Comments : our neighborhood has lots of old trees - mostly live oak, tall pines, and palms. that is what makes it attractive to us. unfortunately, old trees break in storms. and that is what happened - many above ground lines, many, were pulled down by falling trees and branches. perhaps if the trees had been trimmed prior to storms, that would have helped the trees survive, and had less damage to power lines. however, in spite of the hard rain, the temperatures in the 90s, the humidity near 100%, the repair crews - many from long distances in northern states, worked tirelessly, with potential peril to themselves going up in the sparking and wires on fire. their efforts are to be rewarded and commended. we were without power for 6 days, but i know that they were hard at work both day and night to help us. thank you. thank you.
