

The FERC Trio at the Supreme Court: A Treasure Trove of Guidance – What Are States to do with the Booty?

(Time: 1 hour)

Presenter: Ari Peskoe, Esq. – Senior Fellow in Electricity Law, Harvard Law School Environmental Policy Initiative

Eighty years after Congress created a federal energy regulator, the division of authority between state PUCs and FERC remains a source of controversy. In the past year, the Supreme Court has issued three decisions on this issue. This session will review the three cases and examine the jurisdictional divide in light of the Court's holdings and ongoing changes in the industry.
