Here are the responses from Berdell Sr., today. Please advise if you need any additional information.

1. Shows printout of payments via electronic bill pay associated with checking account.
2. Most customers with $2.00 or less credit declined a refund check, but he no longer have those records. Refunds will be sent to all remaining (unless you prefer another resolution). Otherwise, printout of the remaining will be available on 09/25.
3. Customers were credited for the amount of deposit paid. Longer tenured customers paid lower deposits ($10 or $15).

Mr. Knowles,

As discussed yesterday, please follow up with your father and provide clarifying answers to the questions below by next Thursday, September 27th.

1. The checking statement provided earlier this week shows the customer's names and the refund amounts. However, the transactions do not appear to be checks. Are they some type of reverse billing transaction? If not, what type of transactions are they?
2. Please explain why the remaining customers with net credit accounts, shown in the excel file attached, did not receive refunds.
3. Why are there varying amounts of deposits per customer as shown in Column P of the Excel sheet provided earlier this week?

Thank you,

Dylan Andrews
