Case Background

On February 26, 2008, a fault occurred at Florida Power & Light's (FPL or Company) Flagami substation. The fault disrupted service to approximately 596,000 FPL customers and created conditions on the transmission grid that caused three of FPL's fossil-fueled generating units and FPL's Turkey Point Nuclear Units 3 and 4 to trip off-line. The fault and tripping of generators is referred to herein as the "February 26, 2008 outage."

As a result of the February 26, 2008 outage, FPL was required to: (1) operate several less efficient and more costly peaking units, (2) purchase power at a cost greater than the Company's marginal cost of power production, and (3) replace nuclear-fueled generation with more costly fossil-fuel fired generation.
