To ensure that the Commission staff and the Commissioners have knowledge of your concerns, your letter has been placed on the correspondence side of the docket file for all to review.

With respect to the development of rates, the Commission is required to set rates that are just, reasonable, compensatory, and not unfairly discriminatory. To determine the appropriate rates for service, the Commission uses a rate of return methodology as set forth in Chapter 367, Florida Statutes (F.S.). Under the rate of return methodology, a utility is allowed to earn a reasonable return on its prudently invested property that is used and useful in serving the public, less accrued depreciation plus an allowance for operating capital. This ratemaking process is used for all water and wastewater companies and is also used in the electric and gas industry. It is the same approach used throughout the country by various state and federal utility regulatory bodies.

There are many factors that affect the cost of providing service and hence, the rates charged to customers. Some factors affecting the cost of providing service include: the size and age of the utility system; the quality of the water at its source; the number of customers; and the geographic spread of the service area. During a rate case, the Commission's accountants, engineers and economists examine the financial and engineering information filed by the Utility as part of its rate increase application. The Commission's auditors also examine this information and publish the results of their findings in an audit report. All costs found to be imprudent or unreasonable are disallowed.

Regarding your comments concerning Pennbrookes' allocated expenses from its parent company, the pro forma plant items, the Project Phoenix, and the return on equity; these issues will be addressed in staff's recommendation due to be filed on April 8, 2010 and subsequently voted on by the Commissioners at the April 20, 2010 Agenda Conference.

Regarding your comments concerning Pennbrookes' allocated expenses from its parent company, the Commission does not rely on house counts in order to allocate Utilities, Inc.'s (UI's) common costs. Rather, the Commission uses equivalent residential connections (ERCs). The calculation of ERCs is determined based on the number of customer bills receiving service, and the meter sizes associated with that service, during the test year. The Commission has found that UI shall use ERCs, measured at the end of the applicable test year, as the primary factor in allocating affiliate costs in Florida. The Commission has further reasoned that the use of an ERC-only methodology is appropriate for common cost allocations because it is consistent with the methodology used by the Commission to set rates for its water and wastewater utilities. This issue will be addressed in staff's recommendation due to be filed on April 8, 2010 and subsequently voted on by the Commissioners at the April 20, 2010 Agenda Conference.

Dear Commissioners:

I am writing to protest the water and wastewater rate increases requested by Utilities of Pennbrooke. Refer to Docket # 090392-WS.

The utility was granted a major rate increase just three years ago. Service has not improved noticeably. There has been no expansion of the community. There is no reason to believe that the cost of providing service has increased beyond the rate of inflation.

What has happened, apparently, is that the parent company, Utilities, Inc. has proposed rates that include huge increases in cost allocations they wish to place on our community. The costs to be allocated are for expenditures at the parent company involving projects and expenses that provide no benefit to us at Pennbrooke Fairways. We should not have to pay for decisions that create costs but provide no benefit.

Consider the following business model:

- Establish a private utility holding company with access to investor money.
- Purchase locally operated public or private utilities with modest rates and low operating expenses.
- Administer operation through a centralized parent company that has much higher operating expenses. Parent company investments and expenses include elaborate systems to produce data that can be used to justify rate increases, but provide no benefit to the customers served by the individual utilities. Provide minimally acceptable quality of service. Include planned investment in plant infrastructure in rate increase requests, but delay actual investment as long as possible.

- Burden the individual utilities with overhead allocations that support the operation of the parent company. Use the allocated costs to pump up justification for rate increases.
- After rates have been increased to the threshold of outrage, sell individual utilities to local investors who will operate them with far lower expenses and achieve excellent profitability because of the increased rates. The selling price will be far above the book value, producing large capital gains for the parent company and giving the new owner a higher investment base with which to justify rates even though the physical infrastructure is essentially unchanged.
- As utilities are sold, allocate parent company overhead across the fewer remaining utilities in the portfolio, and use the increased allocations as justification for additional rate increases on the remaining utilities.

The end result is that the parent company reaps huge profits, both from the operation and from the eventual sale of the individual utilities. The customers are left with extremely high rates and no measurable improvement in service or infrastructure.

The Public Service Commission is charged with the responsibility of assuring that customers of privately held utilities are treated fairly. How are customers protected against the abuses inherent in the above business model?

Sincerely,

Roger Sperling
