Subject: Response to Staff Question on No. 13

Jenny,

The explanation to your question concerning Tampa Electric's response to No. 13 is below.

Currently National Gypsum ("NG") pays for the transportation of gypsum from Tampa Electric's current temporary storage site to NG's facility. The estimated 2012 transportation cost is $2.50 per ton. When the new stack is completed and functional in 2015, that transportation cost will no longer be incurred due to the proximity of the new stack to their product storage area. At that juncture and beyond, the company's analysis assumes the transportation cost savings to inure to the benefit of Tampa Electric and its ratepayers.

Thanks, Howard
