Dear Commissioner

My husband and I were Florida residents for fourteen years before moving to Nevada for his COPD. But we hate the desert, and last year he decided that he would rather be in Florida, even if it shortens his life.

We are now both retired, living on Social Security, and he takes a plethora of medications for all his problems. Some we buy overseas because local costs are ridiculously prohibitive. I shop at six or seven grocery stores each week to get the best deals, and we almost never eat out.

Every dollar is precious to us to help guarantee our future. The extra dollars you take from us today equate to days you take from our ability to live independently tomorrow.

Thank you,

Bonnie Helmer
