule and as I recall the reply was positive. Mike remembered it the same way and agreed to look into today.

It appears that other work on Anion is set up for further delays than the 10 months behind after 15 months in the project.

Also we should have a concern when something goes wrong with Anion; Aloha now has no where to go for technical support. As this settlement was prepared, the customers and I suspect that the PSC did not understand that David Porter was not technically competent to implement an Anion project. Aloha should have developed a back up, because in any new start up; we all know things go wrong and technical support is needed. Mike Cook will also look into this today?

Aloha has not updated their web site with new information on anion and the monthly bill arrived with a new flyer on how to save water. I could sure save a lot of water if I did not need to flush the black out of the system so often. I also told him that Todd Brown of the PSC PR staff did not have the following quite right. "Aloha intends to update its Web site with the new time line and other information, Brown added. The company also might provide customers with project updates through billing inserts on a regular basis." Mike waffled on that a little.

We also discussed the need for Aloha to sell and that the PSC needs to encourage a sale to the county. Mike told me that the PSC only controls 4% of the water in the state of Florida. Perhaps a significant fine and consent order by the PSc would provide some encouragement. We need you help on that. The county is clearly foot dragging on a purchase and at this rate it will never happen. I now appears Ann H being a politician does not tell Gallagher to go get it done!

I expressed my concern that Troy Rendell of the PSC Staff does not appear supportive of the customers recognition of the inflated cost of chloramination being moved forward by Aloha.

We are eager to hear from the OPC water consultant before I push that too much further.

We really need your help to move along this long over due solution to the continuing Aloha Utilities poor customer service and water quality problem.

The below editorial appears in The Tampa Tribune, 12/12/07, The Pasco Tribune section, p2, Editorial. The editor understands and makes it clear that the best solution at this point is for the PSC to reinstitute territory-deletion proceedings against Aloha.

Careful What You Wish For In Pursuit Of Aloha Utilities

Skip directly to the full story.

Published: Dec 12, 2007

The Tampa Tribune The Pasco Tribune section Editorial Published: Dec 12, 2007

It's understandable that state Sen. Mike Fasano and other officials want Pasco County government to purchase west-Pasco based Aloha Utilities. Customer service and water quality issues have plagued the utility for years, and dozens of orders by state regulators have failed to solve them, leaving customers frustrated and angry.

Indeed, the county's purchase of Aloha would bring local accountability, something that has been lacking, and Pasco Utilities has a very good track record of providing quality service and water. It would be a good fit.

But that doesn't mean it should happen, for several reasons.

Foremost, the county and taxpayers would be purchasing a utility that has failed to get its act together. Taxpayers—both local and statewide—should never be asked to pony up money to purchase an inferior product and, at the same time, reward its owner with millions of dollars. That's what would happen if the county purchased Aloha Utilities at this point.

Money and willingness on the part of Aloha are other issues. The utility hasn't even agreed to sell, and it's hard to believe it would be satisfied with only the $6 million that Fasano and other legislators plan to seek in the next legislative session.

How much should taxpayers be expected to pay? Considering Aloha's record, $6 million is excessive. And county officials should not expose taxpayers to further debt to purchase it. They have more pressing issues, such as addressing transportation deficiencies and solid-waste disposal issues.

Because Aloha has a long history of playing hardball with Fasano and the state Public Service Commission, which regulates it, it's a safe bet it will seek to extract every cent from taxpayers that it can. The utility's vow to fight any effort by the state to yank its franchise and turn its Seven Springs service area over to the county—still a possibility—only reinforces that taxpayers could be exposed to a bad business deal.

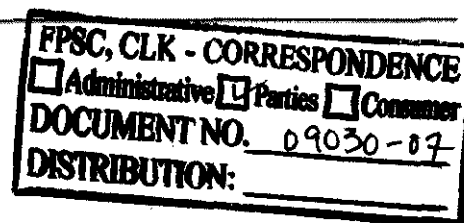

Fasano, the driving force behind a county purchase, and other supporters of the possible purchase have very good intentions: to finally give customers the relief that state regulators have failed to produce. But that relief should not come at the expense of all taxpayers, who would be taking on a headache that previously had been experienced by a relatively small number.

This isn't to suggest that a county purchase should never be pursued. But the best solution at this point is to reinstitute territory-deletion proceedings against Aloha, which Fasano has requested, and for county officials to try to take over local utility regulation now handled by the PSC, which state law allows.

Careful What You Wish For In Pursuit Of Aloha Utilities

Skip directly to the full story.

Published: Dec 12, 2007

The Tampa Tribune The Pasco Tribune section Editorial Published: Dec 12, 2007

It's understandable that state Sen. Mike Fasano and other officials want Pasco County government to purchase west-Pasco based Aloha Utilities. Customer service and water quality issues have plagued the utility for years, and dozens of orders by state regulators have failed to solve them, leaving customers frustrated and angry.

Indeed, the county's purchase of Aloha would bring local accountability, something that has been lacking, and Pasco Utilities has a very good track record of providing quality service and water. It would be a good fit.

But that doesn't mean it should happen, for several reasons.

Foremost, the county and taxpayers would be purchasing a utility that has failed to get its act together. Taxpayers—both local and statewide—should never be asked to pony up money to purchase an inferior product and, at the same time, reward its owner with millions of dollars. That's what would happen if the county purchased Aloha Utilities at this point.

Money and willingness on the part of Aloha are other issues. The utility hasn't even agreed to sell, and it's hard to believe it would be satisfied with only the $6 million that Fasano and other legislators plan to seek in the next legislative session.

How much should taxpayers be expected to pay? Considering Aloha's record, $6 million is excessive. And county officials should not expose taxpayers to further debt to purchase it. They have more pressing issues, such as addressing transportation deficiencies and solid-waste disposal issues.

Because Aloha has a long history of playing hardball with Fasano and the state Public Service Commission, which regulates it, it's a safe bet it will seek to extract every cent from taxpayers that it can. The utility's vow to fight any effort by the state to yank its franchise and turn its Seven Springs service area over to the county—still a possibility—only reinforces that taxpayers could be exposed to a bad business deal.

Fasano, the driving force behind a county purchase, and other supporters of the possible purchase have very good intentions: to finally give customers the relief that state regulators have failed to produce. But that relief should not come at the expense of all taxpayers, who would be taking on a headache that previously had been experienced by a relatively small number.

But the best solution at this point is to reinstitute territory-deletion proceedings against Aloha, which Fasano has requested, and for county officials to try to take over local utility regulation now handled by the PSC, which state law allows.

This week, Aloha Utilities, at the last minute, again refused to allow an independent water consultant hired by the Office of Public Counsel to review and assess the validity of their water chloramination installation prior to the January 29th PSC Agenda Conference rate increase. How can the PSC allow this refusal when independent assessment is so essential? We all should wonder what this utility is hiding?

We also wonder how long this shameful utility with never-ending dependence on their legal group will be allowed to fool the state agencies.

County May Lack Money For Aloha

Skip directly to the full story.

By CHRISTIAN M. WADE The Tampa Tribune

Published: Dec 8, 2007

NEW PORT RICHEY - To hear the politicians tell it, Aloha Utilities is up for grabs.

In recent weeks, a flurry of movement from state lawmakers has seemed to indicate that Pasco County officials are nearing a deal to buy the private tap water and wastewater provider, one of several utilities they have been eyeing for possible acquisition.

Leading the charge is Sen. Mike Fasano, R-New Port Richey, an Aloha customer and longtime critic who, two weeks ago, asked the Florida Public Service Commission to turn the utility's service area over to the county.

And Thursday night, Pasco's legislative delegation endorsed a bill that would, if approved by the Legislature and signed by the governor, provide $6 million to the county as seed money to purchase New Port Richey-based Aloha.

Fasano called the company a "threat" to the environment and the health of its 25,000 customers.

"Aloha is one of the worst corporations in this country," the Republican lawmaker said.

Thing is, there's no indication that Aloha is even interested in selling its franchise or, for that matter, whether the county could afford the multimillion-dollar price tag.

Aloha President Steve Watford has declined to comment on the issue and previously pledged to fight attempts by the state or county to take over his franchise.

County Commissioner Ann Hildebrand said she and other senior county officials met with Watford several weeks ago to discuss their interest in acquiring his company. Aloha made no commitments during that meeting, she said.

"The best of all worlds is a willing seller and a willing buyer," Hildebrand said. "We're not there yet. They told us that they would get back to us, but we haven't heard from them."

The $6 million in seed money wouldn't go far in buying the utility, she said. And Hildebrand doubts the allocation will even make it to the governor's desk.

John Wharton, Aloha's attorney, said Thursday night that the efforts by state lawmakers to intervene are hurting the discussions between Aloha and the county.

"It's not helpful," he said.

Wharton also took issue with the wording of Fasano's legislation.

"I have never seen a bill with this kind of language," Wharton told the delegation. "It would probably be libelous if it were not for the protection that the body that you all serve on has."

County officials have pushed for years to tie small utilities into regional water systems amid complaints from customers about poor water quality and service, and high rates.

In 2001, Pasco County Utilities Services - which pumps an average of 20 million gallons of water a day to about 100,000 residents - looked at buying 14 local utilities, including Aloha. But after months of negotiations, the agency managed to acquire only three of them.

Aloha customer John Andrews said he supports the county's efforts to buy the water provider.

"It's time for bold new actions by our government to end the suffering," he told the legislators. "The key words are deletion, removal and acquisition."

To: PSC Commissioners,

I received the following note (referring to the Tampa Tribune article this morning which is printed at the bottom) from a long time friend who lives in an adjacent subdivision with water and waste water provided by Aloha. This note reflects the continued inappropriate customer relations, problems and inaction by Aloha utilities. I share this note because we continue to seek the punitive action against this utility as promised to the customers, if the utility delayed, by Sr. Attorney Rick Melson in March of 2005 at a public meeting before 150 customers. When asked what happens if Aloha delays as they have for so many years, PSC Sr. Attorney Melson told us that if the Utility delayed the two year implementation of Anion, the PSC would have a good case for deletion of their territory and would proceed.

To add insult to the customers, the Aloha Utility management is still on their extended Thanksgiving vacation rather than working towards a much needed solutions. The customers who have gone "the extra mile" are still seeking relief after 14 years from this shameful private utility which appears out of control.

"Wayne

I hope this happens, but Aloha is a tough customer and may not sell unless Roy Spears passes away. They can't seem to see the writing on the wall. It is even tougher to deal with them in my subdivision because they insisted on us using a third party billing company instead of them reading the meters and dealing with us. We have already had their sewers back up twice at our house.

Jim & Betty Wilder"
