Importance: High

Mr. Bloom,

I am developing AT&T Corp.'s response proposal to the RFP referenced above. I have the responsibility of developing and submitting proposals on behalf of AT&T Corp.

Are previously submitted questions and answers still valid for this new RFP? I'm specifically interested in the following question and response:

1. Page 36, Section 8 - Check list of Proposal Content. The contact person responsible for the proposal and the person signing the transmittal letter are two different individuals. The contact person develops and assembles the proposal and is responsible for its contents. May the contact person responsible for the proposal contents initial the checklist items?

Clarification/additional information from AT&T: The RFP states: "As a part of the bidder's proposal, the transmittal letter should be followed by the evaluation checklist in Section E. In the blank beside each item on the checklist, the company contact person who is responsible for the proposal and any subsequent contract and who signs the transmittal letter should initial (not check) each item in the check list which is contained within the proposal. The person initialing the checklist should ensure that each item in the checklist is also contained in its proposal and in the same order as the item appears in the checklist. The bidder should also indicate beside each item in the checklist the page number in its proposal where the item in the checklist can be found." Our senior vice president will be signing the transmittal letter. However, as the AT&T contact person for the RFP proposal responsible for the development of its contents, may I initial off on the checklist items since I'm developing the response and will know the location of all sections/responses?

Answer
Yes.

Sincerely,
Sid Minnick

Mr. Minnick,

We can not, as a general matter, concur that all previously submitted questions and answers remain valid because much of the RFP has changed since the prior issuance. As to the specific question, the contact person responsible for the proposal's contents may initial the checklist items. I hope this provides the needed clarification. Please do not hesitate to contact me with any further questions.

Sincerely,
Kevin Bloom
