Dear Mr. Forrest:

Beginning January 1, 2010 RRI Energy's Indian River Power Station will transition to mothball status. Indian River's term power purchase agreement (PPA) ends December 31, 2009. RRI has exhausted its options to secure a new PPA, including an RFP process open to all Florida utilities, co-operatives and municipal utilities, as well as "one off" discussions with several Florida utilities. Under mothball status, the station will not be available on a daily basis or during periods of short-term or emergency demand, including hurricanes.

RRI will continue to pursue a PPA for Indian River. Maintaining the station in a mothball status is not a permanent solution. RRI believes the Indian River Power Station is economically viable and has a role to play in serving Florida customers in the long-term, and thus is not retiring the station at this time. However, returning from mothball status is not a quick turnaround and will require a PPA with sufficient purchase commitments to justify returning the Indian River station to operation.

The Indian River team has built a strong relationship with the community through its Citizen's Advisory Panel (CAP) and intends to stay involved with the CAP. RRI is committed to the health and well-being of the environment and will continue to comply with all environmental regulations.

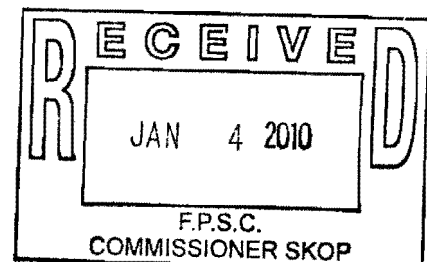

Sincerely,
