Buyers Plans for Ensuring Continuing Operations

Operations were inherited. There is no buyer in the transfer. No funds are being exchanged.

The new majority owner has been an active participant in the operations for 45+ years. The new majority owner has maintained operations in conjunction with the decedents for the entirety of that timeframe. He is the existing plant operator. He has and will continue to contract all personnel that may be needed to comply with regulatory requirements.

However, with the decedent's passing, the duties provided by those individuals will require a minimum of at least three additional paid personnel. This requires an increase in tariff rates that have not increased since 1994. With the tariff increases operation of the facility will see an increase of service to the users and ensure continued operations.

In addition, the new majority owner has invested over $500,000 in new wells, equipment, and facilities to ensure the continued operation of the facility. With the rate increase, upgrades will continue and will ensure uninterrupted continued operations.
