No to the potential increase in energy prices presented by Gulf Power. The economy is far from being "recovered," as seen by the average American's wages. Gulf Power can do what the government should be doing, reducing spending and creating more efficient ways to do business. Energy prices are still down, most especially natural gas, so Gulf Power should be getting a large boost due to this market.

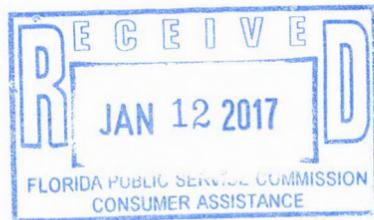

In addition, this increase will only drive more citizens to solar power, whether they can truly afford to make the transition or not.
