75) The FCC's National Broadband Plan (<http://download.broadband.gov/plan/national-broadband-plan.pdf>) recommends that the FCC should begin to shift current high-cost support into two new support programs, the Connect America Fund and the Mobility Fund. It specifically notes that the FCC should phase out the remaining legacy high-cost support for competitive ETCs (see recommendation 8.6 at page 147). If the FCC implements its Plan as proposed, does the reduction in the amount of high-cost support available to competitive ETCs affect T-Mobile's decision to seek ETC status? Does it affect T-Mobile's five-year build out plan?
