To Whom It May Concern;

The solar industry must stand on their own two feet, allowing them to become more cost competitive and affordable. In the meantime seniors, such as my husband and myself, along with struggling and vulnerable families shouldn't have to subsidize any developing programs. We have a free enterprise system and any company should be able to sustain itself—not charge for its services and additionally receive taxpayer money on top of that—they either stand on their own or they fail and go away—that's what businesses do.

I do not support any policies that will drive up the costs of every Florida household and business. These include any policies that will create subsidies and mandates for high cost rooftop solar systems.
